PREFACE

This Reader is intended to serve as an introduction to the language and literature of the period concisely called Middle English, that is the centuries between 1100 and 1500. It consists of a Grammatical Introduction based on lectures to students beginning the study of Middle English; selections arranged on the basis of the great dialectal divisions of the language during the period, and accompanied by explanatory Notes; a Glossary which, in addition to the necessary general information of a lexicon, accounts for the forms of words on the basis of dialectal differences in Old and Middle English.

The arrangement of the book on the basis of a single dialect has seemed to be justified by the writer's experience with students during the last ten years. Whatever book has been used, the student has been first introduced to those selections best illustrating the chronological development of a single dialect, as the Midland, and only then to each of the others, with direct relation always to the one already mastered. This has not failed to insure a fairly accurate knowledge of the main features of each division of the language, rather than a confused conception of linguistic forms such as often results from reading selections without regard to dialectal differences. This method, it will be seen, is but following the best practice in reading Old English, or Anglo-Saxon. Indeed, the great advance in the latter study may be dated from the time when a grammar was prepared on the basis of texts representing a single dialect, West Saxon, in its purity, rather than a mixture of dialectal forms such as much Old English literature presents. The plan of Old English study, therefore, as well as experience in teaching, seems to justify some such arrangement as the present. The emphasis of the Midland dialect is owing to its fundamental importance in linguistic and literary history. Since Midland became the language of the most important literature as early as the middle of the fourteenth century, and the foundation of the standard language of modern times, it is that dialect which is most important to the student of both language and literature for at least six centuries. Besides, the apparent continuity of Southern

English in its relation to West Saxon is apparent rather than real in any important sense. So thoroughly is the continuity broken by important phonetic and orthographic changes, wide-spread leveling of inflexions, and considerable differences in syntax, that it affords no decided advantage over Midland, even to the student fresh from Old English study. In any case the change to Midland must be made not later than the middle of the fourteenth century, and the student must then be led back to the beginnings of Midland English, in order fully to understand the language of Chaucer and those who follow him. There seems, therefore, no special advantage in emphasizing the Southern dialect as the descendant of West Saxon, though this may be done even with the present book if desired.

It is believed that a sufficient number of texts have been given, to represent adequately for the beginner each great dialectal division of the language. Kentish has been given least space, and is not separated from the rest of Southern English. This is owing partly to the limitations of an introductory book, partly to the relatively unimportant place of that dialect in both Old and Middle English. The Kentish selections chosen could be easily grouped together, however, and special emphasis of Kentish peculiarities will be found in the Notes upon them. On the other hand, the dialect of London is especially represented in order to illustrate the change from Southern to Midland, so important in relation not only to the language of Chaucer but also to Modern English. Owing, also, to necessary limitations of a single handbook texts from writers of the fifteenth century have not been used. To that century little introduction is necessary apart from such study of the earlier period as this book will permit.

As to the selections themselves, the purpose has been to present texts representing the dialects in their purity, together with as much of interest as is compatible with the first and most important consideration. Comparison with such lists as those by Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Grammatik,' pp. 7–11, will show how fully this has been done. In fact, except for two or three selections from poetical romances, chosen on the score of interest along with a fair degree of purity, all texts may be relied upon as typical of the time and region to which they belong. When possible, texts or selections not found in other books have been used, so as to furnish a greater variety within the reach of student and teacher. In all cases the selections are of sufficient length to afford a fairly comprehensive view of the author or period. Partly because they would not be typical, partly owing to mixture of dialectal forms, some short pieces which might have been included on the score of interest have been omitted.

For each selection, the best manuscript from the standpoint of linguistic purity has always been followed. This is now more easily possible owing to the great number of well-edited texts accessible in printed form, but the manuscripts themselves have been examined when necessary to secure linguistic purity. It has not been thought necessary, however, to burden the pages of an introductory book with readings from less important texts, though references to these sometimes occur in the Notes. Finally, the selections chosen have been reproduced in their integrity in all essential particulars. Yet this does not mean that a mediæval punctuation has been preserved, or an irregular and meaningless use of capitals. To retain these, as has sometimes been done in beginners' books, is but to confuse the student without any measurable advantage. The footnotes give references to abbreviations expanded with regard to the forms of the particular dialect, and to manuscript readings not given in the text. These are usually errors of a careless scribe, or readings in which emendation seemed necessary. Regularization of orthography has not been attempted in general, but in the Midland selections, as those which will usually be first read, some slight assistance of this sort has been offered the beginner. All such forms, however, have been indicated in footnotes, so that they cannot mislead if they do not assist.

The Notes on each selection give such information as is known regarding the manuscript, its date, author, place of composition, and some account of the work from which the extract is made. This is followed by explanations of points in grammar, history, life of the times, and similar subjects when necessary. In all cases, use is made of critical articles in the various scholarly journals, and references are given to assist the student in independent examination when desirable.

The Glossary has been prepared on the basis of the Midland dialect, from which the greater number of selections have been made, but with inclusion in alphabetical order of all words not found in the Midland selections, and cross-references when necessary to the forms of other dialects. In the matter of cross-references, as in arrangement within the alphabet, the needs of the beginner have always been regarded as the most important in an introductory book. Thus the strictest alphabetic arrangement has been chosen in all cases. The ligature æ, though a simple sound rather than a diphthong at any time, has been placed after ad because the beginner will more easily find it there. He may then easily learn its real value, as he must in most other cases in which alphabetic arrangement gives no certain clue.

A word as to the Grammatical Introduction may not be out of place. In the incomplete state of the exhaustive treatment of Middle English grammar proposed by Morsbach, it would be impossible to expect so accurate a summary as may in future be written. The task was simpler, however, than it might seem. It was to present in systematic order the main grammatical facts of the Midland dialect, with such notes as would make possible an intelligent reading of the literature in the remaining divisions of the language. It need not be said that the writer is grateful, as all must be, for the part of Morsbach's grammar which has appeared. He has also made use of most special studies of the period, or of particular works, so far as they were important for the book in hand. But the arrangement of material is based upon the writer's presentation of the subject to students for some years.

The book is intended for those who have had some introduction to the study of Old English. This will be seen from the numerous references to Old English grammar, and to grammatical forms of the older period. It is needless to say that no minutely careful study of Middle English is possible without a fundamental knowledge of the earlier period. On the other hand, a reading knowledge of Middle English literature is easily possible with even a moderate attention to grammatical relationships, and it is hoped that the book may be of use to those who have not begun with the more fundamental study of earlier English.

It is impossible here to give credit to all books and monographs used in the preparation of the Reader. Mention in Introduction or Notes of articles and commentators is intended to imply grateful acknowledgement of indebtedness. Failure to mention others does not imply that the writer has not used them so far as seemed wise. Certainly it has been his purpose to weigh and consider practically all of the literature of the subject up to the time of going to press.

GRAMMATICAL INTRODUCTION

THE LANGUAGE AND THE DIALECTS

1. By Middle English is meant that form of the language used in England between the years 1100 and 1500, that is English of the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth centuries. At the first date, the language shows such considerable differences from Old English (Anglo-Saxon) as to warrant a new name. By the last date, all essential elements of Modern English had come into existence.

2. Middle English is not so homogeneous in form during the whole period as the Old English of literature (mainly West Saxon) on the one side, or as Modern English on the other. It is most homogeneous for the Midland dialect, with which this introduction especially deals, between 1200 and 1400, or normal Middle English as it will be considered. From 1100 to 1200, known as early Middle English, the language shows less of regularity, owing to more rapid changes from Old English, and to the gradual absorption of new elements in the vocabulary, as of Danish and French words. Besides, the scribes of this period were largely influenced by the traditional orthography and grammar of the language, so that literature of this time was largely a copy, with slight variations, of that properly belonging before 1100. From 1400 to 1500, late Middle English, the language was more rapidly approaching its modern form. This introduction, therefore, deals with Middle English proper, with notes on early and late forms, and on the different dialects.

Note 1.—Scholars differ somewhat as to the divisions of the ME. period. Sweet, 'History of English Sounds,' p. 154, makes the periods 1050 to 1150, 1150 to 1450, 1450 to 1500; Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Grammatik,' p. 11, gives the dates 1100 to 1250, 1250 to 1400, 1400 to 1500. As changes in language are always gradual, exclusive divisions are naturally impossible. Besides, chronological divisions must differ somewhat when different dialects are taken as the basis, the language of the South being much more conservative than that of the Midland or the North. For the South, the date 1250 is none too late to close the first period, and early Southern, in notes on the dialects, will include the years 1100 to 1250. For the other districts the date 1200 is late enough for all practical purposes, so that early Midland and early Northern will comprise the twelfth century, 1100 to 1200.

3. Some characteristics of Middle English, as compared with Old English, may be briefly summarized. Middle English phonology shows a reduction to simple sounds of all OE. diphthongs, and the formation of new diphthongs; widely-spread changes in quantity of both long and short vowels; and the loss of the consonant h in OE. initial combinations hl, hn, and hr. The vocabulary shows large additions of foreign words, especially Danish and French. The inflexions show a far-reaching leveling, and later a loss of older inflexional endings. Finally, the syntax is characterized by a marked tendency to a fixed order of words, and by larger use of connective words to perform the functions of the lost inflexions, as prepositions to join nouns and pronouns to other elements, and of verbal auxiliaries to effect unions of verbal elements.

4. Middle English embraces the great dialect divisions, Southern, Midland, and Northern, corresponding in general to Southern, Mercian, and Northumbrian of the OE. period. Northern, however, extended beyond the region of the older Northumbrian to the Lowlands of Scotland on the north, to the north half of Lancashire on the west, and probably to parts of Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire on the south. Southern included, as in Old English, Kent and the region south and west of the Thames, with Gloucestershire and parts of Hereford and Worcestershire. Midland embraces the region between Northern and Southern from Wales to the North Sea. Southern and Midland are again divided into east and west divisions. The eastern division of Southern includes Kent and a small part of the old West Saxon district; the western division all the remainder of Southern as already described. West Midland is bounded by Wales on the west, and the Danelaw on the east. East Midland includes the larger part of the older Mercia, together with East Anglia, Essex, and Middlesex. As the East Midland district contained the city of London, the center of national life from the middle of the twelfth century, the language of this division gradually became most important in the history of English, and formed the basis of the modern language of standard speech and of literature. For this reason, selections from East Midland are placed first in this book, and upon it this introduction is based. Unless otherwise stated, therefore, Middle English, as used in this book, will mean the Midland (mainly East Midland) dialect.

NOTE 1.—West Midland, in its purer examples, differs so slightly from East Midland, and is so scantily represented by texts uninfluenced by Southern on one side or Northern on the other, that it has been but sparingly represented.

NOTE 2.—The language of London, the seat of government after the beginning of Henry the Second's reign (1154), was largely Southern during the earlier part of the ME. period, as shown by the proclamation of Henry III in 1258 (see p. 226). It gradually lost its Southern character however, until, toward the end of the fourteenth century, it was essentially Midland. The importance of London English, in relation to the development of the literary language, has suggested devoting to it several special selections.

5. The differences between the different dialects will be best understood by a study of phonology and of inflexions in the following pages. Some of the more characteristic differences may be given here, especially of Midland with which we have most to do. Midland English, like Northern, is based on Old Anglian, and shows forms due to OAng. phonology and inflexion as compared with West Saxon. See Sievers, 'Angelsächsische Grammatik'[1] (Sievers-Cook, 'Grammar of Old English'), §§ 150–168, and notes under inflexions, as well as notes under § 16 f. of this Introduction. The most marked phonological differences between Old Anglian and West Saxon are the lengthening of OE. a before ld, the retention of Teutonic ē as a close sound (WS. ǣ); the monophthonging of Teutonic au, eu (WS. ēa, ēo) to ē before c, h, g; and the appearance of ē for WS. īe and e for WS. i̊e, the mutation of ēa, ea. Owing to these OAng. peculiarities, Midland English has ǭ for OAng. ā before ld, as for OE. ā in other situations, together with a far greater number of close ē sounds than Southern. Otherwise the clearest idea of Midland English may be gained by a clear separation from it of Northern and Southern dialects. Phonologically, Northern is distinguished by retention of OE. ā (OAng. ā before ld also) as ā; by the guttural quality of k, g sounds; by the use of qu(w) for OE. hw, when beginning a word or syllable; and by s for OE. sc in unstressed words and syllables, as sal 'shall,' Inglis 'English.' Southern is clearly marked by the retention of the quality of OE. y sounds (< ŭ, less commonly lWS. ĕe, ĕ̄y), representing them by u (ui) under the influence of OF. orthography; and by the tendency of OE. f, s, hw, þ, to become v, z, w, voiced þ, initially and when following an unstressed prefix. The last consonantal changes, especially of f, s to v, z, are more fully represented in Kentish than in southwest Southern. Otherwise Kentish is distinguished by the use of ĕ̄ for OE. ĕ̄y, as in Old Kentish.

6. As to inflexion, by the last of the thirteenth century Northern had reduced almost all nouns to a single inflexional form, based on OE. strong masculines, and had completely leveled most inflexions of adjectives and adjective pronouns. The two preterit stems of OE. strong verbs had commonly been reduced to one, usually the singular. The OE. prefix ge, whether of past participles or other parts of verbs, had been wholly lost. Final unstressed e was no longer pronounced after the middle of the fourteenth century. On the other hand, Southern is distinguished by retaining the weak en plurals of nouns, and even by extending that ending in some cases; also by the retention of a larger number of inflexional forms of adjectives and adjective pronouns, and of īe(n), īe, i̊eð in infinitive and present tense of OE. weak verbs of the second class; by the preservation of final unstressed e, in general, through the fourteenth century. In these particulars the Midland dialect agrees more commonly with Northern than with Southern, though southeast Midland agrees with Southern in many cases. The most distinctive mark of inflexion in the three dialects is that of the present indicative of verbs, the inflexional endings of which are as follows:—

Nth.	Sg. 1. (e) or es: 2. es: 3. es.	Pl. 1, 2, 3, es, or e[1].
Ml.	1. e: 2. est: 3. eþ(th):	,, en, later e.
Sth.	1. e, (īe)[2]: 2. (e)st: 3. (e)þ(th)	,, eþ, (īeþ)[2], eth(īeth)[2].

In addition, Northern is also peculiar in the use of the ending and(e) in the present participle, the usual loss of personal endings in the weak preterit, and the reduction of the two preterit stems in strong verbs to one, generally the singular. Midland and Southern agree in general in retaining the personal endings of weak preterits, and both preterit stems of strong verbs, while in the present participle Midland uses the ending end(e), later inge, seldom and(e), and Southern inde, later inge, seldom ende.

NOTE.—For a fuller statement of dialectal differences, see Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Grammatik,' pp. 11–14; Kaluza, 'Historische Grammatik der englischen Sprache,' § 17, 204. Naturally not all works written in Middle English are equally valuable for the study of the language. Especially popular works, which were frequently copied, show a mixture in orthography as well as in dialect, owing to changes by different scribes. The purest texts are of course necessary to an understanding of the language as it actually existed, and from these most of the selections for this book have been made. For fuller lists of pure texts representing the different dialects, see Morsbach, as above, pp. 4–11, and Sweet, 'History of English Sounds,' pp. 154–6.

ORTHOGRAPHY AND PRONUNCIATION

7. Middle English orthography is based on older English spelling, but shows marked influence of French orthography. The union of the two systems produced many apparent irregularities, some of the most important of which are as follows:

Vowels: The OE. digraph æ, when representing a long sound, was displaced by e, as in hwēte 'wheat.' The short OE. æ had already become a, pronounced as in artistic.

au interchanged with a before a nasal in closed syllables of French words, sometimes in those of English origin, as aunswere beside answere.

ie (ye) was used for long close e in late Middle English, as in lief 'dear,' belief, more naturally in French words as mischief.

o took the place of short u in proximity to n, m, u (v), w, to prevent confusion of manuscript forms, sometimes also in other places. Examples are wonede 'dwelt,' icomen 'come,' wode 'wood'; also late ME. bote 'but,' corāge 'courage,' where the use of u might have suggested the long sound.

ou (ow) for ū, sometimes u, as in hōūs 'house,' cōūþe 'known,' cōw̄ for long ū, and sorou(w) 'sorrow' for short u.

v for u, especially in initial position, as vnder 'under.'

y and i are used interchangeably for OE. i or y, long or short. Especially before n, m, u (v), w, y commonly takes the place of i in late Middle English, to prevent confusion, as in the case of o for u above. It also takes the place of i in the diphthongs ai, ei, oi, ui, especially when final in syllable or word.

Consonants: There were even more variations from OE. usage in the case of consonants. In the first place, the OE. forms of f, r, s, w, now seldom preserved in printing OE. texts, gave way to French forms of those letters which are nearer to those used to-day. Besides, c is used in early Middle English for ts, as in blecen for bletsen 'bless'; see also tz, z, for the same. Later c (sc) and ce were used for voiceless s, ss, as alce 'also,' lescūn 'lesson,' fāce.

ch is used for OE. palatal c, as well as for ch in French words; examples, chirche 'church,' chāse. When doubled, cch (chch) are written, as in wicche (wychche) 'witch.'

ct, cht, are sometimes written for ȝt (ht), as in mycht 'might.'

ff for capital f occurs in late Middle English.

g (the French form, our modern g) took the place of the guttural stop, as in gold, and gg (g) the place of OE. cg, as in brigge 'bridge.' g also occurred sometimes for French soft g (=j), as in jugen 'judge.'

ȝ (the English form of g) was used for the palatal spirant g (gh), as in miȝt

'might'; for OE. g (=y) initially, as in ȝē 'ye'; and sometimes in late Middle English for voiced s, as sīdeȝ 'sides,' by confusion with z.

gh (ȝh) for spirant g (h) in later Middle English, as in might, miȝht 'might'; the combination with t was also sometimes written gth, ȝth, as in knigth 'knight.'

gu occurs in late Middle English for the guttural stop of French words, as guard, and sometimes in English words before a palatal vowel, as guest, guilt, to avoid confusion with g (=j), as in gest 'jest.'

i (consonantal) was occasionally used for initial ȝ (=y), as in iaf 'gave'; also for j, as ioy 'joy.'

j initially in French words, as jugen 'judge,' in later Middle English.

k came to be used for c before e, i, and n, sometimes before a, o, u, the former because c before e, i, in French words was s in sound; examples are kēpen 'keep,' king, kāre 'care,' kniȝt 'knight.'

qu for OE. cw, as in quēn 'queen,' as well as for French qu (=kw), as in quīte; it was also occasionally used for hw, as in quilk 'which.'

sch, sh, ss for OE. sc, as in schal, shal, ssal 'shall.'

st for ht sometimes, as nist 'night.'

th displaces þ, which had itself displaced ð almost entirely in early Middle English. But þ occasionally remained to modern times, especially in the forms yē (=thē), yt (=that), where y represents þ with an open top.

tz occasionally for ts, as in bletzen 'bless.'

u (consonantal), later v, for voiced f, as in heuen, heven, OE. heofon 'heaven.'

w was used in later Middle English for u, in ou, especially when final in word or syllable, as cōw̄, earlier cū, cōū 'cow.' w also rarely occurs for v.

y (consonantal) in later Middle English for earlier ȝ (=y); also for þ (th), through confusion with þ with open top, as already noted.

z occasionally for ts, as in vestimenz 'vestments'; rarely also for voiced s, as in wēzele 'weasel,' though common in Kentish.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland the older orthography prevails, as æ beside a and e, and the rune for w, as by Orm. A large number of the peculiarities already noted are also found. The most important orthography of the period is that of Orm, who indicated pronunciation with minute care, especially by the doubling of consonants, the relations of which will be discussed under 'Changes in Quantity.' Minuteness in other respects may be indicated from his use of separate signs for the stop g, as in God, the spirant as in ME. ȝif 'if,' and the MnE. g as in singe.

NOTE 2.—Nth. shows few distinctive peculiarities. Especially to be noted are the indication of length in the vowels a, e, o, by adding i(y) in late Nth. Thus ai (ay), ei (ey), oi (oy) correspond to ME. ā, ē, ō. Besides, cht and ght are used for the palatal spirant, as in mycht 'might'; gh for the palatal spirant in other situations, as high, hight 'promised'; qu regularly for OE. hw, as quā 'who,' quīte 'white.' Sth. shows the following peculiarities: e, in early Sth., for OE. æ; ie (ye) for long close ē, especially in Kentish; oa (ao) for long open ǭ, in early Sth.; u for OE y long and short, sometimes ui (uy) for OE. ȳ; ue, u, oe (o) for OE. ō, less commonly for OE. ē, and occasionally for OE. eo (e); the same usage is also often found in West Midland; sch, sh, and ss were all used for sh, OE. sc.

8. Accents were sometimes used in early Middle English to indicate long quantity, or occasionally for emphasis. In a later time they were also sometimes employed to indicate that a final e or y was not silent, as in plenté. The breve (◡) was also sparingly used to indicate short quantity. The common means of indicating long quantity, however, whether of vowels or consonants, was by doubling the letter, as good, OE. gōd 'good,' wicche 'witch.' The doubling of vowels when long was increasingly common in later Middle English, and accounts for double vowels in many modern words. Cf. also the indication of long vowels by digraphs, as in the table under § 7.

9. Abbreviations are not uncommon in Middle English texts. Some of the most frequent are a macron over a vowel for following n or m, as cō for com, hī for him, þīg for þing; a curl above a letter, sometimes through the stem of it, for er, re, ur; a small undotted i above the line for ri; a roughly written a for ra. Certain common words were often abbreviated, as ȝ, later ꝫ for and; þt, later yt, þ, ð for that (thet); qd for quod 'quoth'; wt for wiþ, with; k̄ for king; b̄ for bishop; s' for sanct, sant, saint; ihc, ihu for Jēsus, Jēsu. As such abbreviations admit of no misinterpretation, they are regularly expanded in all the texts of this book with no further notice than a single reference to the earliest. Even this has not been thought necessary except in case of abbreviations for words, as and, that, king, &c.

10. The following table shows the approximate pronunciation of the vowels and diphthongs of Middle English. The order chosen is that which represents essential relations of the sounds, as of pitch and physiological formation, rather than the merely conventional order of the alphabet. It will thus be possible to see at a glance the sounds which are closely related in fundamental characteristics and may therefore most easily interchange.

THE VOWELS

Short	Long
i, as in h*i*t.	ī, as in mach*i*ne.
e, as in m*e*n.	ē (close), as in th*e*y, but without vanish.
	ę̄ (open), as in th*e*re, c*a*re.
a, as in *a*rtistic.	ā, as in *a*rt, f*a*ther.
o, as in n*o*t (not Italian a).	ǭ (open), as in l*o*rd.
	ō (close), as in n*o*, but without vanish.
u, as in f*u*ll[1].	ū (o͞u), as in f*oo*l.

THE DIPHTHONGS

iu (iw), as i + u, or ew in f*ew*.
ei (ey), as e + i sounded together.
eu (ew), as e + u, later as ew in f*ew*.
ai (ay), as in *ai*sle, more nearly as a of m*a*n + i.
au (aw), as ou in h*ou*se, ow in c*ow*.
oi (oy), as in j*oy*.
ǫu (ow), as o in l*o*rd + u.
ou (ow), as o in n*o* + u.
ui (uy), rare, as u + i.

[1] The question of how far the quality of OF. ü in plus was actually adopted in the speech of the Midland and Northern districts, and how long it retained its purity, cannot be positively settled. It is agreed, however, that toward the end of the period this sound had fallen in with OE. short u or had become iu. From the small number of words with this OF. sound, and from their necessarily gradual adoption, it seems more than doubtful whether the pure French pronunciation ever existed on Midland (Nth.) soil, except as spoken by those who knew French. The exact quality of the vowel is naturally most important in rime, and the lack of significance of it for our purposes may be indicated by the fact that there is in this book but one rime, twice repeated, with this vowel. This is the rime, Jēsu : vertu (97, 17–18; 99, 3–4). For practical purposes, therefore, we shall disregard the French quality of this vowel and consider that from the first it had fallen in with OE. u and the ME. diphthong eu (iu). Cf. Behrens, 'Franz. Sprache in England,' p. 118; Luick, 'Anglia,' xiv. 287.

11. Theoretically there are two sets of the diphthongs ei, eu, ǫu and ou, those with the first elements long or short, according as they developed from long or short vowels or diphthongs in Old English. Indeed, Orm distinguished them in his orthography (see § 71, n.), but otherwise they are not distinguished in written forms and can be separated only by a knowledge of their development from older English. As their later development also shows no separation, the distinction of long and short diphthongs in Middle English may be disregarded for all practical purposes. Besides, the distinction between ǫu and ou, iu and eu, was not long preserved, and that between ei and ai, which was frequently confused in Chaucer's English, as shown by his rimes, was lost in late Middle English. A new ou before ȝt (ht, ght), as in ouȝt (ought), developed during the period, but, as it often interchanges with o and has had a separate development from either of the ou diphthongs (compare English ought, brought with know, grow, bow in rainbow), it need not be pronounced diphthongic. The combination ui was never sufficiently common to merit consideration beside the other diphthongs. By a slight conventionalization for practical purposes, these nine diphthongs may thus be reduced to five at most. Those who wish to make more minute distinctions have but to refer to the historical basis of the sounds.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland English shows some considerable retention of OE. pronunciation, as of OE. orthography. Owing to many peculiarities of orthography, however, most words must be analysed in relation to their earlier and later forms in order to be sure of their pronunciation. See, for example, the passages from the Chronicle and notes thereon.

NOTE 2.—Nth. has no differences in pronunciation not sufficiently indicated by the spelling, as the retention of OE. ā as ā. Sth. has, in addition to the above, the sounds e, from OE. æ, as a in man; ü, from OE. y, with the older mutated sound, as in French plus; and ī̈ (ui, uy), from OE. ȳ, as in French lune.

12. The consonants are in general pronounced like those of Modern English, except as already explained under orthography. In addition, doubled consonants are to be pronounced long, as in sunne 'sun,' which differs from sune 'son'; ch was pronounced tsh, as in church to-day, whether in English or French words; h has the sound of German ch in ich, auch, except initially. For other notes see the Phonology under each consonant.

13. As to word-stress or accent, we must distinguish between Teutonic words, that is those from Old English and Norse, with a few from Low German, and the ever increasing number from French. The former, which make the basis of the speech, were in general accented as in Old English—simple words on the first syllable, compound words on the first syllable if nouns, adjectives, or words derived from them, on the root syllable if verbs, or adverbs formed from prepositional phrases. Even in Old English, however, the prefixes ge, for, usually be, and sometimes un, al, and the borrowed earce 'arch,' were unstressed in nouns and adjectives. In addition, during Middle English times, the prefixes un, al, and usually mis, lost accent in nouns and adjectives, except in almost, also, and alway(s), which have retained prefix stress to the present time. There was also a shifting of accent to the second element of some nouns, as at present in man·kind[1], Nor·thumbrian, a stress which was occasional in Old English, as shown by Norþ·hymbron, 'Battle of Maldon' 266. A similar shifting of stress affected adjectives when in predicate rather than attributive position, as today in thir·teen; compare 'he's thir·teen' with 'a ·thirteen year old boy.' In all such cases the stress can be certainly known only from verse, where the metre will sufficiently indicate the position of the accent.

14. New compounds in Middle English also followed the general law of stress, as in ·dōmesdai, ·sometīme, ·whōsō̄, tō·fō̄re, wiþ·ūten. Sometimes the root, sometimes the prefix syllable was stressed in new compound adverbs, as þērfō̄re, þērof, intō, intil, upon. Secondary stress, which was strong in Old English upon the second elements of compounds, was still so in Middle English. It is especially important for ME. metre, since this strong secondary stress was often elevated to a principal position in the line of verse. This is particularly true of certain syllables, wholly unstressed at present when next the principal accent, as ande (ende) inge, ēre, nesse, schipe, līke (lȳ, līche), hood, dōm, ish, ȳ.

15. Borrowed words of French origin vary in stress during the period, as they at first retain their original stress on the final syllable (except weak e) or tend to assume the Teutonic stress. Thus rı̣̄sōun 'reason' is variously accented, rı̣̄·sōun or ·rı̣̄sōun, in Chaucer's verse. The following general principles may be set down. Old French nouns and adjectives tend to assume the Teutonic stress on the first syllable. Disyllables, or trisyllables with final weak e, when acquiring stress on the first syllable retain a strong secondary stress, corresponding to the original principal accent. Examples are pítèe, prísoun, mánère. Trisyllables, or polysyllables with weak e, which originally had secondary stress on some antecedent syllable, shift principal and secondary stress respectively. This brings principal stress on the first syllable, as in cháritè, émperōur, páradìs, or sometimes on the second as povértè, victórie, religiùn, condiciùn. In the latter cases a second shift of the principal stress may take place, as in víctorìe, póvertè. On the other hand, many nouns and adjectives, especially prefix compounds, never acquired stress on the initial syllable, as acc·ount, aff·air, att·empt, con·diciōun. This may have been due to the fact that there was no secondary stress on the prefix in Old French, more often to the influence of the corresponding verb. Disyllabic OF. verbs, accented on the first syllable, fell in with uncompounded English verbs and suffered no change of stress, as ·preie(n), ·suffre(n). Polysyllabic verbs fell in with native compounds in retaining stress on the last syllable (except weak e(n)), as esc·āpe(n), ass·aile(n), or shifted it to a preceding secondary stress as ·punishe(n), dim·inishe(n), condícìone(n). A further shift to prefix, perhaps under the influence of the corresponding noun, may take place, as in cónfòrte(n). The best guide to stress in Middle English is metre, but this, while usually sufficient for itself, is no certain guide to the pronunciation of every word in prose.

NOTE 1.—Following the principles above, and sometimes no doubt under the influence of analogy, OF. verbs fall in with Sth. verbs ending in īe(n), as carȳe(n), chastīe(n). In Midland and Nth. such OF. verbs in ier usually assume the common infinitive ending e(n).

PHONOLOGY[1]

THE VOWELS OF STRESSED SYLLABLES

SHORT VOWELS

16. Middle English a, pronounced like Italian short a or unstressed a in artistic, is one of the commonest sounds, and occurs in English, Norse or Danish, and French words. It springs from:

1. OE. a, o before a nasal except when lengthened, and ā when shortened: OE. a as in asschen 'ashes'; OE. o as in man, began (bigan); OE. ā as in asken (axen) 'ask,' alderman.
2. OE. æ (Merc. e=æ), and ǣ from Teut. ai by i-mutation, sometimes ǣ (Merc. ē, Gothic ē) by shortening: OE. æ as in cat (kat); OE. ǣ from Teut. ai as in agasten 'terrify,' ladder, fat; OE. ǣ (Merc. ē) as in bladdre 'bladder,' naddre (addre) 'adder,' dradde 'dreaded' (cf. § 33).
3. OE. ea (Merc. sometimes a) before r + consonant, and ēa by shortening: OE. ea as in harpe 'harp,' sharpe 'sharp'; OE. ēa as in chapman 'merchant,' chaffare 'merchandise.'
4. ON. a, o by u-mutation of a (ODan. a), and ā when shortened:

[1] In the following descriptive chapters on Middle English sounds the borrowed elements are treated with the native, as their considerable importance warrants. Attention is first given to the Teutonic element, Old English and Old Norse or Danish, and then to that derived from Old French. Differences between Mercian, on which the Midland dialect is based, and West Saxon are also noted. The notes are intended to cover, in order, first, early Midland English, next the principal variations of the dialects.

ON. a as in carl, want, stac 'stack'; ON. ǫ as in adlen 'gain', bark (of a tree); ON. ā as in laten 'let.'

5. OF. a as in barge, Anne, cas (later cāse) 'case.'

17. The principal sources of ME. a will be seen to be OE. a, æ, ea, and ǫ from a before a nasal, which all regularly become a in Midland English, as well as long OE. ā, ǣ, ēa when shortened. A large number of OF. words also belong here. Besides a from regular OE. æ, ME. a sometimes springs from OE. æ instead of ę by i-mutation of a (cf. Sievers, Gr. § 89). This usually appears in ME. in closed syllables before nasals, ch (cch), and r, as in wanden beside wenden 'wend,' panis (pans) beside penis (pens) 'pence,' lacche 'seize,' macche (less commonly mecche) 'match,' barlȳ (barlic, seldom berlic) 'barley.' As indicated, in most cases of this sort forms with e also appear; cf. § 19. OE. ǫ from a before a nasal, which was regularly lengthened before certain consonant groups (see § 72), sometimes appears as a by earlier shortening, especially in certain words as land, hand, standen 'stand,' gangen 'go,' hangen 'hang,' answeren 'answer.' West Midland, however, sometimes has o for a before nasals not causing lengthening, as in mon 'man,' but this was not common enough to be a distinguishing feature of the dialect. For OF. a before a nasal + cons., see § 56.

18. Certain forms with a corresponding to OM. ē (Goth. ē, WS. ǣ) require special mention. They occur before r in unstressed words, as þar beside þēr (Sth. þę̄r), whar beside whēr (Sth. whę̄r), waren beside wēren (Sth. wę̄ren) 'were.' Corresponding forms with long open o (ǭ), on the other hand, must have developed from eME. forms with ā existing beside the shortening here supposed. For these see § 43. Words with ME. a sometimes rime with e words, as if pronounced with e, at least dialectally. There would thus seem to be double forms of such words, as was–wes, fast–fest, gadren–gedren 'gather.' Rarely also a becomes o, as before v in govel 'tribute,' hove 'have,' and in quoþ (quod) 'quoth,' where it is probably due to lack of stress. Individual words which also show interchange of a–e are masse–messe (Nth. always messe by influence of OF. messe) 'mass,' gadeling–gedeling less commonly, tōgadre–tōgedre (tōgidre). The word Chester (-chester) < OE. ceaster regularly has e in Ml., though a in Nth. Doncaster, &c. Forms with e are also common from shortening of OE. ǣ and Merc. ē, ǣ, as under § 19, 2 below.

Note 1.—In early Midland this sound was still represented by the older Mercian æ or e, as in hæfden (hefden) 'had,' wæs (wes) 'was,' æfter (efter) 'after.' The digraph ea is not found in the 'Chronicle' after 1132, but the Mercian variant eo once appears in weorþ for wearþ. Even before 1132, its interchange with OE. æ probably indicates that it was not diphthongic much after 1100. Orm never uses ea, and only exceptionally æ for short a.

Note 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland in almost every particular. Before a nasal, however, it has a for OE. ǫ (ā before consonant groups causing lengthening), except in monȳ beside manȳ 'many,' which is characteristically Northern. Sth., in the earliest period, generally shows a for OE. a, e (æ, ea) for OE. æ, ea, as for ǣ, ēa when shortened. Later all become a, as in Midland, except that Kentish, which had e for WS. æ in Old English, retains it regularly until late ME. times. For OE. ea Kentish uses, in the early period, ia (ya, yea). Minor variations are not noted here. For OE. ǫ from a before a nasal (except before consonant groups causing lengthening) Sth. has a in western Sth. and in Kentish, but often o in middle and southeast Sth. Before consonant groups causing lengthening, ā or ǭ are found in Kentish and southeast Sth. The London dialect has a with great regularity except before consonant groups causing lengthening, and even here in later ME. by shortening, as commonly in land, England, hand, &c.

19. Middle English e, an open sound like that in men, has the following origin.

1. OE. e, ę by i-mutation of a, eo, and ē, ēo by shortening: OE. e as in west, helpen 'help'; OE. e as in men, bet, tellen 'tell'; OE. eo as in self, heven 'heaven'; OE. ē as in mette (OE. mētte) 'met'; OE. ēo as in fell (OE. fēol) 'fell,' derre (OE. dēorra) 'dearer.'
2. OM. e (WS. ie by i-mutation of eo), e after a palatal consonant (WS. ie, later y), and when shortened ē, ǣ (Gothic ē, WS. ǣ, ēa after a palatal cons.), ē (WS. īe by i-mutation of ēa), and sometimes ǣ by i-mutation of Teut. aï: OM. e as in wercen (WS. wiercan) 'work'; OM. e as in ȝelp (WS. ȝielp)

'yelp,' ȝeten (WS. ȝietan) 'get'; OM. ē, ǣ as in slepte (WS. slǣpte) 'slept,' shephērde (WS. scīephierde) 'shepherd'; OM. ē as in hersum (WS. hīersum) 'obedient'; OE. ǣ as in evere 'ever,' everȳ (everīch, everilk), enȳ beside anȳ, clensen 'cleanse.'

3. ON. e, or ę by i-mutation of a: ON. e as in þwert 'thwart'; ON. ę as in egg, eggen 'egg or urge on,' benk 'bench.'

4. OF. e as in dette 'debt,' serven 'serve,' defenden 'defend.'

20. The principal sources of ME. e, in native words, are OE. e, ę, eo when remaining short, and OE. (Merc.) ē, ēo when shortened. Sporadically, e is found for OE. i and y, the former in open syllables and in connexion with labials, nasals, and liquids; the latter before liquids and nasals. Examples of the first are smeten 'smitten,' resen 'risen,' clemben 'climb,' fenger 'finger,' wekked 'wicked.' Such occasional rimes as helle–stille, wille–telle, denne–wiþinne, also point to the same fact. Sometimes this may be accounted for by confusion of forms, as in the verbs springen and sprengen 'cause to spring,' swingen and swengen 'cause to swing,' where the weak verbs with e have influenced the corresponding strong verbs with i. So perhaps welcome for wilcome by influence of wel; þredde for þridde 'third' by influence of þree 'three.' Unstressed position in the sentence may also account for some such e's, as in heder for hider 'hither,' here for hire 'her.' Examples of e for i from OE. y are ferst, cherche, dent, stent, beside first, chirche, dint, stint. In a few OF. words, e springs from AN. ē (< OF. ue) by shortening in originally unstressed syllables, as keveren beside coveren 'cover,' keverchēf (kerchēf) 'kerchief.'

21. ME. e sometimes becomes i before dentals and palatals. Some cases which have been preserved to Modern English are ridden 'rid,' rideles 'riddle' with loss of final s, hinge, lingren 'linger,' singen 'singe,' grinnen 'grin,' minglen 'mingle.' In þinken 'think' (OE. þęncean), found in Midland and Nth. from the thirteenth century, there is no doubt confusion with þinken 'seem' (OE. þyncean). Sth. keeps benchen (þenken), and Chaucer separates the two except in preterit and past participle. Beside e sometimes appear forms with o or u from OE. eo after w, as in sword, worþ, worþī 'worthy,' worþen (wurþen) 'become.' So swolwen (swolhen) is from a form with OE. e after w. This change had no doubt begun in Old English as similar forms appear in that period; cf. § 26. For e to i in unstressed prefixes cf. § 83.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland shows æ for e, less commonly æo for eo, as in æten, bigæten for eten, bigeten, and æorl for eorl, in the 'Chronicle.' The 'Chronicle' and Orm also have eo for OE. eo sometimes, as in weorces 'works,' heom 'them,' weorþenn 'worth, be,' heoffne 'heaven.'

NOTE 2.—The dialects in general agree with Midland. Early Sth. usually preserves eo, though sometimes it becomes o or e, and occasionally u as in dupe 'deep,' mulk 'milk.' Sth. also sometimes has e or WS. ie (later y) from e by influence of a preceding palatal consonant. In all cases Sth. e must be separated from Sth. e = æ, derived from OE. æ, ea, as already noted in § 18, n. 2. Kentish has ie (ye) for OE. eo, as in ierþe 'earth,' lyerne 'learn.' Kentish also retains OE e for y, so characteristic of this dialect in OE. times, thus increasing greatly the number of e's in literature of this district.

22. Middle English i, with a sound like that of i in hit, is common in words from all sources. Its frequency is increased for Midland English because it corresponds not only to i in English and Danish words, but to older y by i-mutation of u, the latter having become i in sound. On this account also the vowel is represented by i or y at the pleasure of the writer. ME. i springs from:

1. OE. i, y by i-mutation of u, and when shortened ī and ȳ: OE. i as in smiþ 'smith,' his, writen 'written'; OE. y as in king (kyng), synne 'sin,' kissen 'kiss'; OE. ī as in fiftēne 'fifteen,' wisdōm; OE. ȳ as in wisshen 'wish,' hydde 'hid.'
2. OM. i (WS. io), and e (WS. eo) before ht: OM. i as in rihten 'make straight,' brihte 'bright,' wiht 'wight,' milk; OE., OM. e as in riht 'right,' kniht 'knight,' liht 'light, easy,' fliht 'flight.'
3. ON. i, y by i-mutation of u, and ī or ȳ when shortened: ON.

i as in skill, skin, twinne 'twin'; ON. y as in flitten 'flit,' biggen 'build,' kindlen 'kindle'; ON. ȳ as in imis 'variously.'

4. OF. i as in simple, prince, delivren 'deliver,' citē 'city.'

23. For e instead of i, from OE. i, y, see § 20. For forms with u, beside those with y by i-mutation of u, see § 28. One word, OE. wīfman, shows various forms, as wimman, wimmen by shortening, and by later change of i to u (written o) under the influence of preceding w, womman, wommen. Similar influence of w is seen in woll(e) 'will.' By Caxton's time, however, the forms of Modern English, with the sound of u in singular, i in plural, seem to have become established. OF. ei, ui, sometimes appear as i in unstressed syllables, as in malisūn, werriōr for original ei, and angwys 'anguish' for ui (§ 70).

NOTE 1.—The use of i for OE. y is found as early as 1121 in the 'Chronicle' and regularly later and in Orm. There is also early use of y for OE. i, showing conclusively the like character of the two sounds. Later, y is more generally used for OE. ī, ȳ.

NOTE 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland. Sth. shows ü, as in French plus, for OE. y by i-mutation of u, as already noted, § 5. Examples are sünne 'sin,' fülde 'filled,' kün 'kin,' cüsse 'kiss.' Sth. ü also appears for a late WS. y from i, ie, as in wülle, wüten, Ml. wille, witen, ʒüt for Ml. ʒēt (ʒet). Kentish, on the other hand, which had levelled OE. y by i-mutation of u under e, still preserves the latter, except before palatal ht, ng, and in king. This accounts for such forms as melle 'mill,' cherche 'church,' lest 'lust,' dent 'dint,' in that dialect. The dialect of London probably agreed with Sth. in the earliest time, but by the last quarter of the fourteenth century usually has i for OE. y, though sometimes an e which is probably Kentish in origin. Chaucer frequently uses this Kentish e beside Midland i in rimes, though mostly in closed syllables.

24. Middle English o, with the sound of o (not Italian a) in Modern English, occurs in words from all sources. It corresponds to:

1. OE. o, or ō when shortened: OE. o as in folk, bodiȝ (bodȳ) 'body,' cok 'cock,' on; OE. ō as in softe 'soft,' oþer 'other.'

2. ON. o, ō when shortened: ON. o as in lot 'bow of the head,' loft 'upper room,' odde 'odd'; ON. ō as in þoh 'though.'

3. OF. o as in apostle, potāge, offis 'office,' hostāge.

25. Short o occasionally interchanges with e by i-mutation of o, as in Wodnesday beside Wednesday, wolken beside welkin, sorwen beside serwen 'to sorrow.' It also becomes u sometimes, by influence of preceding b, m, or w, as in burd for bord 'board,' wurd for word, murþ 'death' (cf. MnE. murder, OE. morðor). Probably an OE. interchange of o and u accounts for plucken 'pluck,' OE. pluccian: knocken 'knock,' OE. cnocian, cnucian; prostel beside þrustel 'throstle,' OE. þrostle. For o beside e from OE. eo (e) see § 21.

Note.—In general early Midland and the dialects all agree. Early Sth., as in Layamon, occasionally uses eo for OE. o as in heors 'horse,' beord (bēord) 'board,' and individual writings, as those of Shoreham, show ou for o, as in sourwe 'sorrow.'

26. Middle English u, with the sound of u in full, is common in English, Danish, and French words. Its sources are:

1. OE. u, and ū when shortened: OE. u as in under, sunne 'sun,' drunken 'drunk'; OE. ū as in us, buxom, buten, (bute, but) 'but,' OE. beūtan, būtan.
2. OM. u (WS. eo by preceding palatal g (i) and sometimes sc), as in zung 'young,' schunen 'shun.'
3. ON. u, and ū when shortened: ON. u as in bule 'bull,' uglī 'ugly'; ON. ū as in scum, busken 'prepare.'
4. OF. u, or ü in closed syllables: OF. u as in purse, suffren 'suffer'; OF. ü as in juggen 'judge,' humble.

27. Middle English u is often written o (seldom ou), especially in proximity to n, m, u (v), w, as already noted under orthography, § 7. This use of o for u accounts for such forms as wolf, woll 'wool,' wode 'wood,' son, lon, come, love, and many others which have remained to Modern English. Beside dure 'door,' as above, there is also a ME. dȳre (dǭre) with lengthened vowel, probably from OE. dor, or some such form with o instead of u. OE. eo becomes u after w sometimes, as in wurþen 'become,' wurþ, wurþī 'worthy'; cf. § 21. So OF. ui becomes u occasionally as in frut 'fruit,' frutestēre 'fruiterer,' and in unstressed syllables u (beside i § 23) as in biscut (cf. §§ 61, 70).

28. Forms with u beside those with i, from OE. y, probably depend upon OE. forms with u beside others with mutation. Examples are cluster, OE. cluster, clyster; brustel beside bristil, bluscen 'blush,' clucchen 'clutch,' dull (doll) beside dill 'dull,' rusche beside rische (rasche) 'rush,' mukel (Sth. muchel) beside mikel, shuttel beside schitel 'shuttle.' In other cases analogy accounts for a form with u instead of y, as hungren influenced by the noun hunger, sundrȳ by the adjective sunder.

NOTE.—Early Midland and the dialects agree in general. From this u (OE., ON., OF. u) is to be separated of course Sth. ü from OE. y, as already explained under ME. i, § 23, n. 2. The writing of o for u, as above, is not found in early Midland, as the 'Chronicle' and Orm, and not until the last half of the twelfth century even in Sth. From the middle of the thirteenth century it becomes common.

LONG VOWELS

29. Middle English ā, with the sound of a in art, is limited in its occurrence, so far as Teutonic words are concerned, by the change of OE., ON. ā to ǭ, § 41. Long ā results from the lengthening of OE. and ON. short a under various conditions, and frequently appears in French words under similar circumstances. Its sources are as follows:

1. OE. a when lengthened, as in dāle, gāte, blāde, nāme, gāmen 'game, sport.'
2. ON. a when lengthened, as in tāken 'take,' dāsen 'daze.'
3. OF. a when lengthened, as in fāce, grāce, plāce, āge, pāle 'pale.'

30 The lengthening of the older short a occurs in open syllables (cf. § 73), or in OE. monosyllables with final consonant, most of which assumed in ME. an inorganic, final e. By reason of the latter change the unstressed syllable became open, and the a vowel subject to the lengthening which affected syllables originally open. OE. a before certain consonant combinations which caused lengthening in late OE., when remaining long, had of course become ME. ǭ, as in the case of original ā.

NOTE.—The dialects agree. In Nth. this newly lengthened ā fell in with ā from OE. ā (§ 43, n. 2). In lNth. ā is often written ai (ay), as noted under § 7, n. 2, and still later (the early fifteenth century) ai from whatever source sometimes shows monophthonging to ā, as travāle from travaile.

31. Middle English ē, written e, or later especially ee, represents two different sounds, which are of different origin and are, in general, kept distinct throughout the period. The first of these, called open ē and often designated at the present time by a tag below (ɛ̄), had the sound of the vowel in there, care, bear. The second, called close ē, had the sound of ē in they, or of the first element when they is pronounced with a diphthong. The dialectal differences, which are especially important in the case of these two ē's, will be noted, as usual, under each of them. There are, in addition, occasional interchanges of sounds naturally so much alike, as shown by rimes, but these are probably due to dialectal confusion or the same poetic licence that is sometimes found in Modern English.

32. Middle English open ē (ɛ̄) develops from:

1. OE. ǣ (Merc. ē sometimes) by i-mutation of Teut. ai, ēa (except WS. ēa before c, h, g), and when lengthened e and ɛ by i-mutation of a, or ea: OE. ǣ as in dɛ̄l 'deal,' hɛ̄len 'heal,' hɛ̄te 'heat'; OE. ēa as in dɛ̄d 'dead,' dɛ̄f 'deaf,' lɛ̄d 'lead,' bɛ̄m 'beam,' hɛ̄ved 'head'; OE. e as in brɛ̄ken 'break,' bɛ̄ren 'bear'; OE. ɛ as in stɛ̄de 'stead,' swɛ̄ren 'swear'; OE. ea as in ɛ̄rd 'dwelling-place,' ɛ̄rn 'eagle.'
2. ON. ǣ by i-mutation of Teut. ai, and when lengthened e, or ɛ by i-mutation of a: ON. ǣ as in gɛ̄ten 'guard,' hɛ̄þen 'mock'; ON. ɛ as in nɛ̄ve 'fist,' skɛ̄ren (beside skerren) 'scare.'

3. OF. ę̄ before l, AN. ę̄ by monophthonging of ai, ei, and OF. e when lengthened: OF. ę̄l as in naturę̄l 'natural,' condicionę̄l 'conditional'; AN. ę̄ from ai as in trę̄sōn 'treason,' rę̄sōn 'reason,' pę̄s 'peace,' ę̄se 'ease,' fę̄tīs 'shapely'; AN. ę̄ from ei as in dę̄s 'dais,' encrę̄s 'increase'; OF. e as in bę̄ste 'beast,' fę̄ste 'feast.'

33. The principal sources of Ml. ę̄ are OE. e of whatever origin when lengthened in open syllables (§ 73), OM. ǣ, ēa though far less common than WS. ǣ, ēa, and OF. or AN. ę̄. In a few cases OM. close ē seems to have become open ę̄, though the exact circumstances under which this occurs are not easily made out, owing to the uncertainty as to certain rimes in long e. Thus, while keeping apart ME. open and close ē as a rule, a poet may have allowed himself occasional impure rimes, as in every period of English. Less careful poets no doubt did this more frequently, so that it is impossible to formulate a principle except from a considerable number of cases in more than a single poet. Besides the rimes there is also Orm's significant use of æ (= ę̄) for certain words with OM. ē. From this and from rimes it seems likely that OM. ē gave ę̄ after w, l, and r, as in wę̄t 'wet,' wę̄pen (later wepen) 'weapon,' lę̄chen 'cure,' rę̄den 'read, advise.' But not all such words, especially not all in which Orm uses æ, can have had open ę̄ in all cases in ME. The practice of this book is to rest the probable quality on the usual development of the OM. sounds, especially when confirmed by later English, though recognizing the possible variation in well established cases. Thus OE. ǣ from Teut. ai seems to give ME. ē (beside ę̄) when final, as in sē 'sea.' Similarly the AN. ę̄ from ai, ei before r becomes ME. ē (beside ę̄), as in pōēr 'power,' dubonēre 'debonair,' gramēr 'grammar.'

34. The AN. monophthonging of ai, ei took place especially before s, t, d, v, s + cons., a palatal + liquid cons., and sometimes before r. Even under such conditions diphthongic forms sometimes appear, as aise 'ease' beside ę̄se.

Note 1.—In early Midland the digraph æ was still used for open ę̄, as in the 'Chronicle' sēe 'sea,' ǣr 'ere,' ǣvre 'ever.' Orm also regularly uses the digraph for open ę̄, as in sę̄ 'sea,' hǣte 'heat,' from OE. ǣ, and in dǣf 'deaf,' flǣt 'floated,' &c., from OE. ēa, as well as for OM. ē sometimes; see § 33.

NOTE 2.—All the dialects agree, in general, with the usage above indicated. Early Sth. sometimes has ēa, probably a digraph rather than a diphthong, and ǣ beside ę̄. Sth., however, except Kentish and early Sth., has a much larger proportion of open ę̄ sounds from WS. ǣ, ēa. Thus Sth. open ę̄ springs from the following sources, in addition to the above:

WS. ǣ, Gothic ē, as in bę̄ren 'bore.'

WS. ēa by influence of preceding palatal cons., as in gę̄r 'year,' gę̄fen 'gave,' pl.

WS. ēa before palatal c, g, h, as in hę̄h 'high,' ę̄ge 'eye.'

WS. ea (ēa) before l + cons., as in hę̄lde(n), Ml. hōlde(n)<OM. hāldan.

Kentish and eastern Sth., together with a small district in the extreme north of middle Sth., agree with Midland and Nth. in the main. On the other hand, Kentish has ēa, ȳa, yēa for OE. ēa, the first element being a close ē, sometimes even ī. Kentish also has sometimes īe beside ē for WS. īo, ēo.

35. Middle English close ē is the development of:

1. OE. ē, ē by i-mutation of ō, ēo, and e or eo when lengthened in late Old English: OE. ē as in hēr 'here'; OE. ē from ō as in grēne 'green,' sēken 'seek,' bēche 'beech,' fēt 'feet'; OE. ēo as in bē 'bee,' sēn 'see,' trē 'tree,' dēre 'dear'; OE. e, eo as in fēld 'field,' schēld 'shield,' ēnde 'end,' ērþe 'earth.'

2. OM. ē cognate with various WS. sounds: OM. ē (WS. ǣ, Goth. ē) as in bēre 'bier,' ēven 'evening,' bę̄ren pt. pl. of bę̄ren 'bear,' ʒę̄r (gēr) 'year,' ʒēven 'gave'; OM. ē (WS. ēo, ēa before OE. c, g, h) as in flēʒen-flēh 'fly-flew,' sēc 'sick,' hēh 'high,' nēh 'nigh'; OM. ē (WS. īe by i-mutation of ēa), ēo, as in hēren 'hear, obey,' nēd 'need,' stēren 'steer'; OM. ē from earlier e (WS. ie, late īe by i-mutation of ēa) as in ēlde 'eld,' ērve 'heritage,' dērne 'secret.'

3. ON. ē, ǿ by i-mutation of ō, and iu (io): ON. ē as in sēr 'several'; ON. ǿ as in slēh 'sly,' fēre 'power,' ēpen 'cry, call' (cogn. OE. wēpan 'weep'); ON. iu (io) as in mēk 'meek,' skēt 'soon.'

4. OF. ē, and AN. ē by monophthonging of OF. ie, ue, sometimes of ai, ei (ieu): OF. ē as in degrē 'degree,' compēr 'compeer,' procēden 'proceed'; AN. ē from ie as in grēf 'grief,' pēce 'piece,' manēre 'manner,' achēven 'achieve'; AN. ē from ue as in bēf 'beef,' pēple 'people,' mēven 'move'; AN. ē from ai, ei (ieu) sometimes, as in gramēr 'grammar,' pōēr 'power,' pardē < OF. par dieu.

36. While the sources of close ē seem so various, they resolve themselves into a much smaller number if we consider the characteristic phonology of the Mercian dialect, in which this sound was especially frequent as compared with West Saxon. In fact the sources of far the larger number of words may be summed up as OM. ē, ēo, ē in late lengthenings, corresponding, however, to various WS. vowels, as ē, ēo, ēa, ēa, early and late īe (ȳ). To these must be added the important OF. sources, from which come many words, and the less important ON. contingent.

37. The variation between ME. open and close ē has been noted in § 33. A few words with OE. ēo show ō instead of ē in Middle English by reason of a shifting of stress and absorption of the first element of the diphthong. Examples are OE. hēo 'she' which gives ȝho (ȝō, hō) beside hē (Sth. hē, hā), and OE. sēo 'she' which gives scho (sho) beside schē (shē). Similarly ȝōde (lNth. ȝudē) from OE. gēode, and for fower, frowen see § 60. For words with ei from AN. ē < ie see § 53. To the AN. monophthongs of ai, ei may be added verrē (OF. verai), and monē (OF. moneie), beside the more common forms. Monophthonging in originally stressed syllables which have lost the stress are exemplified by sudēn (suden) 'sudden.' Besides forms with ē from AN. ē (OF. ue) occur others with ō (cf. § 45). In unstressed syllables this ē becomes short, as in coverēn, beside covren, keverchef, 'kerchief.' Certain Romance words with ē (e) beside (eie) forms (cf. § 53) depend upon Central French forms with ē (e) beside AN. eie. Examples which belong here are cuntrē (contrē) 'country,' jornē 'journey.' In the case of ME. dēȝen (deien) 'die' the word may be from an OE. source, rather than from the ON. word with ǫ reduced to ē (cf. § 52). For ME. e for AN. ē (< OF. ue), by shortening in originally unstressed syllables, cf. § 20.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland ēo is occasionally used for OE. (Merc.) ē or ēo, as in 'Chronicle' forðfēorde (OE. fērde) 'went forth, died,' dēovles (OE. dēofles) 'devils,' prēostes (OE. prēostes) 'priests.' Orm also sometimes uses ēo for OE. ēo, as in prēost 'priest.' It is probable, however, that this was rather traditional spelling in his time than the representation of a real diphthong.

NOTE 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland except for ei (ey) written for ē (§ 7, n. 2). Sth. differs in a number of important respects owing to a different development from older West Saxon and Kentish. Middle and western Sth., the old West Saxon district, shows the following peculiarities:

e [ę̄], seldom ü, rarely i, for WS. ie by i-mutation of e or a before l or r + cons., or of ea, eo not before a palatal cons.

ĕ or ĭ, seldom ŭ, for WS. ĕe after a palatal cons.

Kentish and eastern Sth. differ from Midland and Sth. in having:

ē from WS. ȳ, for WS. ǣ of whatever origin, and for WS. ĕe after a palatal cons.

ēa, ȳa, yēa (close e with obscure second element), for WS. ea before l or r + cons.

ĕe beside ē for WS. ĕo, ĕo by u or o-mutation.

The Katherine group, representing the northern part of middle Sth., agrees with Midland in having ē for WS. ǣ = Gothic ē, but e, ea for Ml. a before r in unstressed words; also ē for WS. īe by i-mutation of ēa and ēo. In addition it has:

ā for WS. ea before l + cons.

ēa, ē̆, ē (open or close ē) for WS. ie by i-mutation of ea before l or r + cons.

i for WS. ie by i-mutation of the eo breaking.

38. Middle English ī, with the sound of i in machine, corresponds in Teutonic words to older ī and to ȳ by i-mutation of ū. In addition to these two principal sources it occurs in many words of French origin. Like short i, as already noted (§ 22), it is written i or y, with a growing tendency toward y in late Middle English. In detail the origin of ME. ī is as follows:

1. OE. ī, ȳ by i-mutation of ū, and i or y when lengthened; OE. ī as in wīs 'wise,' līf 'life,' fīve 'five,' wrītten 'write'; OE. ȳ as in brīd 'bride,' hȳde 'hide,' fȳr 'fire'; OE. i as in wīld, chīld, fīnden 'find'; OE. ȳ as in kīnd 'kind.'

2. ON. ī, ȳ by i-mutation of ū; ON. ī as in tīþende 'tidings,' þrīven 'thrive'; ON. ȳ as in sīte (sīt) 'pain,' -bī in Grimesbī 'town.'

3. OF. i when lengthened, as in crīen 'cry,' prīme 'prime,' delīt 'delight,' bīble 'Bible.'

39. There seems to be no evidence of lengthening of ON. i, y in Middle English, such words as skinden 'hasten,' kindlen 'kindle' preserving their short vowels. This would perhaps indicate that such words entered the language after the OE. lengthening before nd had taken place, though the examples are too few to make this certain. In a few cases OF. ei becomes ī in a syllable which loses principal stress, as werrīen 'make war,' falling in with OF. verbs in ier (ME. īen sometimes) as carrȳen 'carry.'

Note 1.—Early Midland shows no special peculiarities.

Note 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland. Sth., which preserves the older mutated sound of ȳ as already mentioned (§ 11, n. 2), used for it ī̈ (īi) under the influence of French orthography. Examples are hī̈ren (hīiren) 'hire,' fī̈r (fīiyr) 'fire,' kī̈þen 'make known.' With this ī̈ from OE. ȳ in Sth. also fell in, in some cases, a French u, with the sound of u in French lune to-day. This was easily possible owing to the similarity of the two sounds in Sth., but in Midland, which had not preserved the older mutated sound of OE. ȳ, this French ü finally associated itself with the diphthong eu (iu); see § 60. As already noted under close ē (§ 37, n. 2), Kentish has ē for OE. ȳ in accordance with older Kentish.

40. Middle English ō, like ME. ē, represents two different sounds of different origin and development. The first, open ō designated by ǭ, had the sound of o in lord. The second, close ō, was pronounced like o in no, or like the first element when no is pronounced with a diphthong. These two sounds are usually kept apart in Middle English rimes, and in general have maintained a separate development to Modern English.

41. Middle English open ō (ǭ) springs from:

1. OE. ā, and when lengthened ǫ from a before a nasal or o in open syllables: OE. ā as in tǭ 'toe,' ǭþ 'oath,' stǭn 'stone'; OE. ǫ as in lǭng 'long,' strǭng, sǭng; OF. o in hǭse 'hose, trousers,' pǭke 'bag,' þrǭte 'throat,' befǭre (bifǭre) 'before.'

2. OM. ā (WS. ea, ēa) from a before ld, as in ǭld, bǭld, cǭld.
3. ON. ā, and when lengthened ǫ from a + nasal or o in open syllables: ON. ā as in lǭte 'countenance,' brǭþe 'violent,' rǭþen 'counsel, explain'; ON. a as in wrǭng, wǭnd 'rod'; ON. o as in bǭle 'stem of a tree,' scǭre 'score.'
4. OF. o when lengthened in open syllables, and AN. o + rie (OF. oire): OF. o as in rǭse, nǭble, restǭren 'restore'; AN. orie as in glǭrīe (glǭrȳ), stǭrīe (stǭrȳ), memǭrīe 'memory.'

42. The principal sources of ME. open ǭ are OE. ā, and when lengthened in open syllables OE., OF. o. Special note should be taken of the small group of words with OM. ā from a before ld, since WS. forms could not possibly account for the MnE. words old, bold, &c. In the few possible cases OE. ā, preceded by a cons. + w, early developed ō (< ǭ) under the influence of w, as in twō 'two,' swōpen 'swoop.' Preceding w alone did not affect the change (cf. Hempl, 'Jour. of Germ. Phil.' I, 14). In the case of sǭ which seems to have open ǭ more commonly in Midland, we may perhaps assume a late OE. sā with loss of w.

43. In § 18 attention was called to certain words with ME. ǭ, eME. ā (see the strong preterits like bǭren 'bore'), where we expect Ml. ē (OM. ē, WS. ǣ). These may possibly represent an OM. ā beside ē or from ē, may be due to analogy or to Norse influence, such forms having ā in Old Norse. Norse influence certainly seems probable, though see the discussion in Björkman, 'Scand. Loan-words in Mid. Eng.,' p. 84.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland OE. ā often remains as in 'Chronicle' āþes 'oaths,' stānes 'stones.' Orm, too, writing in northeast Midland not far from the northern border, has ā regularly as in Nth. From the beginning of the thirteenth century ǭ was the rule.

NOTE 2.—In Nth., as already noticed (§ 5), OE. ā remained ā through the period and is thus a distinguishing feature of that dialect. In early Sth., ā is still written, though beside ǭ, oa (ao). From the thirteenth century ǭ (oa) are regular, as in 'Ancren Riwle.' The change of ǭ to ō after cons. + w, noted above for Midland, was very late in Sth., probably not taking place until 1400.

44. Middle English close ō springs from:

1. OE. ō, or ō from o before certain consonant combinations: OE. ō as in dōm 'doom,' gōd 'good,' cōk 'cook'; OE. o as in gōld, bōrd, wōrd.
2. ON. ō as in bōne 'prayer, boon,' bōþe 'booth,' crōk 'crook.'
3. OF. ō (AN. ū), o rarely, AN. ō from OF. ue sometimes: OF. ō as in trȩsōn 'treason,' barōn, condiciōn; OF. o as in pōvre (pōre) 'poor,' fōl 'fool'; AN. ō from ue as in mōven 'move,' prōven 'prove,' dōlen 'grieve,' pōple 'people.'

45. OF. words in ō, especially before n, beside AN. forms with ū (cf. § 46) are common in early Middle English. Forms with AN ō from OF. ue, by monophthonging, occur beside those with ē already noted (§ 35). In unstressed syllables this AN. ō becomes o, as in coveren 'cover.'

Note 1.—Early Midland and the dialects agree in general. In late Nth. this sound is frequently written u, indicating a change in the direction of French eu in peu, the sound of Scotch u in gude 'good.'

46. Middle English ū, with the sound of the vowel in boot, is found in words from all sources. Under the influence of French spelling it is often written ou (ow), but this orthography never indicates a diphthong in the case of this vowel. The sources of ME. ū are:

1. OE. ū, and u when lengthened: OE. ū as in fūl 'foul,' hūs 'house,' ūt, lūd, hūw; OE. u as in wūnde 'wound,' grūnd (grōund) 'ground.'
2. ON. ū, and u when lengthened: ON. ū as in būn 'ready, prepared,' MnE. 'bound,' skūlen 'project,' drūpen 'droop'; ON. u as in lūnd 'nature, disposition.'
3. AN. ū as in crūne 'crown,' doūte 'doubt,' avūwen 'avow,' mūunt, acūunt, flūur 'flower,' precious.

Note 1.—Early Midland has no special peculiarity, except that ū is never written with French ou, but regularly with the English symbol.

Note 2.—There is general agreement in the dialects with regard to ME. ū. In the thirteenth century the French ou came to be used for ME. ū first in Sth., where it was especially necessary to distinguish this sound from ū (ȳ) for OE.

$\bar{y}$. Later it spread to other dialects, and in late Middle English became the rule. For Sth., in the earlier period especially, ME. $\bar{u}$ must be carefully separated from $\bar{u}$ ($\bar{u}$) for OE. $\bar{y}$. For Sth. u from French u, with the sound in French lune, see § 10, footnote.

THE DIPHTHONGS

47. As has been shown (§ 3), the OE. diphthongs became monophthongs in Middle English. Their place was supplied by certain new diphthongs formed from certain combinations of OE. vowels and following consonants. The change probably began in late Old English, and was certainly completed in the early Middle English period. The formation of the new diphthongs follows the accompanying scheme:

1. An OE. palatal vowel, $\breve{æ}$, $\breve{e}$, $\breve{ea}$, $\breve{eo}$ + a palatal h or g became ai, ei.
2. An OE. guttural vowel, $\breve{a}$, $\breve{o}$ + guttural h or g became au, ou.
3. An OE. palatal vowel, $\breve{æ}$, $\breve{e}$, $\breve{ea}$, $\breve{eo}$, $\breve{i}$ + w, and occasionally medial f (i. e. v) when developing into w, became eu.
4. An OE. guttural vowel, $\breve{a}$, $\breve{o}$ + w, and occasionally f as above, became au, ou.

48. As the vowels of these formulæ were long or short, two sets of diphthongs resulted in the earliest period. This is proved by the orthography of Orm, who doubles the second element of the diphthong in all cases when the first is short. On the other hand, long and short diphthongs were not otherwise distinguished in their written form or in their later development, so that they need not in general be separated. A more essential distinction, especially in the ou diphthongs, is the quality of the first element, which was either open or close according as it developed from OE. $\bar{a}$ and o, or from OE. $\bar{o}$. Even these can be distinguished only by knowing their origin in Old English. The diphthongs naturally developed most readily in the case of a following w, as in soule, OE. sāwle 'soul,' growen, OE. grōwan 'grow.' They next appear when g (h) are final, medial between vowels, or between vowel and voiced consonant, as in saide, OE. sægde 'said,' drawen, OE. dragan 'draw.'

Only occasionally do they appear from a vowel and a medial f (v), as in hawk, OE. hafoc 'hawk.' Before OE. ht, sometimes before final or medial h when still preserved, a parasitic i or u developed in later ME., as in eighte 'eight,' draught 'draught,' nought, wrought, and these diphthongs have usually had a somewhat different development from others. Diphthongs are also occasionally formed by the development of a parasitic vowel before other palatal consonants than h and g, as in bleinte, OE. blencte 'blenched,' meinde, OE. mengde 'mingled,' aische, OE. asce 'ashes,' fleisch, OE. flǣsc 'flesh.'

49. To these diphthongs of OE. origin must be added some from other languages, especially Danish and French. These usually associated themselves with those of English origin, as will be seen from the following sections, but in the case of OF. oi (ui) a new diphthong was added to the language.

Note.—When it is said above that the OE. diphthongs became monophthongs in Middle English, it should be remembered that in Kentish the older diphthongs were preserved to a late period. These have been noted already under § 37, n. 2. The consonants g and h do not immediately disappear on the formation of the diphthong, which is probably due to the formation of a parasitic vowel before the consonant. This accounts for such forms as deigen 'die,' in 'Gen. and Ex.' The consonant h appears especially when in conjunction with t. For a late monophthonging of ei and ou sometimes, see §§ 54, 69.

50. Middle English ai, in the earliest times, had the sound of the diphthong in high. As ai came to rime with ei in late ME., its pronunciation probably assumed the sounds a (as in man) + i in the course of its development. It springs from:

1. OE. æg, as in dai (day), mai (may) 'may,' sayde 'said.'
2. ON. ag (þg) rarely, as in gainen (ON. gagna), kairlīc (Orm kazzerrlezzc) if from Norse kþgur as Brate 'Nord. Lehnworter,' p. 46.
3. OF. ai, as in payment, paien 'satisfy, pay,' bitraien 'betray.'

51. Attention has been called to the development before OE. ht, no diphthong appearing as early as in other cases. In miȝt, niȝt, OE. (Merc.) mæht, næht, i resulted from the influence of the following palatal. There could therefore be no diphthongization in these cases. OF. ei appears as ai from the twelfth century, so that the number of ai forms is considerably increased in this way.

Note 1.—In early Midland the first element of the diphthong is written æ or a, and the last element g sometimes. Thus the 'Chronicle' has dæi (dæg) 'day.' Orm writes daȝȝ 'day,' maȝȝ 'may,' in accordance with his usual spelling of the diphthong. He also has mahht, nahht, 'might, night.' In 'Genesis and Exodus' migt, nigt appear beside magt, nagt.

Note 2.—lNth. ai becomes ā (§ 30, n. 1). Early Sth. has ei for Midland and Nth. ai, as in dei 'day,' mei 'may,' in accordance with its usual use of e for OE. æ. Sth. also developed the diphthong ei before ht, sometimes h, much earlier than the other dialects, as in eihte 'eight.'

52. Middle English ei, with the sound of e + i, comes from:

1. OE. eg, or ęg from ag, āg from Teut. aig, and ēg from ōg by i-mutation: OE. eg as in wei (wey) 'way,' pleien 'play'; OE. ęg as in eiȝe (eie) 'fear, awe'; OE. āg as in feie 'fay,' clei 'clay,' kei 'key'; OE. ēg as in feien 'join,' wreien 'accuse.'
2. OM. ēg corresponding to various WS. vowels: OM. ēg (WS. āg, Goth. ēg) as in grei(y) 'gray'; OM. ēg (WS. ēag, ēog) as in fleien 'fly,' dreien 'endure'; OM. ēg (WS. īeg by i-mutation of ēag) as in beien 'bend.'
3. ON. ei (æi), and þy (ey) by i-mutation of Teut. au: ON. ei as in reisen 'raise,' beiten 'bait,' þei 'they'; ON. þy (ey) as in ay 'aye,' cairen 'go, return,' traist 'strong, confident.'
4. AN. ei as in preien 'prey,' streit 'strait,' peinten 'paint,' kweynte 'quaint,' aqueyntaunce.

53. While these sources seem to be various they are, in reality, very few. Thus ME. ei springs from OE. (Merc.) ĕg (āg) from whatever source. The principal foreign sources are ON. and OF. ei diphthongs, which are responsible for a considerable number of ei words. In a few native words ei develops from e under the influence of a following palatal consonant or consonant combination. Here belong fleisch beside flesch (OE. flǣsc) 'flesh,' weisch (weis) beside wesch 'wash,' leincte beside lengten (lenten) 'spring,' bleincte (bleinte) < blencen 'blench,' dreincte (dreinte) < drencen 'drench.' Some AN. words have a diphthong ei (e), (ai) where OF. forms have ē (ee); examples are contraie (contray) 'country,' jorneie (jornay) 'journey.' Cf. § 37. In the case of words with OE. āg by i-mutation of Teut. aig (see 1 above), we should expect ME. ai by early shortening of ā. Either this did not take place in the few words belonging here, or more probably the open ē quality was changed to close ē under the influence of the following g. In a few cases ei (ey) springs from AN. ē (OF. ie) as mayntеynen 'maintain,' susteynen 'sustain,' perhaps by analogy of words ending in ei(ai)ne, for example atteinen 'attain.' Beside AN. forms in ei (ai) occur cognates from Central French in oi; see § 64.

54. For early confusion between OF. ei and ai words see § 51. ON. words with ϕ y also usually appear in Middle English with ai, perhaps indicating early change of quality from ei to ai. There is a tendency in late ME. to confuse all ei's and ai's as already noted under ai (§ 50). This is shown even as early as Chaucer, who sometimes rimes ei and ai. Besides, ME. ei, more especially in the southeast Midland as shown by Chaucer's usage, occasionally becomes a monophthong ī, by palatalization of the first element and contraction. Examples are flīen 'fly,' drīen 'endure,' dīen (dȳen) 'die,' sȳe 'saw.' A similar change took place in late Middle English in such words as heigh, neigh, sleight, by which they acquired the long ī which later became the Modern English diphthong ai.

Note 1.—Early Midland has ei, as in 'Chronicle' eie 'awe,' OE. ege. Orm writes eȝȝ for ĕi, eȝ for ēi in accordance with his usual orthography.

Note 2.—Nth. writes ai even in the earliest texts (last half of the thirteenth century) for ei (except for ei from OE. ēg(h)), as in þai 'they,' ay 'aye,' raise, pray 'prey,' paint. Ei from OE. ēg(h) does not become ī in Nth.; cf. Scotch dee, ee, 'die, eye.' In INth. ei became ē. Sth. does not differ from Midland, except that the palatalization of ei, from eg, to ī does not seem to occur.

55. Middle English au, a diphthong with the pronunciation of that in house, is of common occurrence in both native and foreign words. In general it develops from OE. a + w or g when final or medial in voiced company, while it also appears in many words borrowed from Old French. In detail, its sources are:

1. OE. aw or eaw, āw or ēaw when shortened, and rarely afo (eafo) by vocalization of f (=v): OE. aw or eaw as in clawe 'claw,' raw, straw, awel 'awl'; OE. āw or ēaw as in tawen (OE. tāwian, perhaps tawian) 'prepare,' aunen, taunen (OE. ēawnian* cteāwnian*) 'show'; OE. afo (eafo) as in hauk (OE. heafoc, hafoc) 'hawk,' nauger (OE. nafogar) 'auger,' and OE. afl as in craulen (OE. craflian) 'crawl.'
2. OE. ag, ahh, and aht, or when shortened āht (ǣht): OE. ag as in drawen (earlier drāȝen) 'draw,' gnawen 'gnaw'; or ahh, as in lauȝhen 'laugh,' lauhte 'laughed'; OE. āht (ǣht) as in auhte (auȝte) 'aught,' tauhte (taugte, tauȝte, tauȝhte) 'taught.'
3. ON. ag as in lawe 'law,' awe, felawe 'fellow.'
4. OF. au, as in cause, pause, applauden 'applaud,' assault.

56. As already noted the diphthongs which develop from ag (h) appear later than those from aw (cf. § 48). In Romance words, au from OF. a before a nasal + cons. (except nk and n + the stop g) appears in Middle English from the thirteenth century. The exact quality of this sound is not clear, but it seems not to have been a strict diphthong like OF. au, and was more probably an open o sound like that of OE. o from a before a nasal, varying with a as the interchangeable orthography would indicate. Its development during the period is different under different circumstances. It falls in with ME. a as in sample, champiōn, chance, branch, and in unstressed syllables as servant, coūntenance; with ME. ā as in chāmber, chānge, dānger, grānge, strānge; and with ME. au or ou before ht as in daunt, vaunt, paunch, staunch, lawn with loss of final d. A similar au appears from OF. ave before a nasal, as in aunter beside aventure 'venture, adventure,' paraunter, probably laundēre 'laundress.' Cf. Behrens, 'Franz. Sprache in England,' p. 77, Luick, 'Anglia,' XVI, 479 f.

Note 1.—In early Midland, as in the other dialects, the change of g to w had not been carried out. Thus Orm writes draȝhenn for OE. dragan 'draw,' laȝhe 'law.' The change was not completed, perhaps, until the beginning of the fourteenth century.

NOTE 2.—In early Sth., OE. g, which became vocalized to w, was written h, as in drahen 'draw,' but the diphthongic change was completed by the beginning of the thirteenth century, as in 'Ancren Riwle' drawen 'draw.' In Kentish, however, aȝ for OE. ag is found as late as the middle of the fourteenth century; cf. 'Ayenbite of Inwit.' The earliest Nth. texts, the last half of the thirteenth century, also show the change complete. In Nth. before ht(hh) no au diphthong develops, but the au diphthong is otherwise increased by the addition of au from OE. āw, āg, since in Nth. OE. ā remained ā (§§ 5, 43, n. 3). In Kentish also, OE. āw frequently remained āw, beside ou, and only later fully developed ou in all cases.

57. Middle English ew (ew) represents two slightly different sounds as the first element was open or close e. This gave a slightly different pronunciation to the two through the period, but they became one in early Modern English, when the first element of each had assumed the sound of i.

58. Middle English eu, with the sound of open e+u as in fool, has its principal sources in OE. e (eo), or ē (ēa) +w. In detail these are as follows:

1. OE. ew (eow), ęw (ęow) from Teut. aw by i-mutation, ēw, ēaw, are rarely ef (=ev): OE. ew (eow) as in sewen 'sew'; OE. ęw (ęow) as in ewe; OE. ēw as in mew 'sea bird,' lewed (lewd) 'lay, lewd'; OE. ēaw as in dew, hewen 'hew,' fewe 'few'; OE. ef as in ewte (OE. efete) 'newt.'
2. OF. eau in originally unstressed syllables as in beautē (beutē) 'beauty,' lewtē 'loyalty.'

NOTE 1.—In early Midland OE. ēw (ēaw) was written æu(w), as in 'Chronicle' fæu 'few,' Orm dæw 'dew,' shæwen 'show.' The consistent use of æ for OE. ā (ēa) shows that the first element of the diphthong was still long.

NOTE 2.—Nth. does not differ from Midland. Early Sth. has ea many times, as sheau(w)en 'show,' leawede 'lewd.' Kentish also has ēa (yea) for OE. ēa; see § 34, n. 2.

59. Middle English eu, with the sounds of close e+u (fool), has its principal sources in OE. ēow, OM. ēw (ēow), less commonly OE. īw and OF. diphthongs of similar quality. It springs from:

1. OE. ēow, sometimes īw: OE. ēow, as in ew (yew) 'yew,' hrewen 'rue,' chewen 'chew,' brewen 'brew,' knew 'knew,' grew 'grew'; OE. īw, as in steward beside earlier stiward, Tewesdai beside Tiwesdai 'Tuesday.'
2. OM. ēw (ēow) corresponding to different WS. diphthongs: OM. ēw (WS. ǣw, Goth. ēw), as in bilewen 'betray'; OM. ēow (WS. īew, īw by i-mutation of ēow), as in hewe 'hue,' newe 'new'; OM. ēow (WS. īw), as in spewen 'spew,' clewen 'ball of thread, clue.'
3. OF. eu (ieu), and sometimes ü, üi: OF. eu (ieu), as in Jew 'Jew,' Hebrew, sewen 'sue,' curfew, rewle 'rule'; OF. ü, especially when final or before a vowel, as in virtew 'virtue,' crewel 'cruel'; OF. üi rarely, as in frewte 'fruit,' seute 'suit.'

60. Here belong many preterits of reduplication verbs with OE. ēow, as hew 'hewed,' &c. To these, in later English, a few were added by analogy, as drew, slew, ME. drōh (drou), slōh (slou). Words with OE. īw were largely reduced in number for Mercian by their appearance in that dialect with ēow. Perhaps on this account early ME. stiward becomes steward. OF. words with ü (üi) sometimes show a like phonology. On the other hand, words with ME. eu from OF. eu (ieu) sometimes have iu beside eu, as in riwle 'rule,' Juus=Jiues. Beside forms with eu (ew) OE. ēow gives ow sometimes, by absorption of the first element of the diphthong, as in trowen 'trust, believe,' trowð (trouthe) 'truth,' fower 'four.' In ME. ōū (ōw, ȝōū) 'you' OE. ēow has become ū, perhaps earlier ou as a diphthong.

Note 1.—In early Midland, OE. ēow is sometimes written beside the new diphthong. Thus Orm writes neowe 'beside,' newe 'new.'

Note 2.—Early Sth. preserves eo, as in treowe 'true,' in accordance with § 37, n. 1. Otherwise the dialects are in general agreement with Midland.

61. Middle English iu is rare in native words and later falls in with eu (see above). That it developed in later ME. times from OF. ü (üi) when lengthened is certain (cf. Luick, 'Anglia,' XIV, 287).

How early this came about depends upon the question how far OF. ü was adopted in its purity in Middle English (cf. § 10, footnote). We shall here assume that OF. ü (üi) were diphthongal from the first, or practically so. Middle English iu has therefore the following origin:

1. OE. īw as in stiward, later steward, Tiwesnizht 'Tuesday night.'
2. OF. ü and üi (AN. ü sometimes): OF. ü as in rude, huge, usen 'use,' accusen 'accuse,' pursuen 'pursue,' nature, mīsure 'measure,' duk 'duke,' pur 'pure,' vertu 'virtue'; OF. üi (AN. ü sometimes) as in frut (fruit), sute (suite), anui 'annoy,' nuisance.

62. Confusion with the ME. diphthong eu has been noted under that combination. OF. ui also becomes oi as in the following section. On the other hand some words with ew appear with iu (iw) as riwle 'rule,' or, in unstressed syllables, u (=iu?) as in construe(n) 'construe,' Sth. asunīen 'excuse.'

Note.—In Nth. and NWMl. OF. ü sometimes becomes ū, as in Lūuk 'Luke,' regularly in the ending ure, as armūur 'armor.'

63. Middle English oi, with the sound of the diphthong in coy but with close o as the first element, is almost exclusively of romance origin. It springs from:

OF. oi (i.e. ǫi), oi (AN. ui, sometimes ei), and AN. oi+l, n (OF. o): OF. oi, as in joie 'joy,' choice, cloister, noise; OF. oi (AN. ui), as in destroien 'destroy,' Troye 'Troy,' vois 'voice,' crois 'cross,' moiste 'moist'; OF. oi (AN. ei sometimes), as in quoynte (coint) 'happy, gay,' quointīse 'skill,' point, enointen (anointen) 'anoint,' joint, coin; AN. oi+l, n (OF. o), as in soile 'soil,' spoilen 'spoil,' despoilen 'despoil,' oil, joinen 'join,' Burgoine.

64. Attention has already been called to AN. ei (ai) for OF. oi in some words, accounting for such MnE. forms as acquaint, quaint. Nth. aquynt 'acquainted' shows monophthonging of AN. ei. Beside forms with oi from ui may be mentioned the rare froit, beside fruit

(frut) 'fruit.' ME. jewel (juel, jouel) has perhaps been influenced by OF. ju, jeu 'game.' ME. boie 'boy' is certainly of ultimate Teutonic origin, and possibly from an unrecorded OF. word. In broiden, pret. pl. and pp. of OE. bregdan, oi develops naturally perhaps from OE. og before d (§ 179). For ui beside oi see §§ 61, 70.

65. Middle English ou, like eu, represents two different diphthongs which, however, came together in late Middle English, and were not always distinct in the earlier ME. period. The two sounds differ, as one had open, and the other close o for its first element.

66. Middle English ǫu, with the sound of open ǫ + u (fool), has its principal sources in OE. ow, og and ā + w or āg, while some Norse words with au have ranged themselves with these. Its sources, in detail, are:

1. OE. āw, āg(h), āht: OE. āw, as in sowen 'sow,' blowen 'blow,' crowen 'crow'; OE. āg(h), as in owen 'owe,' dou (doh, dogh) 'dough'; OE. āht, as in ouȝt 'ought,' ouȝte 'ought' (vb.).
2. OE. ow, og (h, hh), oht, and when shortened ōh or ōht: OE. ow, as in tow 'coarse flax'; OE. og (h, hh), as in bowe 'bow of the archer,' flowen 'flown,' trouȝ (troh, trogh) 'trough,' couȝ (cogh) 'cough,' couȝen (OE. cohhetian) 'cough'; OE. oht, as in douȝter 'daughter,' bouȝt 'bought'; OE. ōh as in touȝ (toh, togh) 'tough'; OE. ōht, as in souȝt 'sought,' fouȝten 'fought' (pp.).
3. ON. og, ōh when shortened, and ou (au): ON. og, as in lowe 'fire'; ON. ōh, as in þou (þoh, þouȝ) 'though'; ON. ou (au), as in nout 'cattle,' routen 'roar,' rouste 'voice.'

67. In a few cases double forms appear, as OE. āht becomes short (cf. § 55) or remains long until OE. ā had become ME. ǭ as in 1 above.

Note 1.—In early Midland the diphthongs had not yet developed in the case of og, āg, oht, as already noted in § 56, n. 1. Orm thus writes aȝhen 'owe,' OE. āgan.

NOTE 2.—The dialects agree in general. In Nth., as OE. ā remains, OE. āw, āg become au, not ou. Nth. ah, aht also do not develop a diphthong. The same is true in Kentish of OE. āw which remains au, though later becoming ou; see § 56, n. 2.

68. Middle English ou, with the sound of ō + u (fool), is of infrequent occurrence. It is from

OE. ōw, as in growen 'grow,' flowen 'flow,' stowen 'stow.'

69. This diphthong, which occurs in no large number of words, assumed the quality of ǫu in the fourteenth century, as shown by rimes of Chaucer, and has since had a similar development. For ou from OE. ōh, see § 66. In a few words ME. ou (probably close o) springs from OE. ēow by absorption of the first element of the diphthong, as in foure (OE. fēower) 'four,' trowen (OE. trēowian) 'believe.' This may also explain ū (oū, ȝoū) from OE. ēow 'you,' but if so the diphthong soon became ū, as shown by rimes.

70. A Middle English ui, occurring in Romance words, may represent OF. üi, which soon became ME. iu (cf. § 61) or in unstressed syllables u(i) as noted in §§ 23, 27. Otherwise ME. ui represents OF. ui, which has a diphthongal sound approximating ME. oi, with which it varies in early texts and by which it is finally displaced (§ 63). Examples are destruien 'destroy,' fuisōn 'abundance,' Burguine 'Bourgogne.' After k (c) this OF. ui sometimes became kwi, as in ME. quylte 'quilt,' Nth. aquynt 'acquainted.' Perhaps a similar change also accounts for anguis 'anguish,' which sometimes seems to have stress on the last syllable. In originally unstressed syllables this OF. ui became u or i as noted in §§ 23, 27.

NOTE.—A Sth. ui (üi) rarely springs from OE. ȳ + g as in 'Ancren Riwle' druie (<OE. drȳge) 'dry,' but the quality of the diphthong is uncertain. Cf. Sweet, 'Hist. of Eng. Sounds,' § 717.

VARIATIONS IN VOWEL QUANTITY

71. As compared with Old English, Middle English shows important variations of vowel quantity. Some of these are extensions of changes which were operative in late OE. times: see Sievers, 'Gr.,' §§ 120–125 and notes to §§ 150–168; Bülbring,

'Altenglisches Elementarbuch,' § 284 f. Others belong to the Middle English period, and affect not only a great number of English words, but also those borrowed from Norse and French. The best criteria for the variations in quantity of ME. vowels are, (1) the orthography of Orm; (2) the doubling of vowels and consonants, and the use of two symbols for a single sound, as ey for i, ui (y) for u, ea for e; (3) the occasional use of accents or other signs for vowel length; (4) the rimes in Middle English poetry, and other metrical evidences as of syncope, apocope, &c.; (5) the relation of ME. vowels to the course of their development in the modern period. Reference may be made especially to Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Grammatik,' pp. 65–92; Sweet 'History of English Sounds,' §§ 392, 616–640.

Note.—Orm, to whom special reference is made above, undertook to indicate pronunciation with minute exactness by doubling consonants and the second elements of short diphthongs, as well as by the occasional use of the accent and the breve. The most striking feature, the doubling of consonants, has led some to believe that Orm intended to indicate consonant length, while others think vowel length alone was intended. In any case, however, Orm's orthography is of practical value mainly in determining vowel quantity. Thus, vowels followed by doubled consonants are invariably short, as in staff, gladd, inn, allderrmann, asskenn, clennsenn; those followed by a single consonant in closed syllables are long, as in bāld 'bold,' fēld 'field,' chīld, gōld, grūnd 'ground.' The quantity of vowels followed by a single medial consonant is indeterminate by Orm's orthography, but in these cases, as in closed syllables, Orm uses accents to show original length in many words, and the breve to show original short quantity in something like a third of the examples. Those who believe that Orm intended to indicate vowel length only, explain his failure to double the consonant after a short medial vowel because such doubling would have produced confusion between such words as sune 'son' (OE. sunu) and sunne 'sun' (OE. sunne), the difference between which was still important. In the case of diphthongs, the first vowel is short when the second element is doubled, as in clawwess 'claws,' knewwe 'knew,' trowwenn 'trow'; otherwise long, as in cnāwen 'know,' sāwle 'soul,' sāwen 'sow.' The two views above are supported by Trautmann ('Anglia,' 7, 'Anzeiger,' 94, 208), Ten Brink ('Chaucer Gr.,' §§ 96–97), Effer ('Anglia,' 7, 'Anzeiger,' 167) for the first; Sweet ('Hist. of Eng. Sounds,' § 616 f.), Morsbach ('Mitteleng. Gr.,' § 15, anm. 2–3) for the second, with which most scholars agree. On Orm's marks of quantity, cf. Deutschbein, 'Archiv,' cxxvi–vii.

LENGTHENING

72. It may be assumed, in accordance with the evidences of lengthening in late Old English, that OE. long vowels and diphthongs remained long in open syllables and before a single final consonant, except as shown hereafter; and that original OE. short vowels and diphthongs had become long before certain consonant groups made up of a liquid or nasal and a voiced consonant, as ld, rd, rl, rn, rþ, mb, nd, ng, nǧ (= ng as in strange), though probably not rm. Original short vowels were also sometimes long in monosyllables, especially when final. Some examples of original short vowels with long quantity at the beginning of ME. times are hwā (hwō) 'who,' hē 'he,' bī 'by,' nū 'now'; wēl 'well,' Scotch 'weel[1],' hōl 'hole'; ōld (ald) 'old,' cōmb, ēnde 'end,' bīnden 'bind,' hōrd 'hoard,' gōld, sūnd 'sound as of body,' būnde 'bound.'

Note 1.—Lengthening had not taken place in Old English before consonant groups made up of a liquid or nasal and a voiceless consonant. In French words, however, u before nt, ns (nce), shows similar lengthening in ME., as in cōunt, mōūnt, ōūncc, flōunce, &c.; so also OF. e before st in some words, as bēst 'beast,' fēst 'feast.' Lengthening before ll in cōlt, bōlt, mōlten, and before lst in bōlster occurred in late Middle or early Modern English.

Note 2.—Sporadic shortening occurs very early, as in Orm's tenn 'ten,' annan 'anon,' while in late ME., the fifteenth century, it was more common, especially before dental consonants, as rĕd, drĕd 'dread,' lĕt 'permit,' wĕt, hĕt (OE. hāt), brĕth 'breath,' dĕth 'death,' nŏne.

73. During the Middle English period OE. short a, e, o were lengthened in open syllables, as in rāke 'rake,' nāme, schāme 'shame,' wēfen 'weave,' mēle 'meal,' hōpen 'hope,' hōse 'hose, trousers.' Examples of Norse words showing similar lengthening are tāken 'take,' dāsen 'daze,' scēren 'scare'; French words, fāce, grāce, cēsen 'cease,' apēlen 'appeal,' rōse, clōsen 'close.' Lengthening did not take place, however, when the following syllable was weak, as ī (ȳ) in penȳ 'penny,' hevȳ 'heavy,' bodȳ. When the following syllable consists of a short vowel and l, r, n, or m, in French words le, &c.,

[1] Cf. Horstmann, 'Anglia, Beiblatt,' xiii, 16.

the lengthening sometimes occurred, sometimes not. It would be resisted naturally by the strong tendency to syncopation of e, especially in inflexional forms; but some cases of certain lengthening are wē̆sele 'weasel,' ē̆ven, nāvele 'navel,' crādel 'cradle,' ō̆ver, stō̆len. Borrowed words follow the same rule, lengthening sometimes taking place, sometimes not. Some French words with certain lengthening are stāble, tāble, nō̆ble.

74. Lengthening of OE. short vowels in open syllables did not affect OE. i, u, or o for u, as in hīpe 'hip,' ȝiven 'given,' sune (sōne) 'son,' numen 'taken,' cōmen 'come.' But English words which had developed forms with e for OE. i (io) show lengthening of e, as in clē̆ven 'cleave, adhere' (OE. cliofian), lē̆nen 'lean' (OE. hlionian), wē̆ke 'week' (OE. wiocu, weocu). In all these cases the ME. forms with e no doubt rest on OE. forms with e (eo), as often in Mercian. On the other hand, i, u in French words are long in open syllables in ME., as are a, e, o. Examples are crīen 'cry,' bīble 'Bible,' brībe, desīren 'desire,' avōw̄, prōw̄, crōūne 'crown.' In these cases perhaps OE. i, u, because of their close quality, associated themselves with English ī, ū, rather than with ĭ, ŭ, and thus assumed long quantity.

Note 1.—Lengthening of OE. short vowels in open syllables does not, in general, belong to the twelfth century, though there are some evidences that it may have begun in this period. It was clearly operative in the first half of the thirteenth century, and by the middle of the century was complete. In accordance with this principle OE. vowels in open syllables are not marked long in early Midland or Southern selections, even though the phonology seems to imply lengthening in some cases. Northern selections are all later than the change indicated, and therefore show lengthening in all cases.

Note 2.—Later shortening no doubt accounts for such forms as show short vowels in Modern English, as rot, knock, crack, lap, ME. rō̆ten, knō̆ken, crāken, lāpen. Sometimes also analogy accounts for the change, as in MnE. sweat, vb. by analogy of the preterit with short vowel, ME. swette.

75. Compensatory lengthening also occurred in Middle English, as in the case of the i, u vowels, by the vocalization of a following consonant. Examples are Ī from ic (ik), stīe 'sty' (OE. stigu, early ME. stige), rīe 'rye' (OE. ryge), stīle (OE. stigel), fūel (fōwel) 'fowl' (OE. fugel), sōw (OE. sugu) 'sow.'

SHORTENING

76. At the close of the Old English period, OE. long vowels and diphthongs, whether in simple or compound words, were usually shortened before long, that is doubled, consonants and before consonant groups, except those which had caused lengthening of short vowels and therefore preserved the quantity of long vowels (§ 72). Examples under the various heads are as follows:

(a) Before long, that is doubled, consonants, lĕdde 'led,' sprĕdde 'spread,' hătte 'called,' fĕll, hĭdde 'hid,' hătter 'hotter.'

(b) Before more than two consonants, hĕrcnen 'hearken,' ĕrnde 'earned,' lĕrnde 'learned.'

(c) Before two consonants, not those groups which preserved long quantity, fĭlþe 'filth,' hĕlþe 'health,' kĕpte 'kept,' slĕpte 'slept,' lăst, brĕst 'breast,' sŏfte 'soft,' sŏhte 'sought,' tāhte 'taught,' lĭht 'light,' lĭhten 'make light,' drŭhþe 'drought,' but dialectal 'droughth,' little, Wĕdnesday, clĕnsen 'cleanse,' brĕmmil (brĕmbel) 'bramble,' slŭm(e)ren (slŭmbren) 'slumber,' ever, everȳ.

(d) Before two or more consonants in compounds, chăpman 'merchant,' Ĕdward, shĕpĥērde, wĭsdōm, fĭflȳ, gŏshawk, clĕnlȳ 'cleanly,' hŭsbonde 'husband,' hŭswif 'hussy, housewife.'

NOTE 1.—The short vowel is often replaced by the long under the influence of analogy. Thus, in inflexional forms, the shortened vowel of the genitive singular and the plural, as dĕvles, is replaced by the long vowel of the nominative-accusative singular, dēvel, becoming dēvles. On the other hand, the short vowel of the genitive and plural sometimes replaced the long in the nominative-accusative, as in mŏþer, brŏþer, ŏþer 'mother, brother, other.' For a similar reason there is variation in quantity in compounds, as sūþdāle 'south part,' sōþfast 'soothfast,' hēmward 'homeward,' mēknesse 'meekness,' wīslȳ 'wisely,' with long vowels by analogy of the uncompounded sūþ, sōþ, hēm, wīs.

NOTE 2.—Variations in quantity are also found before certain consonant groups, as st, before which the long vowel often remains, as in gāst (gĭst 'ghost,' prēst 'priest,' Crīst 'Christ,' lēste 'least.' But if a third consonant follows st, the vowel is regularly short, as in wrăstlen 'wrestle,' crĭstnen 'christen,' thĭstle, fŏstren 'foster,' blŏstme 'blossom,' yet ēstren 'easter.' Modern English shows many cases of shortening, as hest, breast, fist, list, dust, rust. Before OE. sc, ME. sh (sch), a long vowel is preserved by Orm in flēsh, though not in wesh 'washed.' Short vowels are common before sh, as in Modern English flesh, mesh, wish, rush.

77. Long vowels and diphthongs were sometimes shortened when one or more syllables with strong secondary stress followed the accent. Examples are hăliday 'holiday,' hĕring 'herring,' stĕrop 'stirrup,' nŏþing 'nothing,' fĕlawe 'fellow' (ON. fēlagi). Before the syllable ī (ȳ) there is variation, shortening occurring sometimes as in rĕdȳ 'ready,' sŏrȳ 'sorry,' ănȳ (ĕnȳ) 'any,' while in other cases the long vowel is retained, as in īvȳ, wēr̄ȳ 'weary,' grēdȳ 'greedy,' hūlȳ.

NOTE.—Here also analogy may counteract the operation of the rule, as in such words as frēdōm, rīdēre 'freedom, rider,' where the long vowel is due to the influence of the uncompounded words frē, rīden 'free, ride.'

78. Before the consonant groups which usually preserved vowel length (§ 72), original short vowels remained short or were shortened, when followed immediately by (a) another consonant, as in hŭndred, chĭldren; (b) a syllable having strong secondary stress, as in wŭrþī 'worthy,' ĕrþlȳ 'earthly'; (c) a syllable made up of a short vowel and l, r, n (though not usually inflexional n), or m, as in gĭrdel, wŭnder, ălderman, sĕlden (sĕldom) 'seldom.' In cases under (c) frequent syncope of the short vowel before the liquid or nasal is presupposed, so that shortening would be due to the same influence as in cases under (a). In some words two of the above influences were operative at the same time, as in wilderness, ălderman. Inflexional en did not usually affect the preceding vowel, but the vowel remained long when n was dropped.

79. The vowels i, u, before ng, though long in early ME. as shown by the orthography of Orm, were short from the middle of the thirteenth century, as in þĭng 'thing,' tŭnge 'tongue.' Many cases of shortening before consonant groups also appear, especially in later Middle English. Shortening is most common before ng, rn, rl, rþ. Some examples of these are Orm's ȝerrne beside ȝĕrne 'desire,' turrnenn 'turn.'

NOTE.—Analogy doubtless accounts for many forms, as frend 'friend,' by influence of frendlȳ, frendship.

THE VOWELS OF SYLLABLES WITHOUT PRINCIPAL STRESS

80. In syllables bearing strong secondary stress, Middle English vowels usually retain the quality of their Old English originals, as fredōm, Godhēd, handsum. The same is usually true of prefixes, as in arīsen 'arise,' forlǭren 'forlorn,' upbǭren 'upbear' (cf. tō, § 82). On the other hand, in suffixes and prefixes o and u before a nasal sometimes suffer change in quality, the first becoming a or u, the second i, partly no doubt under the influence of analogy. Thus the suffix ung (lung) of OE. nouns became ing (ling) in Middle English, and the prefix on, except the privative prefix, became an (a). The privative prefix on, as in OE. onlūcan 'unlock,' became un, perhaps under the influence of the negative un so commonly used. The greatest change in vowel quality from Old to Middle English, however, is in the case of inflexional endings. In these every OE. unstressed a, o, or u become e, a far reaching change which affected all classes of words.

NOTE 1.—The change of OE. a, o, u to e is often carried out in early Midland, as in 'Chronicle' and 'Ormulum,' but not so fully as later.

NOTE 2.—Nth. shows complete change of ung (lung) to ing (ling), and of the privative prefix on to un, but otherwise the prefix on usually remains on (o). The change of vowel quality in inflexional endings has not affected the Nth. present participle, which ends in and(e). In early Sth. the suffix ung (lung) sometimes remains unchanged, but later regularly appears as ing (ling), as in other dialects. The other changes in vowel quality already mentioned are carried out, and in addition the ending of the present participle has become inde in most cases before the further change to inge, § 163.

81. Owing to the changes in stress many syllables in Romance words which formerly bore principal stress retain a strong secondary accent (cf. § 15). These also usually retain their original quality. In a few cases already mentioned in the preceding sections, certain changes in quality do appear, ēre instead of ēre from OF. aire (§ 33), werrīen beside werreien (§ 39), eu instead of ęu in beutē 'beauty' (§ 58), but it is not certain that such changes may not be due to some other influence, as the following r in the first case. Similarly Romance nouns in -ion, which occasionally seem to show variation between -ōn and ǭn, may have suffered by the same influence. The OF. prefixes des, en, mes often appear as dis, in, mis, the latter no doubt partly under the influence of OE. mis. Examples are distroien, inclǭsen, mischeef 'destroy, inclose (enclose), mischief.' OF. initial e sometimes becomes a as in ascāpen 'escape,' anointen 'anoint,' asunīen 'excuse.'

82. The second elements of compounds, when containing a long vowel or diphthong, usually retain original length under strong secondary stress, as Alfrēd, barfōt 'barefoot.' The same is often true of suffixes bearing secondary stress, as hōd, hēd which are regularly long, and dōm, ǭre, lēs, līke (līche) which are sometimes short, however. The length is proved by doubling of vowels, as in hood, heed, doom, lees, and the occasional shortening by such spellings of the suffixes as dam, less. Prefixes with original long vowels show shortening in Middle English, as arīsen 'arise,' tofǭre 'before,' from OE. prefixes ā and tō. In the case of tō- the spelling clearly indicates occasional shortening, as well as variation in quality; cf. tegadere (gidere), teday 'together, today.' Yet these are on the whole rare forms, and the probability is that the prefix tō- was associated with the preposition-adverb tō and was usually regarded as long. The same is true of vowels in words unstressed in the sentence, as an (a), but (bot), anȳ (enȳ), nat (not), þoh (though), us, sholde, wolde, wel beside wēl, &c.

NOTE.—In early Midland the long quantity is retained, as shown by Orm's orthography in hād, dōm, lās 'less,' wīs 'wise,' rēde, līk (līke) 'like,' often ǭre, though the latter is sometimes short. So also ī (ȳ), from OE. ig, as in hālīȝ, bodīȝ, and the second elements of compounds as æd(d)mōdnesse, where mōd is long as indicated by the single d following the vowel. Shortening of vowels in words unstressed in the sentence is also shown in Orm's butt, uss, þohh, ann(a), &c.

83. Other changes in unstressed syllables are those called syncope, apocope, aphæresis, elision, contraction, the occurrence of which follows general laws that may be briefly summarized. To begin with, every vowel or diphthong, whether medial or final, makes a syllable except as noted hereafter. But unstressed syllables, that is those without principal or secondary stress, often show syncope of medial e. Thus, after an accented syllable, medial e, whatever its origin, is syncopated, as in chirche 'church,' hevne 'heaven,' lernde 'learned,' ōpnen 'open.' In many such cases, however, the syncopated e is restored by analogy of unsyncopated forms, as chireche, hevene, lernede, ōpenen. The same is true of medial e between a principal and secondary stress, as trewlȳ, sēmlȳ, Englǭnd, beside trewelȳ, sēmelȳ, Engelǭnd. Syncope of any other vowel than e is rare, though i in the suffixes iȝ, ish is sometimes lost.

Note.—Early Midland shows the same syncope in many cases, as in Orm's effne, errnde, gaddrenn, heffne, oppnenn, &c., while in other forms the loss has not occurred.

84. Medial e is sometimes syncopated or partially lost in certain endings. Syncopation frequently occurs before final r, l, n, as in silv(e)r, hung(e)r, striv(e)n, līt(e)l. It is especially common between a vowel or liquid and n, as in the past participles drawn, slayn, born, torn. In past participles of weak verbs, the ending ed shows similar syncopation sometimes, owing to such a change in Old English (Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 406), though unsyncopated forms also occur. Syncopation seldom occurs in the endings est, eþ (eth) of the present indicative; in es (is) of the genitive singular, the nominative plural, and the adverb; in en of the infinitive, the plural of verbs, and in other forms except the past participle of strong verbs; in ed of preterit singular and plural, and er, est of comparative and superlative in adjectives. Syncope often occurs in words unstressed in the sentence, as arn for āren 'are,' wiln (woln) for willen (wollen) 'will.'

Note 1.—In early Midland syncope is less common except in the verbal endings est, eþ (eth), in which it is sometimes found. Compare Orm's seȝȝst 'sayest,' seȝȝþ 'sayeth.'

Note 2.—In addition to general agreement with Midland, Nth. shows syncope in es of nouns and verbs. Sth., while also showing general agreement with Midland, differs in a much more frequent syncopation of e in the est, eþ (eth) verbal endings, as in Old English.

85. When medial e, of whatever origin, is followed by a syllable with another unstressed e, syncope or apocope often takes place. This gives rise to double forms, such as aþel, aþ(e)le 'noble'; adys, ad(e)se 'adze'; ever, ev(e)re 'ever'; many also in inflexion, as loved, lov(e)de 'loved'; hevens, hev(e)nes 'heavens.' In the last half of the fourteenth century, apocope of e is preferred in preterits of weak verbs, the latter thus agreeing with the past participle. Upon this apocope and consequent agreement between preterit and past participle, rests the regularity of Modern English forms.

Note 1.—In early Midland the same variation between syncope or apocope also occurs, as in Orm's heffne 'heaven,' aþell 'noble,' but lufede 'loved.'

Note 2.—In Nth. the final e is usually silent or has suffered apocope. Sth. seems to prefer syncope of medial e. Chaucer makes frequent use of both forms for the same word, no doubt for metrical purposes.

86. Apocope of final e is common in Middle English, and materially affects the spoken forms of words, whether indicated or not by the orthography. It occurred earliest in polysyllables after a strong secondary stress, as in almess, OE. ælmesse 'alms'; lafdiȝ (lę̄vdiȝ), OE. hlāfdige 'lady'; and in inflected forms of such words as drinking, wurþiȝ 'worthy,' twentiȝ 'twenty.' On the other hand, some such words occasionally assumed an inorganic e in the nominative by analogy of other forms, instead of suffering apocope in the latter, as tiþende 'tidings,' twīfālde 'twofold.' Similar apocope often occurred in words not bearing principal stress in the sentence, as in pronouns, unstressed adverbs and conjunctions, and auxiliary verbs. Examples are mȳn, hir, swich (such), whan, þan (than), shul, myȝt, beside forms with e in which the spelling is often merely traditional. Total or partial apocope, that is slurring, also occurs in poetry when unstressed ne, þē (thē), a precede words beginning with a vowel, as proved by the metre.

Note 1.—In early Midland, syncope is already clear from such cases as Orm's laffdīȝ, drinnkinng and others; unstressed words as an, all, mīn, þīn; and such evidences of elision as þarrke 'the ark.'

NOTE 2.—In the earliest Nth. apocope has taken place even more commonly than in other dialects; compare § 6. Sth. is far more conservative, with the exception of Kentish, which does not differ from Midland.

87. After syllables bearing principal stress, final e, of whatever origin, tends to disappear in Middle English, sometimes through analogy, later especially through general weakening. At the beginning of the period, the beginning of the thirteenth century, final e is usually retained except as already noted. About 1300 it remains or disappears at the pleasure of the writer, as shown by poetry, and in late Middle English, that is about the middle of the fifteenth century, it is wholly lost. Texts written in the northeast Midland district show disappearance of final e before those of the southeast Midland.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland final e was still preserved as a rule, though lost in words not bearing sentence stress, and in some inflexional forms as the dative of nouns.

NOTE 2.—In Nth. final e was wholly lost by the middle of the fourteenth century, a century before it disappeared entirely in Midland. It remained longest in the adjective inflexion, less commonly in nouns and verbs. In Sth., except Kentish, final e was kept somewhat longer than in Midland, though sometimes silent in the fourteenth century. In Kentish it is generally kept as late as the middle of the fourteenth century. In the dialect of London it is also retained somewhat longer than usually in Midland, as shown by the writings of Chaucer, in which, though often silent, it may still form a syllable for metrical purposes at the pleasure of the writer.

88. Elision of weak final e occurs before a word beginning with a vowel or weak h, that is h in unstressed words as hē, him, or those with French h. Examples are numerous in poetry, as indeed they are rarely found in Old English verse. The commonest OE. elision, that of e in the negative ne, remains to Middle English in such forms as nas for ne was, &c. In Middle English also e of þē (thē) is often elided. This is shown by such early Midland forms as þemperīce 'the empress' in the 'Chronicle,' and þarrke 'the ark' in the 'Ormulum.' Common also is elision of o in unstressed tō, as in toffrenn 'to offer,' tunnderrgān 'to undergo' from the 'Ormulum.' Rarely the e of the pronouns mē, þē (thee) also suffers elision, as in thalighte 'thee alight,' dō mendȳte 'do me endyte.'

89. Aphæresis, that is loss of an initial vowel (or syllable), sometimes occurs in unstressed words or syllables. Examples in unstressed words are hēt for hē it, wast for was it. So also the unstressed vowel has disappeared in rīsen from OE. ārīsan 'arise,' taunen from OE. ætēawnian 'show,' twīten from OE. a twītan 'twit.' Similarly i (y) from OE. ge usually suffers aphæresis in Northern and Midland, though often not in Southern. Old French e before sc (sk), sp, st is often lost as in spȳen 'espie, spy,' spōuse, stāt 'state,' stǭrīe (stǭrȳ), scāpen 'escape.' Aphæresis of a, e under other circumstances also occurs sometimes, as prentys 'apprentice,' semblee 'assembly,' nuien (noien) 'annoy,' pistle 'epistle.' Aphæresis of an unstressed syllable in Romance words occurs in sample < ensample, buschment < embuschment, fenden < defenden, sport < desport, struien < destruien.

90. Contraction of vowels brought together by vocalization of a medial consonant sometimes occurs. Examples are dēl for dēvel, ēl for evel, yēde (ȝōde) from OE. ge-ēode, whēr for whe̊per, ḡr (or) for oůper 'or,' ēr, nēr for ever, never.

The Consonants

91. The Middle English consonant system may be best exhibited by a table such as the following:

	Stops.		Continuants.
			Spirants.
	Voiceless.	Voiced.	Voiceless.	Voiced.	Semivowels.	Liquids.	Nasals.
Labials	p	b	f	v	w		m
Dentals	t	d	þ s sh	þ z		l r	n
Palatals	k′	g′	ȝ′(h)	[ȝ(h)]	ȝ, y
Gutturals	k	g	ȝ′	ȝ			ȝ

To these must be added the breath consonant h, and the combinations hw (MnE. wh as in what), ch (=tsh) as in church, g, j (=dzh) as in wāge, judge. x is but a sign for ks.

Note.—The pronunciation of most of the consonants is the same as in Modern English. The palatal stops k', g' are pronounced as in kid, get, compared with the guttural stops in cot, got. The voiced þ (ð, th) is sounded as in the. Sh (sch) represents the simple consonant sound in she, no voiced variety being found in Middle English. The palatal spirant ȝ (h) has the sound of ch in Ger. ich, the voiced ȝ (medial and only in early Middle English) may be pronounced as y in yet. The guttural spirants represent respectively the Ger. ch in auch, and g in sagen. y represents the sound of n before k or g.

92. The general relations to the Old English consonant system may be briefly summarized; compare also a table similar to the above in Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 170. In the first place, most consonants in Middle English correspond to similar ones in Old English on the one side, and in Modern English on the other. Especially is this true of the semi-vowels, liquids, and nasals, as well as of the dental and labial stops and spirants. The most radical changes that have taken place have affected the palatal and guttural stops and spirants. In addition to this there are of course some minor changes within the limits of each consonant, which will be noticed as they occur. Owing to the general similarity between the Old, Middle, and Modern English consonant systems, however, it seems best here to presuppose knowledge of the Old English system, and to consider mainly those changes that are necessary for an understanding of Middle English proper. In considering the consonants, the order will be that of the table above, the stops first, and next the various classes of continuants, spirants, semi-vowels, liquids, and nasals[1].

[1] This order is chosen as best exhibiting the essential character of the consonants on the physical, rather than the physiological side. The physiological terms, as guttural, palatal, &c., and the descriptive terms, as semi-vowels, liquids, &c., are also freely employed because of their long acceptance and their general value.

THE STOPS

93. The Middle English voiceless and voiced stops of labial and dental varieties, p–b, t–d, correspond so nearly with those of Old and Modern English that little space need be given to them. Each is a stable consonant in the main, and subject only to such changes as may affect any consonant at different times; see § 112 f. It is worthy of note that the voiceless labial p, which was rare initially in Old English, became common owing to the great number of French words introduced in Middle English. The geminated labial b, when medial as in a few OE. words, was replaced by v under the influence of the numerous forms in which v (OE. medial f) occurred in Old English. Examples are hāven, OE. habban 'have,' liven, OE. libban 'live,' hęven, OE. hebban 'heave.' For d under grammatical change see § 116.

NOTE.—The dialects in general agree. In late Nth., final unstressed d was often unvoiced to t, and this has remained to modern Scotch. In Sth. geminated bb as above was not replaced by v. Early Sth. shows unvoicing of final unstressed d as in asket 'asked,' tōwart 'toward,' inempnet 'named,' but later d was restored by analogy of other forms.

94. The ME. voiceless palatal stop k (as in kid) springs from the OE. guttural stop c (k), from Norse k, and in a few words from OF. c (=k). It occurs initially before the OE. palatal mutated vowels ę, ē < ō, sometimes ǣ, usually before the OE. guttural y̆ (from ŭ) which had become palatal ĭ by unrounding, before e, i in words from Norse (rarely Old French), and sometimes by analogy of guttural vowels in allied forms. Examples of native words are ME. kemben 'comb,' Kent, kēne 'keen,' kei (OE. cāge) 'key,' kichen (OE. cycene) 'kitchen,' kīte (OE. cyta) 'kite.' A considerable number of Norse words also occur, as ketel 'kettle,' kevel 'bit, clamp, gag,' kide 'kid,' kindlen 'kindle,' kirke 'church.' On the other hand, OF. words with palatal k are limited by rare occurrence of OF. c (=k), except before gutturals, but compare AN. forms with e < ē by monophthonging of OF. ue (§ 35, 20), which account for ME. keveren beside coveren 'cover,' and keverchef

(kerchef). Here belong also ME. kenet 'hound,' kenel 'kennel,' kitōn 'kitten.' By analogy of guttural k in pret. pl. and past participle, the palatal stop k (c) took the place of ME. ch in the present of kerven 'carve.' Medially the ME. palatal stop k appears as above, as well as before OE. a, o, u, which had become ME. e in unstressed syllables (§ 80). Examples are tāken, māken, āker 'acre.' By analogy of the indicative present third singular of certain verbs as sēkeþ, wirkeþ, palatal k often appears in the infinitive and other present forms, as sēken, wirken. In chiken 'chicken,' īsikel 'icicle,' the k is doubtless due to the OE. inflected forms, as cycnes, īsiċles in which OE. c would remain k. The combination s + palatal c (= k) always indicates borrowing, as in skil 'reason,' skin, skēre 'clear.'

NOTE.—The examples of palatal c (k) are increased for the Nth. dialect by the lack of palatalization of OE. c to ch (§ 110, n. 2). Examples are mikel 'much,' swilk 'such,' līk 'like,' sēk 'seek,' wirk 'work,' and many others. For Nth. s < OE. sc, cf. § 102, n. 2.

95. The voiced palatal stop g springs from OE. guttural g before ȳ which had become palatal ĭ by unrounding, from OF., ON. g before palatal vowels, and is sometimes due to analogy of allied forms with guttural g. Examples of initial g in native words are gilden 'gild,' gilt, 'guilt,' girden 'gird'; in those from Old French, where g represents earlier gu, gīle 'guile,' gimelot (gimbelet) 'gimblet,' giterne 'guitar'; in Norse, gēre 'gear,' gēren 'do, make,' gil 'gill of a fish,' gest 'guest,' the last supplanting the native English word. Analogy of g in preterit and past participle accounts for geven (given) 'give' beside English ȝeven (ȝiven) and ginnen, beginnen 'begin,' while geten beside ȝeten 'get' is of Norse origin. Medially, palatal g appears in the combination ng (= ŋ + g′) before palatal vowels, as singen (OE. singan) 'sing,' gengen (ON. genga) 'go,' genge (ON. gengi) 'company.'

96. The Middle English guttural stops c (k)–g correspond to OE. (ON.) guttural stops c–g in Teutonic words, or to similar sounds in Old French. Both guttural stops occur before consonants and the guttural vowels ă, ĕ, ŏ, ŭ. For the stops c (k)–g which occur before OE. ĕ, ў, sometimes æ when due to mutation, see § 94, and for OF. ch before a, au, see § 110. The guttural c (k) also appears in the combination x (=ks), qu (=kw), nc (k) =ŋ + k, and the stop g in the combination ng (=ŋ + g), occasionally in gemination (gg). Guttural c (k) initially in Teutonic words may be illustrated by clǭþ 'cloth,' cāre (kāre), cǭld, cǭle 'coal,' cumen (còmen) 'come,' and in Romance words by crȳen 'cry,' cas (cāse) 'case,' colūr 'colour,' cūrs (cours) 'course.' In Romance words the stop c (k) before a, au indicates learned origin or Norman-Picard dialect, in which vulgar Latin k did not become ch (as in Central French). Examples are cas (cāse), cause, cāge, carpentēr, and the doublets catǭl, cachen 'catch,' calīce, caritē, beside OF. chatel, chācen, chalīce, charitē (cf. § 110). Medially the guttural stop c (k) appears before a guttural vowel in syllables having principal or secondary stress, and finally after a guttural vowel. Between a guttural and palatal vowel, the stop must have varied between guttural and palatal quality as it belonged to the syllable with one vowel or the other. The combination s + guttural c (k) always indicates borrowing, either from Norse as in scōw̄l, scull, bask, Old French as in scōrn, scūren, 'scour' scōūle 'scout,' or other minor sources.

NOTE.—In Nth. the number of guttural k's is increased by the fact that OE. c did not become ch in that dialect (§ 94, n.). Examples are cof 'chaff,' calk 'chalk.' For the combination sk < OE. sc in unstressed words, see § 102, n. 2.

97. The guttural stop g initially may be exemplified by grēne 'green,' galle 'gall,' gōld, gōd 'good,' gume 'man' in Teutonic words, and glǭrīe, governen 'govern,' gōūte 'gout' in Romance. In Teutonic words borrowed by vulgar Latin initial w became gu (=gw), and this combination became guttural g in Old French, as in ME. garde, garisōn, regard, while remaining w (except before i) in Anglo-Norman, and therefore appearing in the doublets warde, warisōn, reward (§ 106). Before i, g < Teut. w appears in gīden 'guide,' gīse 'guise,' gīle 'guile,' begīlen 'beguile.' Medially and finally guttural g occurs under the same circumstances as guttural k above. In a few cases ME. guttural g represents late OE. geminated, that is long g (gg), as in dogge 'dog,' frogge 'frog,' hogge 'hog,' stagge 'stag.' Usually, however, medial or final guttural g implies borrowing, as in draggen 'drag,' big, egg, legg from Norse. ME. sugre, beside sucre 'sugar,' shows voicing of OF. c to g. ME. garden represents Picard garden, beside OF. jardin.

THE SPIRANTS

98. The spirants f–v (f) in Teutonic words occurred under the same conditions as in Old English and to-day. The voiceless f appears initially in a stressed syllable, as in fader 'father,' beforen 'before'; medially when preceding a voiceless consonant or in gemination (ff), as in shaft, offren 'offer'; finally, as in wulf, self. In Romance words f was regularly voiceless and retained this quality whether in stressed or unstressed syllables. Examples of Romance words in which f appears contrary to the rule in Teutonic are cómfort, trufle.

99. The voiced spirant v (sometimes written f) in Teutonic words springs from OE. (ON.) f in voiced company, as ofer, given (ziven, yiven) 'give'; occasionally also in inflected forms with final f in nominative singular, as stāves from staf 'staff,' calves from calf. To these were added in Middle English many v's, both initial and medial, from Old French. As initial v did not occur in Teutonic words, except rarely in those borrowed from the Sth. dialect, Midland words with initial v or with v beginning a stressed syllable are of Romance origin, as vīne, devīne.

NOTE 1.—In early Middle English f was still written for v, as in the OE. period; cf. iāfen (= yāven), hāfen 'have,' &c.

NOTE 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland. In Sth. the number of initial v's was largely increased by the voicing of initial f, as in vader 'father,' vihten 'fight.' Cf. Kt. selections especially.

100. The spirants þ (ð, th), voiceless and voiced without distinction of written sign, occurred in Teutonic words under exactly the same circumstances as f–v, and need not be especially illustrated. While in Modern English some borrowed words have the voiceless th, the voiced and voiceless spirants usually indicate Teutonic origin. In late Middle English th came to be written for OF. t (th = t), as in thęatre, thęorie, thēme, thrǫne, authōur 'author,' and these were doubtless still pronounced with t until, in Modern English, they acquired the spirant sound by influence of the spelling. There is no evidence that initial þ (th) had become voiced in pronominal words, as þē, þat, þis, þū, &c., or final þ in unstressed wiþ. Initial unstressed þ in pronominal words often becomes t after d, t, sometimes s by back assimilation, as in and tat 'and that,' at tat 'at that,' is tat 'is that.' Occasionally ME. þ interchanges with the voiced stop d in medial position, as cōūde beside cōūþe 'could,' aförden 'afford,' and finally in the preterit quod 'quoth.' After a voiceless spirant, f, s, ȝ (h), ME. þ becomes t, as in þefte 'theft,' leste (OE. lǣs þē) 'lest,' heiȝte 'height.'

Note.—Nth. agrees with Midland. The parallel voicing in Sth. of initial f, s, sometimes wh (hw) to w, implies voicing of þ in similar position, but the orthography gives no evidence of it.

101. The spirants s, voiced and voiceless, but usually without distinction of written sign, are parallel to f-v in their occurrence in Teutonic words. The voiced spirant is usually written s, z ordinarily indicating ts in Middle English. z is found, especially when final in unstressed syllables, as in WMl. forms like sīdez 'sides,' indicating the voicing of s in this position. Both spirants were largely increased from Old French sources. OF. voiceless s (written s (sc) ss, or c before e, i) occurs in all positions and need not be especially illustrated. Medial OF. iss usually became ME. isch (issh) as in finischen (OF. finir, finiss-) 'finish,' perischen 'perish,' anguische 'anguish.' OF. voiced s is found in such words as prisūn 'prison,' trȩsōn 'treason.' In citesen 'citizen' the voiced spirant has been inserted, perhaps by analogy of similar sen (zen) forms. For Picard ch in words with OF. c = s cf. § 110.

Note.—In general Nth. agrees with Midland, but note Nth. s for Ml. Sth.

sch (sh), § 102. For OF. sīre Nth. has schir sometimes. Teutonic initial s was voiced in Sth., as shown especially by initial z in the Kentish 'Ayenbite of Inwit.'

102. The Middle English spirant sch (sh) is a characteristic ME. sound springing from OE. sc in all positions. Examples are schaft (shaft) 'shaft,' schort (short), asche 'ash,' Englisch, fisch (fish) From such strictly English words with ME. sch (sh) are to be separated the Norse and OF. borrowed words with sc (sk); but medial OF. iss gave ME. isch (ish) as already noted. In the pronoun schē (scho, sho) ME. sch springs from OE. s+y (< e) in unstressed sēo (seō) from OE. sēo. In asken 'ask' (OE. ascian, axian), sk probably represents a late metathesis of x. Scotland, Scottisch, scōl 'school,' are doubtless learned forms, the first two influenced by the Nth. Scot, the last by OF. escole or mediæval Latin scola. There was no corresponding voiced spirant in Middle English.

Note 1.—In 'Chronicle,' sc is still written for ME. sch (sh), but Orm writes sh after long, ssh after short vowels.

Note 2.—Nth. agrees with Ml. in the main, but OE. sc in unstressed words and syllables became s, as in sulen, sal, suld, 'schulen, shall, should,' Inglis, 'English,' Scots 'Scotch.' In Sth., sometimes Ml., ss (s) are written for the spirant sound.

103. The Middle English palatal spirants ȝ (h)–ȝ (ȝh), voiceless and voiced without much distinction of signs, are exclusively of Teutonic origin and of limited occurrence. They cannot occur initially because the corresponding OE. palatals c, g had become ME. ch, and the semivowel ȝ (y) respectively. They are also limited, in medial and final position, by their vocalization to form diphthongs (§ 47), or ī, ū (§ 75). While this vocalization was probably complete in early Middle English, as shown by the spelling of Orm (§ 71, n.), the signs were still sometimes written as hēh (hēg, hēȝ) 'high,' lęȝen (lęȝhen) 'lay.' Otherwise the voiceless spirant ȝ (h) is found only medially in the OE. combinations ht, hþ, which both became ȝt, written also ht, gt, ct, ȝht, ght, less commonly ȝth, gth, cth. Examples are riȝt (riht) 'right,' kniȝt (kniht) 'knight,' driȝten (drihten) 'lord,' and heȝte (hęȝt, hiȝt) 'height,' siȝte 'sight,' with change of þ to t in accordance with § 100. ME. ȝt is sometimes written st by confusion of these high-pitched palatal sounds. The OE. combination rhþ had become rþ, as in mirþe 'mirth,' and such forms as ME. fē 'money, fee,' spring from OE. forms which had lost the final h, as fēo beside feoh; cf. also ME. þur beside þurȝ (þurh) 'through.' The voiced palatal spirant ȝ (ȝh) is found medially as above until fully vocalized after vowels to form diphthongs, after r or ĭ to ī, as mirīe (OE. myrge, myrige) 'merry,' birīen (OE. byrgan) 'bury,' sīþe (OE. sigeþe) 'scythe,' drīe (OE. drȳge) 'dry.' Finally in stressed syllables the voiced spirant had probably become unvoiced, but in unstressed iȝ (OE. ig) the voiced spirant also became ī, as in bodī (bodȳ), hōlī (hōlȳ). ME. belī (OE. belg, belig) no doubt comes from the form with parasitic i, compared with that with g which gave w after l as in ME. belwe (belou) 'bellows.'

Note 1.—In early Ml. the voiceless spirant is still spelt h as in Old English, and the voiced spirant g, ȝh as in Orm.

Note 2.—The dialects agree in general, though in Nth. OE. ht remained guttural as in Northumbrian. Sth. has a larger number of palatal spirants, owing to the larger number of palatal vowels in that dialect, as leȝhen (liȝhen) from WS. hliehan, beside Ml. lahhen (lauhwen, lauwen) from OM. hlœhhan 'laugh.' Sth. also retains ī from OE. ig in the present tense of OE. weak verbs of the second class (§ 6).

104. The Middle English guttural spirants ȝ (h, ȝh)–ȝ (ȝh), voiceless and voiced without much distinction of signs, are also of Teutonic origin and of as limited occurrence as the palatal spirants. They cannot occur initially because not so appearing in Old English, OE. guttural spirant g having become a guttural stop before ME. times. While occurring in medial and final position they later became vocalized after vowels to form diphthongs (§ 47), or the voiced spirant became w after l or r, after n̆ was absorbed (§ 75). The voiceless ȝ remained voiceless throughout the period only in the OE. combination ht, as in taȝte (tauhte) 'taught,' douȝter 'daughter,' fouȝten 'fought,' pouȝt 'thought.' When final it remained voiceless until finally vocalized in the preceding diphthong which had been formed (§ 66). Examples are þoh (þouȝ)

'though,' slōh (slouȝ) 'slew,' þurh (þurȝ) 'through.' The OE. medial voiceless guttural hh became voiced and developed as the voiced guttural through ȝh to w, as in lauȝen (lauwen) 'laugh,' couȝen (couwen) 'cough.' The preterit singular sauȝ has its w from the plural sawen (OE. sāwon), and þorw (þorow) developed from þoruȝ beside þurȝ. The medial voiced spirant ȝ remained as ȝ (ȝh) until vocalized after vowels to form diphthongs, after ŭ to strengthen the preceding vowel, after l, r, to w. Examples are drauȝen (drawen) 'draw,' ōȝen (ōwen) 'owe,' fuȝel (fūel, fōwel) < OE. fugel 'fowl,' folȝen (folwen) 'follow,' sorȝe (sorwe) < OE. sorh, f., 'sorrow.' When final, the original voiced spirant had become voiceless and fell in with that sound as above. Examples are douȝ 'dough,' plouȝ 'plow.' Such forms as ME. schō 'shoe' rest upon the forms which had lost final h in Old English, as scō beside scōh (cf. § 103).

Note 1.—In early Ml. h was still written for the voiceless guttural, and g (gh, ȝh) for the voiced: cf., however, halechen for more regular halȝen (halwen) 'saints', halechede for later halȝede (halwede) 'hallowed' of 'Chronicle.'

Note 2.—The dialects agree.

THE CONSONANT H AND ITS COMBINATIONS

105. The ME. breath consonant h, essentially a spirant of palatal or guttural character, occurs in general as in Old and Modern English, that is only in initial position, or initially in the second element of compounds. It had been regularly lost, however, from the OE. initial combinations hl, hr, hn, as in lēpen, 'leap,' ring, nute 'nut,' and sometimes also initially in unstressed words as it for OE. hit. In unstressed syllables it regularly disappeared as in fostrild < OE. fōstorhild* 'nurse.' OF. h, in words of Teutonic origin, falls in with OE., ON. h, as in hardī, harneis 'harness.' In words of Latin origin h, though frequently written by scribes, was not pronounced. This accounts for the double forms eremite–hermit, abit–habit, onōur–honōur. The OE. combination hw was retained in Middle English, though early written wh as by Orm, sometimes with the characteristic Nth. qu as in 'Genesis and Exodus.'

Occasionally wh (hw) is reduced to h, as in hō for whō (§ 106). In OE. hēo initial h became ȝh, as in ȝhē, ȝhō 'she.'

NOTE.—Nth. agrees with Ml. as to h, but uses qu (quh) for wh, showing a strengthening of the original hw to kw. Sth. shows a more frequent loss of initial h, as in ā for OE. hē, hēo, and abben 'have.' In Kt. the orthography lh, nh for OE. hl, hn, perhaps indicates a retention of the original combinations.

THE SEMIVOWELS, LIQUIDS AND NASALS

106. The ME. semivowel w, which appears only in Teutonic words, though a few are from Romance sources, springs from OE. w, though limited by its vocalization to form diphthongs (§ 47). To words with OE., ON. w were added a few from Anglo-Norman which had retained an original Teut. w instead of the usual OF. gu. Examples of the latter are waiten 'wait,' wāfre 'wafer,' wāge, walop, werre 'war,' werreien (werrīen) 'make war.' Teut. w was not retained before i and hence an OF. g appears in such words as in § 97. In Teut. words w disappears between an initial consonant and a following o (u), as in tō beside twō 'two,' þōng beside þwōng 'thong,' sōte beside swōte 'sweet,' hō beside whō (hwō) 'who.' In sǭ, alsǭ, the disappearance of w was earlier than in the other words, perhaps as early as late Old English (cf. § 42). w also disappears initially in a few unstressed words of common breath groups, as nas for ne was, nēre for ne wēre, nille for ne wille, nǭt for ne wǭt, God ǭt (God wǭt). OE. cw, ON. kv (=kw) were generally written qu, under French influence, and with them fell in OF. words with qu together with a few with OF. c (=k)+ue, ui as quēre 'choir,' squiēre (squīre), squirel. For AN. queint, aqueinten see § 53. Similarly gu (=gw) springs from OF. g+ue, ui in anguische 'anguish.'

NOTE.—The dialects agree, but Nth. also has qu (quh) for OE. hw, and w was preserved in twā, quā, &c. in which OE. ā had not become ǭ (ō).

107. The ME. semivowel ȝ (y) is exclusively of Teutonic origin, and springs from the OE. semivowel g as in ȝēr 'year,' ȝǭke 'yoke,' ȝung (ȝông) 'young,' or the OE. palatal spirant g as in ȝēlden

'yield,' ȝȳrd (ȝard) 'yard.' Before i, OE. g is sometimes vocalized as in icchen (OE. gyccean) 'itch,' Ipswich (OE. Gipeswīc), Ilchester (OE. Gifelceaster), and in unstressed īsikel (OE. īsgicel) 'icicle.' Similarly in the OE. unstressed prefix ge also became i (y), though regularly preserved only in Sth. ME. ȝ sometimes develops initially before a palatal vowel as in ȝork (OE. Eoforwīc), ȝōū (yōū) from OE. ēow, the latter perhaps by influence of ȝē (yē) 'ye.'

108. The ME. liquids l, r, do not differ in general from their Teutonic or OF. originals. In OE. words l disappears before and after ch, as in swich, such (OE. swilc) 'such,' which (OE. hwilc), ech (OE. ālc) 'each,' müche beside müchel (OE. mycel), wenche beside wenchel (OE. wencel). The combination rld sometimes becomes rd in werde 'world.' The OE. metathesis of r remains in Middle English, and some new examples of metathesis appear as fresch, þreschen 'thresh.' Double forms of some OF. words are found, owing to OF. double forms as marbre–marble, purpre–purple.

Note.—In Nth., l before k does not disappear as before the corresponding ch in the other dialects; cf. swilk, quilk 'such, which.'

109. The ME. nasals m, n, ŋ (=n before k or g) do not differ from their Teutonic and OF. originals, so far as preserved. OE. final unstressed m in inflexional endings had become n in late Old English. ME. final unstressed n in similar position or in unstressed words tends to disappear throughout the period. This affects especially the en of verbal endings, and such unstressed words as an (a), ēn (ē), nēn (nē), būten (bute, but) 'but.' Some stressed words show a similar loss at times, as morwe(n), gāme(n), maide(n), ēpe(n), seve(n).

Note.—In Nth. infinitives no final n was received from OE. times. This indicates the beginning of the tendency to lose inflexional n, a tendency that was more pronounced and rapid than in Ml., far more than in Sth.

THE AFFRICATIVE COMBINATIONS

110. The ME. combination ch, as in church (tsh), occurs in native and Romance words. In native words it springs from the OE.

palatal stop c (cc) before palatal vowels, as initially in chirche, chīld, cheste, cherl, cherren 'turn,' chēse 'cheese,' chaf 'chaff'; medially in wrecche 'wretch,' spēche 'speech.' After a palatal vowel OE. c became ME. ch when final in unstressed words and syllables, as in ich 'I,' which, swich 'such,' Ipeswich 'Ipswich'; sometimes in stressed words as lich 'body,' pich 'pitch,' French, owing to inflected forms with OE. c in medial position or possibly in some cases to analogy of corresponding verbal roots. By analogy also ch appears in chōsen, pp. for OE. coren. On the other hand ch is replaced by the palatal stop k in the infinitive and other present forms of some verbs by analogy of the pres. 3rd sg., which had no ch; examples are sēken beside sēchen 'seek,' wirken (wirchen) 'work.' In Romance words ch appears before a, au in those from Central French, before e, i in those from the Picard dialect, beside NF. c (k) for the former and c (=s) for the latter. Examples are charme, charge, chaunge, chaumbre, prēchen 'preach,' aprōchen 'approach,' cherischen 'cherish,' chisel, chimeneie 'chimney.' For doublets with NF. c (=k) beside OF. ch, and OF. c (=s) beside Picard ch, see §§ 96, 101. For OE. s + palatal c, see § 102.

Note 1.—In 'Chronicle,' c is still written for OE. c, but Orm uses ch which continues to prevail.

Note 2.—As Old Northumbrian suffered no palatalization of OE. c, Nth. has c (k) in place of Ml. Sth. ch; cf. caf 'chaff,' calk 'chalk,' mikel, ik 'I,' quilk 'which,' swilk 'such,' sēk 'seek,' wirk 'work' (§ 94, n.). Sth., on the other hand, shows a greater number of ch forms, owing to the greater number of palatal spirants in West Saxon; cf. Sth. chēld (chald) 'cold' from WS. ceald, with Ml. Nth. cōld from OAng. cāld, and mičkel with ch after an original guttural vowel.

III. The ME. voiced combination g (j), as in judge (dzh), corresponding to the voiceless ch above, occurs also in native and Romance words. In native words it springs only from the OE. voiced palatal stop g in gemination (cg) or in the combination nğ (=n + dzh). Examples are briğğe 'bridge,' eğğe 'edge,' heğğe 'hedge,' seniğen (singen) 'singe,' criniğen 'cringe.' As the OE. combinations cg, ng could not occur initially, most such words with ğ, j (=dzh) are of Romance origin. OE. cg (ege) in the present tense of verbs was displaced by analogy of the 3rd sg. in which ǧ (=dzh) had not developed (cf. § 165). Examples are seien (seyen) 'say,' leien 'lay,' bȳen 'buy.' In Romance words ME. ǧ, j represents OF. ǧ, j, as in gentil 'gentle,' general, geant (gīant) 'giant,' joie 'joy,' jęlōūs 'jealous,' engīn 'engine,' chargen 'charge,' juggen 'judge,' cāge, plegge 'pledge.' In proper names with initial I (J) in the MSS. it becomes difficult to determine accurately, especially in Biblical names, whether they are from Old French or adopted directly from Latin with initial I=V. It seems safe to assume that OF. Biblical names only gradually displaced the OE. and Latin, such words as Jēsus, Jǭhan (Jǭhn), Jāmes, Jordan, Jerusalem being adopted before the more unusual as Jōsēph; cf. Orm's Josæp, and Iōsēp (Iōsēph, Ōsēp), Iācōb (Ācōb) in 'Genesis and Exodus.'

NOTE.—Nth. shows no palatalization of OE. cg, ng and the voiced guttural stop therefore appears, as in brig 'bridge,' lig 'lie,' big 'buy,' meng 'mingle, disturb.' Sth. retains the voiced affricative in verbs, as sęǧǧen 'say,' būǧǧen 'buy.'

GENERAL CHANGES AFFECTING CONSONANTS

112. Certain general changes which affect consonants more or less regularly may best be treated together. The most important of these for Middle English, Vocalization, has already been explained as it affected the voiced spirants ȝ (h), rarely v, and the semivowel w in the formation of diphthongs (§ 47). Similarly the voiced spirant ȝ after ĭ, ŭ was completely vocalized, causing compensatory lengthening when the preceding vowel was not long (§ 75); cf. also the vocalization of ȝ in the suffix iȝ (§ 103). Attention has also been called to the vocalization of the initial voiceless spirant ȝ (=y) in § 107. Other consonants are more stable, but medial v is also vocalized in hāst, hadde, and in OF. pōvre (pōre) 'poor.' The final voiceless f suffers the same change in the OF. ending if, as in bailȳ beside bailif, jolȳ beside jolif. Medial k is completely vocalized in māde from makede, and d in dīst for didest. The ME. ending we, from OE. we, ge, during the period vocalizes to a syllable written ou (ow), as in sorow < earlier sorȝe (sorwe). Virtual vocalization in breath groups accounts for such forms as nille (ne wille), nas (ne was), nō̤t (ne wō̤t), § 106. The opposite tendency, Consonantizing, rarely occurs, and then only initially, as ȝork (OE. Eoforwīc) 'York,' ȝō̄w, § 107.

NOTE.—Nth. carries the vocalization of k, v still further, as in tā 'take,' tān 'taken,' mā 'make,' hā 'have,' gīs 'gives,' and allied forms.

113. Voicing and Unvoicing. The most noteworthy voicing of consonants in Middle English is the regular shift of initial f, þ, s, to v, voiced þ, z in Sth. English. In Ml. the most common shifting was that of s to z in unstressed inflexional syllables of late Middle English, as indicated by the occasional spelling with z. OE. medial hh must also have become voiced before developing into the second element of the diphthongs, § 104. Besides these, voicing is rare, as perhaps of OE. c (k) to g in bedgen, beggen* if from OE. bedician, and OF. c to g in sugre 'sugar,' graunten 'grant.' OF. t became d in jupardȳ, dīamaund 'diamond,' waraund 'warrant.' Unvoicing of d to t occurs frequently in preterits of weak verbs ending in ld, rd, nd, vd, as bilte 'built,' girte 'girded, girt,' wente 'went,' lefte 'left,' and sometimes in past participles, as nempnet 'named,' glifnit 'glanced,' § 93 n. Unvoicing of initial OF. b to p appears in putten (OF. bouter), purse, pudding (OF. boudin).

114. Assimilation and Dissimilation. Assimilation is common, as in all periods. Thus f becomes m before m, as in wimman (wumman) from OE. wīfman, lemman from OE. lēofman; n becomes l in elle < elne 'ell,' mille < milne (OE. mylen, myln). By partial assimilation the dental nasal n becomes the labial nasal m before a labial, as hemp, OE. henep, brimstō̤n < ON. brennistān, noumpīre < OF. nonpere, comfort < OF. confort. Assimilation also accounts for the disappearance of h in mirþe < OE. myrhþe 'mirth,' and c, g before þ, t or d in lenten (leinten) < lengten 'spring, lent,' strenþe (streinþe) < strengþe, dreinte < drencte 'drenched,' meinde < mengde 'mingled.' þ in the combination rþf is assimilated and disappears in Norfolk, and þ is assimilated to f in Suffolk, to s in Sussex, OE. Norðfolc, Sūðfolc, Sūð Seaxan. The stops are more stable, but t is assimilated to s in blessen < OE. bletsian, best < betst, last <latst*, Essex < East Seaxan; d becomes s in gossip, gospel < Godsib, Godspel, and n by back assimilation in winnow < windwian. Back assimilation after d, t (s) also accounts for atte < at þē, and tat < and þat, is tat < is þat, wōst ū < wōst þū (§ 100). It is virtual assimilation also, when such a form as such results from swilch through swuch. Dissimilation has often been limited to such substitution of l for r as in OF. purple < purpre. So ME. pilgrim for pelerin. But a spirant has also been dissimilated to the corresponding stop, as þ to t in the combination f, s, ȝ (h) +þ. Examples are þefte < OM. þēfþe (WS. þīefþe), leste < OE. þȳ lāes þe, nostrils < nosepirles, siȝte < OE. gesihþ, heiȝte, OM. hēhþu (WS. hīehþu), sleiȝte < ON. slægþ, 'sleight,' (cf. § 100). A voiced spirant þ after the continuant r, especially before r, n (en), has become the voiced stop d as in murdre < OE. morþor, afȳrden < OE. aforðian, burdene beside burþene < OE. byrþen.

Note.—In the dialects such examples as Nth. s from OE. sc in unstressed words and syllables must be set down to assimilation; cf. § 102, n. 2.

115. Metathesis is occasional in Middle English. Thus sk in the verb asken (OE. acsian, axian) probably springs from a late metathesis of ks, since OE. sc would have given sch (sh). Metathesis of r appears in fresch 'fresh,' preschen 'thresh,' but probably depends on OE. forms in gras, rinnen (rennen) 'run.'

116. Substitution. One consonant seems to be substituted for another, though the cause is not clearly apparent, in coude < cōuþe 'could,' quod < quoþ (OE. cwæð). In the latter ð must first have become voiced in the breath group between vowels, and the substitution in both cases may be due to the preference for a stop between continuants. By analogy of forms without grammatical change (Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 233), consonants due to this influence are regularly replaced by their originals, but a few forms remain, as the verb sēþen–soden (pt. and pp.), or the past participles used as adjectives, lǭren (lorn), forlǭren (forlorn), cǭren (ycǭren) 'chosen.'

117. Ecthlipsis. The loss of a consonant through assimilation has been illustrated. The most common case of loss under other circumstances is that of final unstressed inflexional n, mentioned in § 109. Under a similar influence final n, which is not inflexional, is also lost in some cases. Examples are a(n), ǭ(n), morwe(n), seve(n), ǭpe(n), tǭ(n) 'toe.' OF. final t also disappears in plai(t) 'plea,' peti(t) 'petty.'

118. Addition. A stop consonant is frequently added finally in word or syllable after a continuant, the kind of stop depending upon the preceding, and its voiceless or voiced character on the following sound. Thus the labial p intrudes after m at the close of the syllable in nempnen 'name,' emptȳ, dampnen 'condemn,' solempne 'solemn,' tempten 'tempt,' the first two from native, the last from Romance sources. Similarly before a vowel or voiced consonant b is intrusive after m in þumbe (OE. þūma), crumbe (OE. cruma), schambles (OE. sceamol–sceamles) 'shambles,' brembel 'bramble,' þimbel 'thimble,' slumbren 'slumber.' The voiceless dental t is added at the close of the syllable after the dental s in listnen 'listen,' glistnen 'glisten,' behest (OE. behās), anzēnst 'against,' bitwixte, and finally after the dental nasal n in the French derived tīraunt, fẹ̄saunt 'pheasant,' parchment, pāgeant. The voiced d is added after n, l in voiced company, as þunder, kindrēd, expoünden, jaundīce, alder (OE. alra) 'of all,' and after final n in sound, riband, no doubt because of more frequent use before a vowel or voiced consonant. Less commonly a liquid l, r is added after a stop or spirant, as in principle (OF. principe), manciple, syllable, chronikle, philosǭphre (OF. philosophe), provendre (OF. provende). N (y) has also been added in *nizt*ingāle, messengēr, passengēr. By incorrect breaking of the breath group an initial t has been added in tǭ < þat ǭ(n), tōþer < þat ōþer, an n in newt < an ewt, nǭnes (nǭnce) < þen ǭnes.

INFLEXIONS

Introductory

119. As compared with Old English, most changes in the inflexion of Middle English words may be summed up under the one head of simplification of forms. This simplification, too, far from being exceptional in the history of language, has taken place naturally and gradually under the influence of phonetic change and analogy. How far it had gone during the period may be briefly shown. The noun, in general, had come to have but a single form for all plural cases, and usually but two forms for the singular; the strong adjective and adjective pronoun but one form in the singular, and one in the plural; the verb also shows a reduction in the number of personal endings and in the number of tense and mode forms. The former influence, phonetic change, had made dissimilar inflexional endings indistinguishable; the latter influence, analogy, had caused the substitution of more common forms for the less common, until they had wholly displaced the latter. Both influences were strong in late Old English, and their strength was no doubt increased by the unusual linguistic conditions after the Conquest. From this time, for a considerable period, English was less frequently the language of government and of a national literature, while to a less extent it was influenced by the use of Anglo-Norman on English soil and by the gradual introduction of new words from foreign sources.

Note.—This is not intended to imply that there was any considerable influence of the foreign language on English inflexions. Not a single inflexional form in the English of common people to-day cannot be accounted for by influences within English itself, and foreign influence should be assumed only beside the native, or when the latter fails to explain the phenomenon. While inflected tense and mode forms were reduced in number as mentioned above, it must be remembered that the compound forms with auxiliaries were increasing.

120. Specifically the most general phonetic change affecting inflexions from Old to Middle English was the weakening of a, o, u in unstressed inflexional endings to e, as in most other unstressed syllables (§ 80), and their consequent union with e already common in inflexion. This had followed upon the late OE. weakening of unstressed inflexional m to n, as in the dative plural of nouns, adjectives and disyllabic pronominal forms. Except in the earliest period also, all words show syncopation of final e before words beginning with a vowel or h, and frequent loss of final unstressed n. These were followed during the period by the total loss of final unstressed n in inflexional endings, and in late Middle English by final unstressed e, whether belonging to the inflexion or the stem. Owing to these phonetic changes, which obliterated many of the differences between the different genders—for example the only difference between weak masculines and feminines in nouns and adjectives—the distinctions of grammatical gender in nouns, adjectives, and adjective pronouns was quickly lost. The most general analogical change was the substitution of the more common for the less common form. Specifically it may be pointed out that in the noun the accusative is probably the case-form of greatest frequency and therefore of greatest influence, and in the adjective and adjective pronoun, owing to the loss of grammatical gender, the neuter prevailed over masculine or feminine. In the personal pronouns, the more frequent use of the dative had almost obliterated the accusative before the close of Old English. In verbs, the third person of the indicative was more common than the other present forms and prevailed in its root over the others (§ 165). In the strong verbs the four stems tended to become three, either the preterit singular prevailing over the plural, or the preterit plural and past participle, when alike, prevailing over the singular preterit.

Note.—It is significant of the influence of accusative and oblique case forms that nouns adopted from Norse appear in the stem form found in the accusative singular, and nouns and adjectives from Old French almost invariably have the form of the OF. oblique case singular rather than the nominative singular. Cf. § 136.

121. That grammatical gender had about disappeared in early Middle English is clear from the loss of feminine forms for the adjective and the pronoun (except the personal), and the almost entire loss of inflexional forms based on feminine and neuter originals in Old English. Even when inflexional forms which belong to older feminines or neuters are preserved, as an occasional genitive singular and a plural in e, and some neuter plurals without ending, there is little reason to suppose that they were regarded as connected with grammatical gender. They are more probably forms which had not yet fully assumed the common inflexion, based on that of masculine nouns. As an added evidence of the loss of grammatical gender, it may be noted that no foreign-derived noun assumed grammatical gender in English. When grammatical gender disappeared, natural gender took its place, as in Modern English. One of the earliest evidences of this is the assumption of natural gender by such words as wīfe, maiden, which were neuter in Old English, and woman, lēfman 'leman' which were masculine.

NOTE.—As usual, what is said above applies to the Midland dialect. In Nth., the loss of inflexional final n had taken place even in OE. (Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 276, anm. 5; § 354, 2, 363, 1, 365, 2), as indeed the inflexions had been simplified in other respects. The result is that Nth. shows greater simplification than Midland even in the earliest period. Sth., on the other hand, was somewhat more conservative than Ml. It retains a greater number of inflexional forms, especially in the earliest period, as also some distinctions of grammatical gender. Even in Sth., however, natural gender begins to prevail over grammatical, as shown by feminine pronouns referring to such words as wumman, lēofman 'woman, leman.' Further details of dialectal usage will be given under inflexions of nouns, pronouns, &c.

THE NOUN

122. Most Middle English nouns are inflected in one of two ways, according as they do or do not end in weak e in the nominative singular. Both these declensions are based on the forms of OE. masculine strong o (a)-stems, as shown by the plural in es (OE. as). These OE. masculines were assisted in their influence, as in genitive singular, by similar neuter stems, which did not differ in inflexion except in the nominative-accusative plural. The normal endings of these two declensions are as follows:

		I.	II.
Singular,	N. A. V.	—	e
	G.	es (s)	es
	D.	— (e)	e
Plural,	N. A. G. D.	es (s)	es

123. Instead of es, is (ys) also occurs occasionally, especially in Northern. Forms in parentheses are less common. In addition, there are occasional forms, based on the retention of older inflexional endings, which are so uncommon as not to be considered normal in any sense. Such are plurals without ending, based on the OE. neuter plural of long stems, and those in en (e), based on the OE. weak declension. The first usually belong to declension I, the second to declension II, and will be treated under those heads (§§ 127, 132).

NOTE 1.—Early Midland, as represented in the 'Chronicle' and Orm, differs mainly in the somewhat more common retention of older forms, as of dative singular in e, and of plural forms without ending or with en (e). In the selection from the 'Chronicle,' out of the first twenty-one plurals of different words, sixteen have es (s), three have no ending, one has en, and one e. This does not include two umlaut plurals, which of course belong under § 133.

NOTE 2.—In Nth. of the earliest times from which a literature is preserved, these two declensions have largely become one, owing to the loss of final e, the change being completed by the middle of the fourteenth century. Nth. also commonly shows syncopation of e in the plural, less commonly in the genitive singular. A Nth. genitive without ending, especially in proper names, sometimes occurs. Sth., on the other hand, preserves many plurals in en, based on the OE. an of weak nouns, while there are some other peculiarities, as follows. The dative singular of declension I more commonly preserves e, and the genitive plural sometimes has forms in e or ene. Nouns of declension II, besides having en in N. A. D., have en (ene) in the genitive plural. Texts differ considerably in these respects, and plurals in en are gradually replaced by es (s) forms. For instance, out of thirteen different plurals in the selection from the 'Poema Morale,' ten end in es, two in en, one in e. In the 'Juliana' selection, out of the first twenty different plurals, eleven have es (s), eight en, one no ending. In the selection from 'Robert of Gloucester,' out of the first twenty-four plurals, nineteen have es (e), three en, and one no ending.

124. The First declension includes nouns ending in a consonant or in any vowel except unstressed e. It may be illustrated by dōm 'doom,' dai 'day,' trē (trew) 'tree,' tǭken, as follows:

SINGULAR

N. A. V.	dōm	daȝ, dai	trē (trew)	tǭken
G.	dōmes	daȝes, daies	trees, trewes	tǭknes
D.	dōm[e]	daȝ[e], dai[e]	trē, trewe	tǭken (tǭkne)

PLURAL

N. A. G. D.	dōmes	daies (dawes)	trees, trewes	tǭknes (tǭkenes)

125. To this declension belong most OE. o (a)-stems and long wo-stems; long masculine and neuter i- and long masculine u-stems, which had in Old English assumed the inflexion of o-stems in the main; some OE. ā-stems which had not assumed, from the accusative and other oblique cases, inorganic e in the nominative; and some anomalous nouns, as those having mutation, which had become regular by the loss of their anomalous inflexion. The few OE. ā-stems which did not assume inorganic e may have become masculine or neuter in Old English, as ME. rērd (reord) 'speech,' beside rērde (reorde). Special mention should be made of OE. feminine long i- and long u-stems, which had no inflexional final e in the accusative singular and show some variation between declensions I and II in Middle English. Their appearance without final e may be due to the influence of the accusative singular, possibly to change of gender and resulting change of inflexion, as in wiȝt 'creature,' flōr 'floor,' werld, hand (hǭnd). Those with final e may have assumed it in Old English (cf. Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 269, anm. 1), as nēde. Here belong OE. feminine long stems ending in a vowel, as sǭ 'sea,' tǭ 'toe,' bē 'bee,' slǭ 'sloe,' whether originally strong or weak. Such words, as all others ending in a long vowel, assume s only in gen. sing. and the plural.

126. It is impossible in a single table, except a very complex one, to represent all variations due to ME. orthography or other causes. The most prominent may be briefly mentioned. The ending of the genitive singular, as of the plural, is sometimes is (ys). Loss of e in the dative singular, common even in early ME., is increasingly frequent until that case becomes like the nominative-accusative, as in Modern English. In certain expressions, however, an OE. dative singular in e still survives. Examples are on līve (< līf) 'alive,' tō bedde, tō wedde 'for a pledge,' for fēre 'for fear.' Disyllabic stems in el, en, er often show syncopation of the root e when assuming an inflexional ending, as in tȳken above[1]. Even when the spelling shows retention of the stem vowel, syncopation is usually to be assumed for the spoken form. Syncopation, often loss of inflexional e, occurs in polysyllables accented on the first syllable, as pilgrimes, rivēres (pronounced as if spelled pilgrims, rivērs) beside humours, piloūrs (pelēr) 'robbers.' The orthographic variations of words with new diphthongs, as dai (dai), are numerous, but will be clear by reference to the phonology. Thus 'Genesis and Exodus' has dai (dei), dages (daiges, dais) 'day, day's, dayes,' and a plural dawes is also found, based on the development of OE. ag to aw (§ 55). The latter has usually been displaced by a plural based on the singular, where OE. æg became ME. ai (ai). Occasionally, however, a new singular daw develops from the plural dawes. Stems ending in f, þ, s show voicing of these consonants before a vocalic ending, as in genitive (sometimes dative) singular and the plural. Only in case of f to v, however, is the voicing indicated orthographically.

127. Beyond those noted above, there are but few exceptions to the regularity of the common plural form. The most important is a plural without ending in the case of certain OE. neuters, or in words that have associated themselves with them. Examples are folk, þing 'thing,' gēr 'years,' swīn 'swine,' hors 'horses,' shēp

[1] Cf. Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 244.

'sheep,' dēr 'deer,' nēt 'neat cattle,' wǣpen 'weapons.' Most of these gradually adopted the usual es (s) ending, though a few remain uninflected in the plural to modern times. Occasionally words which were not OE. neuters, as fugel, fish 'fowl, fish,' are uninflected in the plural when used in a collective sense, as in Modern English. Variation in the plural of the root finals f, þ, s has been noticed in the preceding paragraph.

128. Foreign derived words were adopted in the stem form or that of the accusative singular or oblique case when that differs from the stem. Thus ON. words do not appear with the nominative inflexional r, but with the accusative singular as od 'point,' bol (bōle) 'tree-trunk,' bark, garþ 'yard,' Orm, ON. oddr, bolr, bǫrkr, garðr, Ormr. Similarly, where the OF. oblique case singular differs from the nominative, the former is regularly adopted, as in OF. degrē, castel (chastel), dōl (dēl) 'grief' < OF. degrez, castels (chastels), duelz. The apparent exceptions, so far as OF. words are concerned, probably represent differences in OF. usage as tempest, poverte, beside tempestē, povertē. Only in armes 'arms' was an OF. plural directly borrowed, and this the more easily because it agreed exactly with ME. plurals in es. Borrowed words generally assume the native inflexion in its entirety. Thus ON., OF. words regularly assume native endings, as the gen. and pl. es (s), though OF. nouns ending in s often remain uninflected as cas 'case,' pas 'pace, pass,' and proper names as Ēnēas, Prīamus, Pērs 'Pierce.' Occasionally other borrowed words, especially Biblical names, remain uninflected in the genitive singular, as Adam soule, Dāvid lǭnd, following mediæval Latin usage.

Note 1.—In early Midland some further traces of inflexion are found, as in the nom.-acc. pl. in as in the 'Chronicle' occasionally, and a gen. pl. in e, a dat. in e (on) rarely; cf. wintre, OE. wintra 'winters.' So Orm has a similar genitive in such expressions as allre kīnge king 'king of all kings,' dēofle follc 'folk of devils.'

Note 2.—As already indicated (§ 123, n. 2), Sth. is much more conservative in inflexions than Midland or Nth., and retains many older forms, as e, in the dat. sg., e, ene (en) in gen. pl., en in dat. pl. Many nouns, also, which belong to declension I in Ml., have assumed en in the plural in Sth., and hence belong to declension II. This is especially true of OE. short stem neuters and ā-stems.

129. The Second declension includes all nouns with final unstressed e in the nominative-accusative singular, and may be illustrated by ēnde (ende) 'end,' helpe 'help,' soule 'soul,' þewe 'habit, custom,' as follows:

Singular,	N. A. V.	ēnde	helpe	soule	þewe (þeuwe)
	G.	ēndes	helpes	soules	þewes
	D.	ēnde	helpe	soule	þewe
Plural,	N. A. G. D.	ēndes	helpes	soules	þewes

130. Here belong most OE. jo and short wo-stems; the majority of ā (jā, wā)-stems; short and many long feminine i-stems; short u-stems; the great body of weak nouns, which had early lost final n; and such others as had assumed inorganic e in the nominative singular. OE. feminines (sometimes masculines) ending in g (h), by influence of the oblique cases, assume ȝe, later we, as sorȝe (sorwe) 'sorrow,' furȝe (furwe) 'furrow,' arwe 'arrow,' while side by side a form with final ȝ (h) may exist, as furȝ (furh). OE. nouns ending in f assumed ve of the oblique cases, as lēve 'permission,' glōve 'glove.' OE. neuter wo-stems had no w in the nom.-acc. sg. or pl. and so do not assume it in Middle English, as mēle 'meal,' smēre 'ointment,' tēre 'tar.' OE. short feminine wa-stems assume we from the oblique cases, as schadwe 'shadow,' sinwe 'sinew,' and long stems show double forms sometimes, as mēde, mēdwe 'mead, meadow,' corresponding to forms with or without w in Old English. ME. schāde is possibly from OE. scead neut., and not sceadu the wā-stem. OE. short neuters with e from u in nom.-acc. pl. sometimes assumed e in the singular, as blāde 'blade,' dāle, bēde 'prayer,' hōle 'hole,' dōre 'door,' ȝōke 'yoke,' and a few masculines which may have become feminines, as sēle (OE. seolh) 'seal.' ME. mēre (mare) 'mare' is from OM. mere (WS. miere), not OE. mearh, masc. OE. masculines ending in eg acquired inorganic e, perhaps under the influence of the greater number of such words which were feminine. Some original weak nouns have a plural in en, but, for the Midland dialect, are not sufficiently numerous to warrant treatment in a separate declension. Even when they have en plurals, es plurals are often found side by side with them.

131. A so-called genitive singular in e rarely occurs, but such forms may be better explained as essentially compounds. Examples are helle pīne 'hell punishment,' chirche dure 'church door,' rōde cross 'rood-cross.' All such words have originally, or have assumed, inorganic e in the nominative, so that the form is merely the uninflected one which so commonly enters into compounds, whether marked by a sign of union or not. In the dative singular, n is rarely added, more especially in rimes with forms regularly ending in n. As these occur mainly in south-east Midland texts of the earliest time, they may be due to the influence of the Sth. dialect, in which this peculiarity is more common (see Note 2 below), or they may be connected with the influence of the plural en forms.

132. The most important peculiarity of the plural is the retention of en (n) forms from the OE. weak declension, and the extension of this occasionally to nouns not originally weak. The whole number of such nouns is relatively small, and they decrease throughout the ME. period, until the only relics left in MnE. are oxen, rarely eyen in poetry, and brethren, children, kine, to which this ending has been extended. Examples in 'Gen. and Ex.' are wunnen 'customs,' fēren 'companions'; in 'Bestiary,' willen 'wishes,' ʒen 'eyes.' 'Gen. and Ex.' also shows the extension of this en to OE. strong nouns, as cōlen 'coals,' treen (trēn) beside trees 'trees,' mēten 'meats,' stēden 'places,' sunen beside sunes 'sons.' Owing to its early date and its south-east Midland dialect, the number of such forms in this poem is greater than in others, especially in rime, where the usage can hardly be relied on as showing the forms of ordinary speech. More rarely still, plurals in e are found, as in 'Gen. and Ex.' elne 'ells,' senwe 'sinews,' fēre 'companions.'

NOTE 1.—In early Midland a gen. sg. in e is occasional, as in Orm's sāwle 'soul's,' frōfre 'comfort's,' asse 'ass's,' wicche 'witch's.' Probably in all these cases the intrusion of s was resisted by the close connexion with the following noun. Rarely also, gen. plurals in e are also found, as Orm's sāwle 'souls',' shaffte 'creatures'; compare the retention of en in true compounds, as Sunenndaȝȝ 'Sunday,' uhhtennsang 'early morning song.' Plurals in en are also somewhat more common in this period, as halechen 'saints' in the 'Chronicle,' wawenn 'walls,' hallghenn 'saints,' ēȝhne (ehne, ehhne) 'eyes' in 'Ormulum.' Orm also has occasional e plurals, as hallfe 'halves,' shaffte 'creatures.'

NOTE 2.—Nth. is even more radical than Midland in giving up the old weak plurals in en, but a few still appear in 'Cursor Mundi,' as oxen, eien 'eyes,' ȳren beside ēres 'ears.' Occasionally no inflexion occurs, as in heven blis, heven king, which are essentially compounds. In other respects Nth. does not differ markedly from Ml. except as noted in § 123, n. 2. Sth. retains many more relics of the OE. declension, as a gen. sg. in e, and a dat. in en in case of many OE. weak nouns. Indeed en sometimes intrudes itself into the singular nominative-accusative forms. In the plural, forms in en, e, rarely a, are especially common in the earliest period, as also genitives in ene (en), e, and datives in en. All such forms gradually grow less frequent, and are almost entirely replaced in late Sth. by regular forms.

ANOMALOUS NOUNS

133. A few nouns belonging to minor declensions in Old English show some peculiarities of inflexion. They include nouns with mutation as the distinctive feature, nouns of relationship, and those with original stems in nd, os (es). Those of the first subclass are declined as follows:

Singular,	N. A.	fōt	man
	G.	fōtes	mannes
	D.	fōt(e)	man, manne
Plural,	N. A. D.	fēt	men
	G.	fētes (fōte)	mennes (manne)

134. Few examples of these mutation nouns are found in Middle English, since most of them had already lost all traces of mutation and had ranged themselves with the regular classes. It is difficult therefore to be certain of all forms, but there is a clear correspondence in the singular with the nouns of declension I. In the plural, the distinguishing feature is a nominative-accusative-dative with mutation but no ending. For the genitive plural, Orm has menness once, beside manne. An old genitive plural fōte occurs after a numeral, as twel fōte 'twelve feet' (dialectally to-day 'twelve foot'), 'Havelok,' 1054. Other nouns having mutation plurals are gōs 'goose,' mūs 'mouse,' lūs 'louse,' kū (cōwe) the plural of which, kȳn 'kine,' has assumed n by analogy of en forms. A few nouns have uninflected plurals without mutation, as mōneþ (OE. pl. mōneð) in twelve monthe 'twelvemonth,' niht in such expressions as seven niht 'seven nights, sennight.' ME. brēch, 'breech, breeches,' preserves the mutation plural of OE. brōc, and becomes singular.

Note 1.—Early Midland has a few other mutation nouns, as Orm's gāt 'goat,' gēt 'goats,' an old feminine.

Note 2.—Nth. does not differ from Midland, except in greater regularity of forms. Thus kū (kōū) 'cow,' has the regular mutation plural kī (kȳ) without the n of Ml. and Sth. usage. Sth. has a greater variety of forms, as gen. pl. monne, monnene (en), dat. monnen. So also fōten as gen. pl., and brēchen (brēches) a pl. of brēch 'trousers.'

135. The nouns of relationship are declined as follows:

Singular,	N. A. V.	fader 'father'	brōþer 'brother'
	G.	fader, fadres	brōþer, brōþres
	D.	fader	brōþer
Plural,	N. A. G. D.	fadres	brēþren, brēþere

The genitive singular without ending persists through the ME. period, though the form in es also occurs from the earliest time. The older mutated dative has entirely disappeared. Like these nouns are declined mōder, dohter (doȝter, douȝter) 'daughter,' sister, the last from Norse syster and the regular Midland form.

Note 1.—Early Midland, as Orm, has uninflected forms more commonly, with the mutated form of brēþre in plural nom., acc., and gen. Orm also uses susstress 'sisters,' from the OE. rather than the Norse form of the word.

Note 2.—Nth. prefers the uninflected form of the gen. sg., and the plural in es ('s) except for brōþer which has pl. brēþer for all cases. The mutated dehteres occurs sometimes, beside the more common dohteres 'daughters.' Sth. has both inflected and uninflected gen. sg., but prefers en plurals in the earlier period, as brōþeren (brēþeren), dohtren, sustren. The native English suster from OE. sweoster (swuster), rather than the Norse form of the word, is common in Sth. as in Chaucer.

136. Here may be mentioned the remnants of the OE. os, es stems, chīld, lamb, the only words that show peculiar forms. The natural developments of the OE. plurals, chīldru, lambru, were childre, lambre, and these are often found in Midland. Later they both assumed the en ending, first in Sth., later in Midland, though at the same time lamb acquired a regular plural lambes. In the North childre (childer) remained the plural form, and lambre gave place entirely to lambes (lambis). In Sth. another word of this class, calf, followed chīld in adding en(n) to the older plural in re, as calveren 'calves.'

137. Of stems in nd, only frĕnd, fēnd 'friend, fiend' preserve peculiarities, and these only in the earlier part of the period. In that period uninflected plural forms are found, as frĕnd, fēnd 'friends, fiends.' These were soon displaced by the regular frĕndes, fēndes. For the quantity of frend, see § 79, n.

THE ADJECTIVE

138. The adjective has lost all trace of its OE. inflexion except for an ending e, which is added to those not originally ending in a vowel, to form the plural, the weak form after a demonstrative or possessive pronoun, or rarely a dative case. So far as this trace of the older inflexion is found, adjectives in Middle English are declined in one of two ways, as they do or do not end in unstressed e. The weak form of the adjective is used after a possessive or demonstrative pronoun, including the definite article, and in the vocative. In either case, if the adjective follows the noun without the repetition of the demonstrative (definite article), it remains uninflected.

I. Strong

II. Strong and Weak

Singular grēne
Plural grēne

139. To declension I belong o (a)-stems, including polysyllables and short jo-stems, except a few which have assumed inorganic e; long wo-stems with vowel preceding w; and long u-stems which had gone over to the o-stems in OE. times. Monosyllables ending in a vowel, and usually polysyllables, are uninflected. The participle is also regularly uninflected, as often in Old English. Relics of older inflexion appear in aller (aldre), OM. alra (WS. ealra) 'of all,' both alone and in compounds as alderbest (alþerbest); and in occasional dative phrases, as of nȳne gōde, of harde grāce. In the latter part of the period the adjective tends to lose all trace of inflexion, as shown by poetry, especially when far removed from the noun. This is but preliminary to the total loss of final e in adjectives as in other words. Adjectives belonging to declension II are virtually inflexionless. Here belong OE. long jo-stems; short wo-stems; i and u-stems, except such as had taken the inflexion of OE. o-stems. Short wo-stems, ending in u with w in oblique case forms, usually end in we in Middle English, as calwe 'callow,' falwe 'fallow,' salwe 'sallow,' ȝelwe 'yellow,' but sometimes forms ending in e alone are also found, as ȝāre beside ȝarwe 'ready' (Shakespeare's yare), nāre beside narwe 'narrow.' OE. adjectives ending in palatal h (g) lose the final consonant as a rule, those with guttural h (g) develop forms in ȝe (we) from the oblique cases, as noh–nowe 'enough,' woh (wouȝh)–wowe 'bad,' sorful–soruful 'sorrowful,' walwe (OM. walg, WS. wealg) 'sickly,' arh(ȝ)–arwe 'cowardly.' OE. adjectives ending in f regularly change f to v before e.

140. Most borrowed words fall into the same classes as the corresponding native adjectives and are similarly inflected. Thus OF. adjectives not ending in a vowel assume the plural and weak e, as do native words, but OF. polysyllables which have acquired the Teutonic accent on the first syllable remain uninflected. The OF. seint often appears as scinte, but not exclusively before feminines. It is probable that both forms were adopted without regard to the OF. distinction of gender, though seinte would more naturally occur with certain feminines, as Seinte Mārīe (116, 15); but cf. Seint Mārīe (118, 2), Seinte Powel (200, 19). A few OF. adjectives with OF. s plurals are found, as in plāces delitāblcs 'delectable places,' goodes temporelles 'temporal goods,' but these are mainly in prose translated pieces, rarely poetry and that of the more learned poets, so that they can hardly have been living forms among the people.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland shows a somewhat fuller retention of older forms, though in the 'Chronicle' from the year 1132 there is no variation from what is given above.

NOTE. 2.—In Nth. the two declensions tend to become one by the loss of final unstressed e, as in nouns. The plural e of declension I has generally disappeared, and many adjectives ending in unstressed e have lost this ending, and have fallen in with those without e. Even the ending e of weak forms is not regularly preserved after a demonstrative. In early Sth. some further traces of OE. inflexions are still found, as a genitive singular in es, especially when the adjective stands without a substantive, but also in some other cases as summes weies 'some ways' in the 'Juliana' selection. So bīþen 'both,' with en, but such forms are rare. The distinction between strong and weak forms of adjectives not ending in unstressed e is generally preserved, as in declension I above.

COMPARISON

141. The adjective is compared by the addition of the endings re (later er) for comparative, est for superlative, from the OE. endings ra, ost (est) by regular vowel changes. At the same time comparison by use of the adverbs mōre, mōst begins to be used, especially with polysyllables. Long root syllables show shortening in comparative and superlative, in accordance with § 76, as grēt–gretter, swēte–swetter, but analogy of the positive often restores the long vowel. Adjectives from Old French are compared like native words, with a tendency to use the adverbial comparison with polysyllables. As to inflexion, comparatives could not assume e after re, and did not usually after the later er; superlatives like best, mēst, first were regularly inflected, as well as those with secondary stress upon the superlative ending, for example sēmlīest, but most superlatives remain uninflected.

142. As in Old English, a few adjectives are irregular in comparison. Thus ēld, lēng, strēng still retain mutated comparatives, as elder–eldest, lenger–lengest 'longer–longest,' strenger–strengest 'strong–strongest.' Some adjectives have forms of comparison with different roots from the positive, as gōd 'good,' bettre (betre)–best; ivil (ēvil), werse (worse, wurse)–werst (worst, wurst); the corresponding Norse forms are also found, as ille–werre, the former of which has remained to Modern English; michel (mikel, muchel, much), mōre (mō)–mōst (mēst); lītel (lite), lesse (lasse)–lēst 'least.' Forms of comparison based on adverbs, sometimes prepositions, are fer 'far,'–ferre (ferrer) 'farther,' dialectal farer–ferrest 'farthest'; fōre, first; ōver, ōverest; utter, utterest; upper, uppest. In nerre 'nearer,' ferrest 'furthest,' new forms of comparison have been based on older comparatives. The OE. superlative suffix māst appears as mēst, mast and mōst, the latter finally prevailing.

NUMERALS

143. Most numerals are adjectives in function, though often uninflected. The older use as nouns with a following genitive disappeared entirely, except in sporadic cases, as twelf fōte 'twelve feet' ('Havelok,' 1054), where the expression is a mere survival without syntactical significance for Middle English. The cardinal numerals are as follows, though no attempt is made to give every variant even of Midland: ēn (ē) 'one'; twō (tweyne, tweye) 'two, twain'; þrē (thrē) 'three'; foure (fowre) 'four'; fīf (fīve) 'five';

sex (sexe, sixe) 'six'; seven (sevene, seve) 'seven'; eȝte (eghte, eighte) 'eight'; niȝen (nīne) 'nine'; tēn; enleven (elevene, eleve) 'eleven'; twelf (twelve); þrettēne (þriltēne) 'thirteen'; fourtēne; fiftēne (fyftēne); sextēne (sixtēne); seventēne; eȝtēne (eghtēne, eightēne); niȝentēne (nīnetēne); twentī (twentȳ); þrittī; fourtī; hundred; þoūsen (þoūsende) 'thousand.' The ON. form hundreþ is found beside the English hundred, and from OF. the new numeral miliūn (millīoūn) 'million' was adopted. Counting by the score (ON. skor ME. skōre) is of Norse origin, as the word itself implies by its form.

144. The numeral ōn 'one' sometimes has the old genitive ōnes in early texts, and a plural of the same form in the expression for þē nōnes 'for the nonce.' Plurals of the adjective form, ōne, nōne, alōne, nō ōnes, also occur rarely. Such forms as fīve, sixe, twelve usually occur when standing alone or after a substantive, as well as in the plural. Two or three Old French numerals are rarely found, as cinq, sis 'five, six' in Chaucer. In early Midland the weakened forms of the first numeral, an (a), are common as an indefinite article, and these are found throughout the period as in Modern English. Owing to the tendency to drop inflexional n in unstressed syllables such forms as seve 'seven,' eleve 'eleven' result.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland has other inflexional forms of the first and second numerals, as Orm's āness 'one's,' ēnne, acc. masc.

NOTE 2.—Nth. forms naturally differ in phonology, as ān (ā), twā, aht (aght) 'eight,' but these differences will be easily understood. Nth. has lost all forms of inflexion for the numerals, except as in other adjectives; see § 138. Nth. also has some Norse forms which are less common in Midland, as twin, þrin, hundreþ 'two, three, hundred.' Sth., especially early Sth., preserves the gen. masc. and fem. ōnes, anre (āre), the latter also as dat. fem.; the acc. masc. and fem. as anne, ane. Sth. also has a gen. and dat. pl. of OE. twēgen, 'two,' as tweire, twam. These, however, soon give place to regular forms.

145. The ordinal numerals are firste (forme, firme), ðȳper and later secoūnde, þridde (þirde), ferþe (fourþe), fifte, sexte (sixte), ȝevepe (sevende, sevenþe), eȝtepe (eȝtende, eightepe), niȝepe (niȝende, nīnþe), tēzþe (tigþe, tēnde, tēnþe), endlefte (ellefte, ellevend, elevenþe), twelfte, þretēþe (þretēnde, þretēnþe), &c. Ordinals with ende, as sevende, are sometimes Mercian in origin, sometimes perhaps Norse. Old English ōþer is finally displaced by secōunde from Old French, though remaining pronominal as always. The ordinals regularly end in e, owing to their position as weak adjectives after þē 'the.'

NOTE.—In Nth. the forms with ende (end, and, ind) prevail, while in Sth. these are rare except in Kentish.

146. Multiplicatives are formed with the suffix fōld, OMerc. fāld (WS. feald), as ānfōld 'onefold.' The multiplicative idea, however, is expressed in various other ways, as by words meaning 'times' and by various adverbs. Distributives are ōn and ōn 'one and (by) one,' twō and twō, &c. Adverbs also, as betwēn, frequently express a distributive idea.

THE PRONOUNS

147. As to function, pronouns are either substantive, adjective, or both, and this distinction is important in understanding their inflexions in Middle English. Those that are wholly or mainly adjective in function, as possessives, demonstratives, and most indefinites, followed adjectives in their simplification to two forms, one for the singular and one for the plural. Those pronouns that are wholly or mainly substantive in function, as the personal, interrogative, and inflected relative, preserve, as their peculiar feature, an accusative-dative, generally based on an original dative and differing in form from the nominative. But the genitives of the personal pronouns have largely lost any substantive function, as of a substantive in oblique case, and their adjective functions are supplied by the possessives based upon them, together with new third personal possessives from the genitives of the so-called pronoun of the third person. The latter, therefore, though given in the inflexion, are enclosed in parentheses to indicate their more restricted use.

148. The Personal Pronouns proper are inflected as follows :—

	First		Second
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
N.	Ic (Ik, Ich) Ī	wĕ	þū (þōū, thōū)	ȝĕ (yĕ)
G.	(mȳn)	(ŭre, ōūre)	(þīn)	(ȝŭre, ȝōūre, yōūre)
D. A.	me	ŭs (ōūs)	þĕ (thee)	ȝūw (ȝōū, yōū)

149. It is scarcely necessary to give all orthographic variations of these and the other personal pronouns. Ic (Ik), Ī, though without capitalization in the manuscripts, are the normal Midland forms, as also ȝŭre, ȝūw (yoūre, youū) with initial ȝ (y) by analogy of ȝĕ (yĕ), and a vowel due to shifting of accent from the first element of the diphthong in OE. ēower, ēow, owing to constant use in unstressed position in the sentence. The form þŭ, owing to similar unstressed position and to assimilation, often becomes tū (ū, ōū) when immediately following a verb ending in t, as shalt tū (ū, ōū) for 'shalt thou.' For tē from þē, see §§ 100, 114. Dual forms are rarely found in the earliest texts, as wit-unc, gunker-gunc 'we two,' 'you two,' in 'Genesis and Exodus'; but these so soon disappear as to be quite irregular, and not deserving of a place in inflexion.

Note 1.—Early Midland does not differ materially. For ȝūre, ȝuw, the earliest 'Chronicle' has iūre, suggesting the older Northumbrian form iurre (Sievers, 'Gr.,' § 332, anm. 4). Orm also has ȝūre, ȝuw, showing the early addition of initial y.

Note 2.—Nth. does not differ from Midland. In Sth. Ich is the normal form for the first person. This is sometimes united with a following wulle (wòlle) 'will,' as ichulle (ichòlle) 'I will,' though each word is preserved separate in this book. Sth. also preserves genitive and accusative forms of the second personal pronoun without initial y, as ēower (ōwer) 'your,' ēow (ōw, ōū) 'you.' Besides, dual forms, which are almost unknown in Midland, are occasionally found.

150. The so-called third personal pronoun has the following forms:—

SINGULAR

	Masc.	Neut.	Fem.
N.	hĕ	hit, it	schĕ, shĕ (shŏ), hēo (hĕ, hŏ)
G.	(his)		(hire, hir, here, her)
D.	him		hire (hir), here (her)
A.	him [hin]	hit, it	hire (hir)

PLURAL

N.	hĭ (hў, hĕ), þei (þey, þai, þay)
G.	(here, hire, þeire, þeir, þair)
D. A.	hem, þem (þeim, þaim)

151. The genitives of the third personal pronoun, under the influence of possessives formed from the same case of the first and second personal pronouns, became possessives also, as shown by their inflexion in Middle English. The old masculine accusative singular, hine (hin), occurs rarely in early texts, as 'Genesis and Exodus'; but with this exception the masculine and neuter forms are quite regular. Those of the feminine singular nominative, on the other hand, are numerous, as they are based on OE. hēo or on the OE. demonstrative sēo, from which the prevailing form develops. The former appear as gĕ (ghĕ) in 'Gen. and Ex.,' gĕ in 'Best.,' hĕo (hĕ) in 'Flor. and Blanch.,' hyē (hĕ) in 'Adam and Eve.' Forms based on the latter appear first in the 'Chronicle' as scă, sgĕ (=syĕ), schĕ in 'Gen. and Ex.,' schĕ (shĕ, schēo, shŏ) in other Midland texts until, about 1300, they prevail over the others. The earliest plurals are based on the OE. plurals hĭ–here–hem. The prototype of the Modern English they, based on the Norse demonstrative which is first found in Orm, occurs once as þei in 'Gen. and Ex.' In general, however, it is not until the beginning of the fourteenth century that the nominative þei (þai, they) becomes common and not until late ME. that all forms with initial th (þ) prevail. Chaucer, as representative of London English, has thei (they), but here–hem. In some early texts, as 'Gen. and Ex.' hit (it) is plural as well as singular, and another plural his (is, es), perhaps based on the singular masculine or from Sth., is also found.

152. As in Old English, the personal pronouns are used reflexively, both alone and in combination with self. But such forms as mīself, þȳself, based on weak forms of the dative-accusative, or possibly combinations of the possessives and self used substantively, occur as early as the fourteenth century, and in Sth. a century earlier.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland the early use of scā 'she,' in the 'Chronicle,' and þeȝȝ (þeȝȝre), þeȝȝm 'they-their-them,' in Orm are the most important variations.

NOTE 2.—Nth. regularly has the fem. schŏ (scŏ), acc. hir, as also the plural forms with þ, þai (þei), þair (þeir), þaim (þaimę, þām, þāmę), but with an occasional ham 'them.' Sth. has preserved the masc. acc. hine beside the dat. him, and the fem. hēo (hă̄, hĕ̄, hĭ̄, hue). Variants for masc. hĕ̄ are also hă̄ (ă̄). The plural forms are based on those of OE., as nom. acc. hĭ̄ (hii, hue, hēo), here (hire, heore, hueore, hor), heom (ham, huem, hem, hom). Sth. also has a plural hise (is) 'them,' beside hĭ̄, &c. As reflexives, Nth. has occasional forms with the genitive instead of the dative-accusative, as yo͞urself, þairself, which seem to be unknown in Sth.

153. The Possessive Pronouns are mīn (mī, mȳ), þīn (þī, thȳ), his, hire (hir), ūre (ūr, oūr), ȝūre (ȝūr, yo͞ure, yo͞ur), here (her, hire, hir) with their (þeir) in late ME. These are declined like adjectives, with plurals in e when the singular does not end in that vowel. The weakened forms mī, þī, occur only before words with initial consonants. The predicate and absolute forms are mīn, þīn, his, here, ūre, ȝūre, here, with plurals in e. Late forms in s are ūres, ȝūres, heres, but these do not appear in the earlier part of the period. Some texts also show forms with n, as o͞uren, ȝūren, heren occasionally. The dual possessives uncer, incer appear only in the earliest period.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland (Orm) shows þeȝȝrs, the earliest absolute form in s, though perhaps due to Nth. influence.

NOTE 2.—Nth. works frequently show absolute forms in s, as hers, ūrs, yo͞urs, þairs, while they are unknown in Sth.

154. The Demonstrative Pronouns, like adjectives with which they agree in use, retain at most only singular and plural forms without distinction of gender. They are three in number, two from OE. masculine and neuter sĕ (late OE. þĕ) and þæt 'the,' 'that,' and one from the OE. neuter þis 'this.' The first, (þē) (thē), is invariable and is used as a definite article; the others are declined as follows:—

Sing. þat (þet, that) þis (þys, this, thys)
Plur. þō (þa, thō) þise (þis, this(e)), þēse (þēs, thēs(e)), þōs.

155. A relic of the OE. dative plural ðǣm remains in the expression for þē nōnes = for then ōnes 'for the nonce,' with final n from m transferred to the beginning of the next word. In a similar way final t of þat is sometimes transferred to a word beginning with a vowel, as þē tō, þē tŏþer (earlier þet ō, þet ōþer) 'the one, the other'; 'tother' is still dialectal English. For tē, tat, tō from þē, þat, þō after words ending in d, t, sometimes s, see §§ 100, 114. In the later period only atte = at þē 'at the' remains. A relic of the OE. instrumental þȳ appears in forþī, and as þē, in þē mōre and similar expressions. Occasionally 3on, 3ōnd (yon, yōnd) < OM. gon (WS. geon) are also found as demonstratives.

Note 1.—Early Midland shows þā for þō, in accordance with § 43, n. 1. The 'Chr.' once has þās 'these,' the OE. form, under the year 1132.

Note 2.—Nth. has þaas (þās) beside the more common þā (þaa) as plural of þat, as well as Norse þīr (þeir, þēr), and þiis (þēs) for the plural of þis. Sth., especially early Sth., shows a much fuller retention of OE. forms. Masc. are N. þē, G. þes (þē), D. þēn (þē), A. þēne (þē); Neut. N. A. þet (þē), G. þes (þē), D. þēn (þē); Fem. N. þēo (þē), G. D. þēr (þē). Plural N. A. þēo (þē), G. þēo, þē (þēr), D. þēo, þē (þēn). Also Masc. N. þēs, G. þisses, D. þisse, A. þisne; Neut. N. A. þis, G. D. as masc.; Fem. N. A. þēos, G. D. þisse. Plural N. A. G. þēos, D. þēos, þissen.

156. The pronoun of identity, ilc (ilk, ilche, īche, ȳche), is declined like an adjective. The demonstrative þē and ilk (ilke) often unite by elision of e, as þilke (þilche). The intensive self also appears as selve, selven.

Note 1.—Nth. has ilk, ilke invariably; Sth. ilch, ilche, later īch.

157. The Relative Pronoun of Middle English, which is used universally and in all periods, is þat 'that.' Beside it OE. þe is found for a time, but soon disappears altogether. These are both indeclinable. In the fourteenth century others appear, as which, pl. whiche (which), and the genitive whōs (whōse) dative whōm come to be used; also compound relatives as þat hē, þat his, &c., þē which, which þat, þē which þat.

NOTE 1.—In early Midland þe is common beside þat.

NOTE 2.—Nth. has þat alone in the earliest texts. Sth. uses þe, þet, later þat, and retains þe much longer than in Midland. In the early fourteenth century Sth. also has whan (wan, wanne, wane) 'whom, what,' evidently from OE. hwām by weakening of m.

158. The Interrogative-Indefinite Pronouns are whō (hō), whilc (hwilc, which), whęþer (hwęþer, whether) 'who, which, whether.' The first is declined as follows, without distinction of number:

	Masc.–Fem.	Neut.
N.	hwō (wō, whō, hō)	hwat (wat, what)
G.	hwōs (wōs, whōs, whōse)
D.	hwōm (wōm, whōm)
A.	hwōm (wōm, whōm)	hwat (wat, what)

159. The others are declined like adjectives, though whether is usually uninflected. Compound forms are also found, as hwō sǭ, hwōse 'whoso,' &c. Some Midland texts, as 'Genesis and Exodus,' have the spelling with qu for hw (wh) which is especially characteristic of Nth. Thus quō, quōm (quam), quat, quęþer, &c.

NOTE 1.—Early Midland shows the earliest use of wh for OE. hw, as regularly in Orm, a spelling which is not established until the last half of the fourteenth century.

NOTE 2. -In Nth. the spelling with qu for hw prevails with few exceptions. Nth. uses sum as well as swā in compound forms, as quāsum, quatsum. Sth. variants are hwoa beside hwō, and occasional forms with a, as hwas, hwam (hwan), hwase, 'whoso.' Sth. also has hwuch, hwuþer, for hwich, hwęþer, by influence of the preceding consonant on the vowel.

160. Other indefinites are al 'all'; anī (anȳ, ǭnȳ, enȳ) 'any'; azt (auzt, ought) 'aught'; nazt (naught, nought) 'naught'; bǭthe

'both'; ēlch (ēch, ȩche) 'each'; aiþer (eiþer, ouþer) 'either'; naiþer (neiþer, nouþer) 'neither'; everilc (everich, everi) 'every'; everīwhēr (whēre) 'everywhere'; manī 'many'; man, (men, me) 'man, one, they'; ǫ̆n 'one'; nǫ̆n 'none'; ǒþer 'other'; sum (som) 'some'; swilc (swich, such) 'such'; wiht (wight) 'wight.' Compound forms are also common, as everilcǫn (everichǫn) 'everyone,' manī an(a) 'many a,' sumdȩl 'somedeal,' sumkin 'somekind,' sumwat 'somewhat,' &c.

161. The indefinites are in general declined as adjectives, but a few special forms must be mentioned. An old genitive plural of al, aller (alder, alþer) is found occasionally, and in one or two compounds as a stereotyped form, as yōure aller cost 'cost of you all,' and alderbest 'best of all,' alder first 'first of all'; bǭthe 'both' sometimes has a plural bǭthon in imitation of nouns in en; a genitive of ǒþer, ǒþres 'other's' also occurs.

Note.—Nth. has allirs, bāþir (bāþirs) 'of all, of both,' instead of aller, bǭþe (bǭþen) above; also sāme 'same,' slike slīc, slī) 'such,' both Norse forms peculiar to Nth. texts or those influenced by Nth. Nth. also retains quōn 'few,' from OE. hwōn. Sth. retains many inflexional forms from OE. times, such as have been mentioned already under § 140, n. 2. In addition, Sth. has some plurals formed under the influence of the en nouns, as bǭþen 'both,' ōþeren 'others.' Other forms of special peculiarity are Sth. enī, ei 'any'; nenne, acc. sg. of nǫ̆n 'none'; summes, pl. of sum 'some.'

THE VERB

162. With the exception of the few anomalous forms, verbs belong to two classes as in Old English, the weak distinguished by a preterit tense with dental suffix, the strong by one with change of root vowel[1]. As in Old English, also, the verb has both inflected and compound forms, the latter made up by the use of verbs originally independent but weakened to the force of auxiliaries, as in Modern English. The inflected forms, all belonging to the active voice, are two tenses, a present and preterit; two modes, an indicative and subjunctive, or subjunctive-optative since it has the uses of both; an infinitive, and two participles, a present and a past. The compound forms are four indicative tenses, a future and three perfects, present, past and future; a present and past optative, or potential, with auxiliaries may, can, &c.; a present perfect infinitive and participle; and a passive with all the modes and tenses of the active, both inflected and compound.

163. The normal inflexional endings of the verb may be seen in the following scheme:

Inflexional Endings of the Verb

	Weak	Strong	Weak	Strong
	PRESENT		INDICATIVE PRETERIT
Sing. 1.	e		ede, de (te)	–
2.	est		edest, dest (test)	e (–)[2]
3.	eþ (eth)		ede, de (te)	–
Pl. 1, 2, 3.	e(n)[1]		ede(n), (ed), de(n), te(n)	e(n)
	SUBJUNCTIVE
Sing. 1, 2, 3.	e		ede, de (te)	e
Pl. 1, 2, 3.	e(n)		ede(n), de(n), te(n)	e(n)
	IMPERATIVE
Sing. 2.	e	–
Pl. 2.	eþ (eth), e	eþ (th), e, –

	ende (ande), inge		ed (d, t)	e(n), (e)n

[1] Loss of final n in all en forms grows increasingly common through the period. For dialectal peculiarities, see § 166, notes.

[2] Loss of final e is most common in this inflexional form.

164. So far as inflexional endings are concerned, a single class of weak verbs resulted from the three weak classes of Old English. In the present tense the endings of the weak and strong verbs are the same, but for slight differences in the imperative. Syncope and apocope of e are sometimes found, more commonly in the latter part of the period. Loss of final n also grows more common through the period, thus reducing the number of forms, while final e is regularly silent in late Middle English. The second and third person singular of the present indicative, occasionally the plural imperative, sometimes have es (s), the characteristic Nth. forms. Assimilation and simplification in the consonants of the third singular are occasional, as fint beside findeþ, sit beside sitteþ. Verbs ending in a vowel naturally show contraction with the vowel of the ending, as see, sēst, sēþ 'see, seest, seeth.' The imperative plural ending is reduced to e, or lost altogether when immediately followed by its pronoun. The prefix i (y), OE. ge, in the past participle is rarely found.

165. Analogy played an important part in the development of inflexional endings. Thus OE. verbal stems in r which retained i from the Teutonic jan ending, whether weak or strong, and verbs of the second weak class in īan (īgean) regularly lost i (ī) in all forms in which it occurred. Their infinitives came to end in en as in the case of other OE. verbs in an, and e in the 1st sg. pres., en in the plural and eþ in the imp. pl. Examples are hȳren (OE. herian) 'praise' for the OE. first weak class, swȳren (OE. swerian) 'swear' the only strong verb, and wunen (OE. wunian) 'dwell' for the second weak class. But OE. verbal stems in rgan (rgīan) retain ī from palatal g (ig), as birīen 'bury.' Similarly OE. verbal stems in cg, bb, whether weak or strong, lost those combinations in the present and assumed those of the third sg., as seien for seggen (OE. secgan) 'say,' liȝen, lien (OE. licgan) 'lie, recline,' hāven (OE. habban) 'have,' hēven (OE. hebban) 'heave, raise.' OE. libban 'live,' however, gave way before OE. lifian of the second weak class in preterit and past participle, the present of both verbs falling together by reason of both the above changes. For grammatical change in strong verbs see § 172.

166. The verb hāven 'have,' the only relic of the third weak conjugation which has not become regularized, has the following peculiarities: present hāve, hast (has), haþ (hath); pl. hāven (hāve); preterit, hafde (haved, hadde, had). Māken 'make' shows a similar loss of medial k, and clǭþen 'clothe' of medial þ, as māked (māde), cladde 'clad.'

Note 1.—Early Midland differs mainly in a somewhat fuller preservation of OE. forms. Analogical changes, also, had not been fully carried out, Orm having habben, libben, seǧǧen, leǧǧen from OE. forms with bb, cg.

Note 2.—Nth. agrees with Midland in the main, but the endings of the present indicative are characteristic, as 1 e (–, es); 2, 3 es; pl. 1, 2, 3 es (e when followed immediately by the personal pronoun). The infinitive has no final n and often no e remaining, as bīnd 'bind,' for Ml. bīnde(n). Syncopated forms of the present are exceedingly rare; the preterit of the weak verb has, in general, lost its personal endings; the present participle ends in and (e), and the prefix of the past participle, i (y), OE. ge, is wholly lost. Sth. retains OE. weak verbs of the second class with infinitives in īe(n) and the following endings in the indicative present; Sg. 1 īe (ī, ȳe, ȳ); Pl. 1, 2, 3 īeþ (īeth). OF. verbs in ier and sometimes those in eier or er fall in with this characteristic Sth. class. Sth. also often has infinitives in īen from OE. ian after r, and present stems with ǧǧ < OE. cg, bb < OE. bb. In the second and third persons es (s) for s is unknown; syncopated forms are very common, as also those with assimilation and simplification of consonants; the present participle ends in inde (seldom ende), later inge; the prefix i (y) of the past participle is often retained. All other verbs have eþ (eth) in the plural. The London dialect seldom retains the prefix i (y), OE. ge, of the past participle, as in Midland, but Chaucer makes extensive use of it in poetry, no doubt for metrical reasons; see any glossary of Chaucer under y (i).

THE WEAK VERB[1].

167. The weak verb in Middle English may be divided into two classes, distinguished by a preterit tense ending of ed (e) or de (le).

[1] Weak verbs are placed first because they are the most numerous class in all periods of English, and hence represent regularity in forms as compared with all other classes. Besides, this arrangement brings together all minor divisions, as strong, preterit-present, and the four anomalous verbs.

The first, with preterit in ede, includes verbs of the OE. first weak class with original short stems, except those ending in d or t; most verbs of the OE. second weak class by weakening of OE. ode to ede; strong verbs with short stems, when becoming weak by analogy; and such borrowed verbs as have ranged themselves with them because of similar formation.

168. Verbs of the second class in Middle English are distinguished by a preterit tense-ending de, or te after stems ending in a voiceless consonant. To this class belong polysyllabic verbs of the OE. first weak class, together with those having original long stems, or short stems ending in d or t, and those with mutation only in the present (Sievers, 'Gr.' § 407); the small number belonging to the OE. third weak class; some verbs of the OE. second weak class which have lost the connecting vowel of the preterit ending; strong verbs with long stems, when becoming weak by analogy; and such borrowed verbs as have ranged themselves with them because of similar formation, especially long stems.

169. The past participles of both classes usually end in ed. Certain verbs of class II, however, have d or t without connecting vowel, as those with mutation only in the present, and the few originally belonging to OE. class III. Besides, some verbs ending in d, t, have past participles without ending, by reason of earlier syncopation of e and simplification of the resulting consonant group, as fed, set. A few others, as those ending in a vowel or liquid, also have past participles in d; for example, flēn 'flee'–fled, hēren 'hear'–herd.

170. Some irregularities naturally occur. In addition to the cases in which te regularly belongs to the preterit and t to the past participle, those endings are sometimes found after consonants voiced in the present but becoming voiceless in the other forms after syncopation of the connecting vowel e; examples are lōsen–loste–lost 'lose–lost,' clēven–clefte–cleft 'cleave–cleft.' Some verbs ending in a liquid + d change d to t in preterit and participle, as wēnden–wente–went, bilden–bilte–bilt 'build–built,' gīrden–girte–girt

'gird–girt.' This last change is far less common in Nth. Some verbs differ in present and preterit by reason of special phonetic changes, as blenchen 'blench, blanch'–bleinte–bleint, mengen 'mingle'–meynte–meynt, § 48. In § 165 attention was called to the development of OE. palatal g after r as in birīen 'bury'; when OE. guttural g followed l, r it regularly became ȝ later w, as in folȝen (folwen) 'follow,' borȝen (borwen) 'borrow.'

171. Borrowed verbs, with few exceptions, assumed the inflexion of the weak verb, following one of the two classes above, according as they agreed with one or other in phonetic peculiarities. ON. weak verbs were easily received without much change, yet such verbs ending in ja, va (=wa) follow their presents without those endings in English. Examples are eggen < ON. eggja, gēren < gǫrva. Verbs from OF. sources almost invariably became weak in Middle English. In general their forms depend upon the form of the OF. present stem, as ME. chanten < chanter, plainen, responden < plaindre, respondre, but rendren, battren 'render, batter' < rendre, batre; mōven < movoir; aisen (ēsen), chāsen (cachen) < aisier, chasier (Picard cachier) 'ease, chace, catch'; but marīen 'marry,' carīen 'carry,' replīen 'reply,' studīen 'study,' denīen 'deny.' The present stem is especially important as accounting for ME. verbs in -ischen (issen) from the OF. pres. pl. in iss-, infinitives in ir, as finischen < finir 'finish,' florischen, nurischen, punischen, rejoissen 'rejoice,' traïssen (betraïssen) beside traïen (betraïen) 'betray,' obeischen (obeissen) beside obeïen 'obey.' Double forms in OF. account for certain peculiarities in ME. verbs, as the two forms clāmen, claimen 'claim.' A few verbs are formed from OF. past participles used as adjectives, as clǭsen, peinten 'paint,' fainten 'faint, feint' beside feinen 'feign,' enointen (anointen) 'anoint'; cf. OF. clore–clos, peindre–peint, feindre–feint, enoindre–enoint. In late Middle English other verbs were similarly formed from OF. or Lat. perfect participles first adopted as adjectives; cf. creāt 'created,' desolāte 'desolated' and the verbs from them. The greater number of borrowed verbs assumed the forms of class I, but some, especially those ending in a vowel, took the preterit de of class II; examples are crīen 'cry'–crȳde, payen 'pay'–payde. By analogy of lacchen–lauȝte–lauȝt 'seize,' and others of its class, OF. cacchen 'seize, catch' formed its preterit and participle as caughte–caught.

Note.—Nth. agrees with Ml. Sth. retains infinitives in īen from OF. verbs in ier, the latter falling in with OE. weak verbs of the second class in that dialect.

THE STRONG VERB

172. This class, as in Old English, includes gradation verbs, and those with original reduplication, the former including several minor divisions. The most noticeable change in strong verbs during ME. times is that many of them have become weak by analogy of the great weak class. On the other hand, a very few new ones appear, owing to borrowings from Norse and to rare analogical formations. Strong verbs also show a tendency toward the reduction of the two preterit stems of most OE. strong verbs to one, but this tendency was not fully carried out until modern times. It results naturally from the fact that even in Old English the preterits of reduplication verbs, of those of class VI, and some of class V had the same stem vowel in both singular and plural. The reduction of the four OE. stems to three was further influenced by the similar vowel in preterit plural and past participle of verbs belonging to class I and most of class III, and by the regularizing of consonants in verbs originally having grammatical change.

Note.—In this reduction of preterit stems the dialects differ markedly. Nth. has lost one stem, usually the plural, almost entirely. Sth. retains both forms as a rule. Midland stands between the two in this respect, though agreeing more nearly with Sth. through most of the period. With this general statement, dialectal differences in the various classes need not be noted, except in special cases. Differences due to the different phonologies of the dialects have been sufficiently exemplified in the part on Phonology.

173. The inflexional endings of strong verbs have been shown in § 163. The preterit second singular is often without ending. There are also few peculiarities of strong stems not already noted.

Attention has already been called to the change in present stems ending in cg, and those which retained i after r in Old English, § 165. Variations originally due to mutation in second and third singular present indicative have also disappeared by the influence of the unmutated forms, though mutation was never so common in the Anglian dialects as in West Saxon (Sievers, 'Gr.' § 371, anm. 5 f).

Note.—Nth. seldom preserves the e of the second person preterit indicative, while in Sth. it is not uncommon. Sth. also preserves OE. cg of verb stems as ǧǧ (= dzh) more commonly than Midland.

174. Gradation verbs belong to six sub-classes, as in Old English, with the following vowels in their various stems,—the present, preterit singular, preterit plural, and past participle respectively[1]:

1. ī – ō – i (ō) – i
2. ē (ū) – ǣ – ō (ǣ) – ō
3. i (e) – a (ǒ) – u (ou, ǒ) – ō, u (ou)
4. ǣ – a – ē, ǣ (ō) – ǒ (u)
5. ē (i) – a (ē, ǣ) – ē, ǣ – e (i)
6. ă (ē, o) – ō – ō – a (ā, ē, o)

175. Verbs of class I are exemplified by drīven 'drive'–drō̆f–driven (drō̆f)–driven; wrīten 'write'–wrō̆t–writen (wrō̆t)–writen; rīden 'ride'–rō̆d–riden (rō̆d)–riden. The introduction of the preterit singular vowel in the plural is especially to be noticed as suggesting the Modern English form. The verb stīȝen (stīen) 'ascend' has a pret. steiȝ as if from OE. stēah* of the second class or possibly from Norse. To verbs which regularly belong here from OE. times must be added two borrowed verbs, rīven 'rive' from Norse, and strīven 'strive' from French, the latter with strong forms by analogy. The weak verb chīden 'chide' also shows strong forms as early as the thirteenth century; compare chidden, a past participle, in 'Gen. and Ex.' 1927.

[1] The order of these sub-classes is unimportant, except that sub-classes 1–5 develop from the Teutonic e a, and 6 from a o gradation series. In England the reduplication verbs are sometimes called class I, and the above are then given in the order 6, 4, 5, 3, 1, 2. Streitberg, followed by Kaluza, adopts the new order 5, 4, 3, 1, 2, 6.

176. Of the contract verbs belonging to this class, only þēn (thee) 'thrive, prosper,' and wrēn (wrīen) 'cover, conceal' seem to be preserved. Even in Old English, too, these had been influenced by verbs of class II, so that some of their forms still correspond with those of that class. The first has preterit sing. þēg, pret. plur. and past part. þōgen, later þowen; the second, pret. sing. wrēȝ (wreigh), pret. plur. and past part. wriȝen (wreȝen).

NOTE.—Early Ml. and Nth. retain ā in pt. sg. in accordance with §§ 5, 43.

177. Class II early adopted a preterit plural with the stem vowel ō, by analogy of the past participle, though occasionally the vowel of the preterit singular was introduced into the plural. Examples of verbs which are fairly regular are shēten 'shoot'—shēt–shōten (shēt)–shōten; chēsen 'choose'—chēs–chōsen (chēs)–chōsen, the latter with s instead of r in preterit plural and past participle by analogy of the remaining stems (OE. curon–coren). A form with ū in the present is shūven 'shove'—shūf (shūf)–shōven–shōven; with change of consonant due to Verner's law, sēþen 'seethe'—sēþ–sōden–sōden; lēsen 'lose'—lēs (las)–lēsen, (lōst)–lōren; flēgen (flȳen) 'fly'—flēg (flei)–flōgen (flowen)–flōgen (flowen). Bēden shows influence of bidden (class V) in forms and meaning.

178. Weak forms are found beside the strong in some cases, as crēpen 'creep'—crepte–crept, beside crēȝ (crōp)–crōpen–crōpen, and lēsen 'lose'—lōste–lōst beside the strong forms above. The contract verb flēn (OE. flēon) 'flee' has the same preterit as flēgen (flȳen) 'fly,' and there is in other respects much confusion between the two. The other contract verb, tēn 'draw,' has preterit tōh (tei) and past part. tōgen (towen).

NOTE.—Grammatical change disappears during the period except in sēþen 'seethe,' though past participles sometimes preserve the original consonant when used mainly as adjectives.

179. Class III consists of two subdivisions as the present stem has e or i, the latter before a nasal as in Old English. Both classes show occasional intrusion of the vowel of the singular preterit into the plural. Verbs with e in the present stem are exemplified by helpen 'help'–halp (holp)–holpen–holpen; swellen 'swell'–swal–swollen–swollen. A few show peculiarities due to lengthening in accordance with § 72, as ȝēlden (yēlden) 'yield'–ȝōld (ȝāld)–ȝōlden (yōlden)–ȝōlden (yōlden). The verb fiȝten 'fight' has i from original e in the present stem, according to § 22, 2; its remaining principal parts are faȝt (faught)–foȝten (foughten)–foȝten (foughten). The verb meaning 'to become' (OE. weorðan, North. worþan) early appears as wurþen (worþen)–wurþ (worþ, warþ)–wurþen (worþen)–wurþen (worþen) without change of þ to d in the last two forms, and with u (o) in all stems, by influence of preceding w (§ 25). Similarly OE. swelgen appears as swelȝen (swelwen, swolwen) 'swallow,' and develops a weak past participle swolȝed (swolwed). Here also may be mentioned bresten 'burst' with preterit singular brast and brost (compare § 76, n. 2). OE. bregdan becomes breiden (brēden)–breid–broiden–broiden.

180. The more numerous subdivision, with i in the present stem before an original nasal + consonant, is exemplified by winnen 'strive, win'–wan–wunnen–(wonnen)–wonnen; drinken 'drink'–drank–dronken–dronken; springen 'spring'–sprang (sprōng)–sprongen–sprongen, the latter with ō in preterit singular, beside a, according to § 17. The o of preterit plural and past participle is of course orthographic for u (§ 27). A few verbs have lengthened vowels in all forms, as fīnden 'find'–fūnd (fānd)–fūnden (founden)–founden, the only others of this sort being bīnden, grīnden, wīnden 'bind, grind, wind.' The verb rinnen 'run' has a present, in e, as rennen, with the remaining forms regular. Similarly brennen 'burn' has e in the present, though like several others belonging to this class it has become weak. The preterit of ginnen 'begin' is frequently used as a preterit auxiliary in such expressions as gan gū 'went, did go.'

Note.—In late Nth. begin developed a weak pret. begōupe by analogy of cōupe. The pret. gan also appears as can, as sometimes in Ml.

181. Class IV is a small class, as in Old English, and it early shows a tendency to the introduction of the vowel of the past participle into the preterit plural, occasionally the preterit singular. Verbs which are most nearly regular are stę̄len 'steal'–stal–stēlen–stǭlen; shę̄ren 'shear'–shar–shēren–shǭren. With o forms as above, bę̄ren 'bear'–bar (bǭr, bēr)–bēren (bǭren)–bǭren; brę̄ken 'break'–brak brēken (brǭken)–brǭken. Quite irregular, as in Old English, are nimen (nemen, perhaps Norse) 'take'–nam (nōm)–nōmen (nāmen, nam)-numen, and cumen (cōmen) 'come'–cam (cōm)–cōmen (cāmen)–cumen (cōmen).

182. To this class, which originally contained brę̄kan 'break' irregularly, several others of class V began to attach themselves by assuming past participles with the vowel o beside e. Examples are given under the class to which they originally belonged.

NOTE.—For ǭ (eMl. Nth. ā) instead of ē (Sth. ę̄) in the pret. pl. of this and the following class, see §§ 18, 43.

183. Class V, also a small class in Old English, is made smaller during Middle English by the tendency of verbs originally belonging here to assume forms of class IV, and thus range themselves with that class by analogy. Examples of those that still belong here in all their forms are mę̄ten 'mete,'—mat–mēten–meten; ę̄ten 'eat'–ēt (at)–ēten–eten. Verbs with original i in the present stem (Sievers, 'Gr.' §§ 391–3) are exemplified by sitten 'sit'–sat–sēten–seten. The verb ʒiven (ʒeven), with i from original e, has preterits ʒaf–ʒēven, past participle ʒiven like the infinitive; besides, its initial ʒ gradually gives way to g, under the influence of Norse geve 'give,' as also in ME. ʒeten 'get' by influence of Norse gete. Irregular, by reason of the final consonants of the stem, is liğğen, later lien 'lie, recline,'–lay–leyen–leyen, with analogical present (§ 165). Bidden shows influence of bēden (class II) in forms and meaning. The preterit quoþ (quoth, quod), alone remaining from OE. cwedan 'say,' perhaps has its vowel o by lack of stress in the sentence (§ 18). The only contract verb retained, sēn 'see,' has also various forms for its remaining principal parts, as sey (saw, saugh)–seyen (sāwen, sǭwen, sayen)–seyen (sēn, sogen, sowen). Verbs which have been influenced by class IV are as follows:—

wrǣken 'avenge,'–wrak–wrēken–wreken (wrǭken).

spǣken 'speak,'–spak–spēken (spāken, spǭken)–spǭken (speken).

wǣven 'weave,'–waf–wēfen–wǭven (weven).

drīpen 'kill'–drap (drǭp)–drēpen (drāpen)–drǭpen.

ȝeten 'get'–ȝat (yǭt)–ȝēten–ȝeten (ȝǭten).

NOTE.—Contrary to the rule, change of s to r by Verner's Law remains in was–wēren, originally belonging here but defective and associated with bēn 'be.'

184. Class VI seems to present greater irregularities than in Old English, owing to various phonetic causes. Most verbs have lengthened vowels in present and past participle, as fāre–fōr–fōren–fāren, forsāken 'forsake'–forsōk–forsōken–forsāken. To these have been added tāken 'take'–tōk–tōken–tāken from Norse. Verbs with mutated presents suffer various changes. A new form with unmutated a appears in shāpen 'shape'–shōp–shōpen–shāpen, sometimes in stappen beside the prevailing steppen, which soon acquires weak forms as well. The infinitive of laȝhen (lauȝen, lauhwen) 'laugh'–lōh (lough)–lowen–loghen (lowen)–lauȝhen (laughen) must also have been influenced by the past participle (cf. Orm's lahhȝhenn. OE. sceððan 'injure' gave place to skāþen 'scathe' < ON. skaða, a weak verb. On the other hand, swǣren 'swear' and hǣven 'heave,' have retained present stems in e (ǣ), but have been influenced by verbs of class IV. Their principal parts are swǣren–swǭr (swar)–swǭren (swēren)–swǭren (swǭrn); hǣven–hǭf (haf)–hǭfen–hǭven. Verbs with stem in OE. g have forms like draȝen (drawen)–drōȝ (drouȝ)–droȝen (drowen)–draȝen (drawen). As in Old English standen 'stand' has n in the present and past participle only. ME. waxen 'grow,' originally belonging here, has fallen in with the reduplication verbs, and waschen 'wash' has both preterits, wōsch (wēsch, weisch). By analogy of verbs of this class, quāken 'quake,' a weak verb, has acquired a strong preterit quōk.

185. Contract verbs, slǭn (slǣn) 'slay' and flǭn (flǣn) 'flay' have the following principal parts: slōn (slǣn)–slōg (slug, slough, slow)– slōgen (slowen, slugen, slagan)–slawen (slayen); flōn (flēn)–flōgh (flow)–flowen–flawen (flain).

186. Verbs with original reduplication are regular in having in the preterit ē, from OE. ē, ēo, or ew from OE. ēow, while the vowels of the present and past participle differ considerably owing to various phonetic changes of OE. originals. Examples of these with preterits in ē are fallen 'fall'–fēl (fil)–fallen; lēten 'let, allow'–lēt (lat)–lēten (laten); hōlden 'hold'–hēld–hōlden. Those with preterits in ew are exemplified by blowen 'blow as the wind'–blew–blowen; growen 'grow'–grew–growen; hewen 'hew'–hew–hewen. The last example shows how the distinctive forms of Old English became one in Middle English, after which the verb frequently became weak. The verb hōten 'call, promise' (OE. hātan) has two preterits depending on the two OE. forms heht and hēt, as hiht (hight, highte) and hēt. At the same time hihte became present as well as past, and the OE. passive hatte 'am called' became a past. The OE. contracts fōn 'seize,' hōn 'hang,' soon gave way before new infinitives fangen, hangen under the influence of the past participles, while a weak fangen was adopted from ON. fanga and OE. hangian became Ml. hangen. Many of the reduplication verbs also have weak forms, as slepte, wepte, walkede, dradde, 'dreaded.'

THE PRETERIT-PRESENT VERBS

187. The preterit-present verbs show no exceptional changes from OE. times beyond the loss of some of their number, and of certain forms, as the infinitive. The more important forms in the several classes of strong verbs to which they originally belonged are as follows:—

I. Two verbs ōzen (owen) 'owe, have' and witen 'know'; inf. ōzen (owen); pres. indic. owe, owest, oweþ (oweth)–owen; pres. subj. owe–owen; pret. azte (ōzte, aughte, oughte); inf. witen; pres. indic. wōt, wōst, wōt–witen (wōt); pres. subj. wite; imp. wite; pres. part. witende (witinge); pret. wist (wiste); past part. wist.

NOTE.—Early Ml. has wāt, āʒen; Nth. āgh (awe) in inf. and pres. indic., aght in pret., in accordance with their phonologies. Negative forms of witen are niten-nōt (Nth. nāt) -niste, &c. Sth. has wüten, nüten, &c., from lWS. wytan, nytan.

III. Three verbs, cunnen 'be able, can' and durren 'dare,' þurven 'need'; inf. cunnen (cònnen); pres. indic. can (con), canst, can (con)–cunen (cunnen); pres. subj. cunne (cònne)–cunnen (cònnen); pret. cūþe (cōūth, cōūthe, cōūde).

Inf. durren (duren); pres. indic. dar, darst, dar–dor (dar); pres. subj. durre (dòre)–durren; pret. durste (dorste, dirste).

Inf. þurven; pres. indic. þarf, þarf(t), þarf–þurven; pres. subj. þurve–þurven; pret. þurfte (þorfte, þorte)–þurften.

NOTE.—Nth. has no such forms as con, cònne.

IV. Pres. indic. shal, shalt, shal–shullen (shul, shòl, shal); pres. subj. schule–schulen; pret. sholde (schulde, schold, scholde).

NOTE.—Nth has sal-suld in accordance with its phonology. It also retains pres. indic. mon 'remember, have in mind, must,' -mune; pres. subj. mune; pret. mònd (munde).

V. Inf. muʒen (mōwen); pres. indic. mai, miht (mai, mayest), mai–mōwen (mōw, may); pres. subj. mōwe–mōwen; pret. miʒte (mihte, mighte, moughte).

NOTE.—Nth. has only pres. mai, pret. might (moght).

VI. Pres. indic. mōt, mŏst, mōt–mōten (mŏst); pres. subj. mōte–mōten; pret. mŏste (muste).

188. In the earlier part of the period relics of several other preterit-presents are also found, as dugen 'avail' (class II), unnen 'grant' (class III); munen 'be mindful' (class IV), but these soon disappear, though a pres. and pret. of munen occur in Nth. (see above). Relics of the old strong past participles of these verbs are found in the adj.-adv. wis (iwis) 'certain, certainly,' and the adj. owen (eMl. Nth. ōʒen, āgen) 'own.'

THE ANOMALOUS VERBS

189. Four verbs are quite anomalous in the number and character of their forms. They are bēn (bē) 'be,' willen 'will,' dōn 'do,' gǭn 'go.' These have the following forms :—

1. Bēn (bē) 'be.' Pres. indic. am, art (ert), is (es), and bē, bēst, bēþ; plur. arn (āre), bēn (bē); pres. subj. bē, plur. bēn (bē); pret. was, wēre (wǭre, was), was; plur. wēren (waren, wǭren); pret. subj. wēre–wēren (wǭren); imp. bē–bēþ (bēth); past part. bēn (bēnę).

Note 1.—In early Midland, as Orm, sometimes a little later also, the present forms bēst, bēoþ, pl. sinden, are found, and sī as pres. subj.

Note 2.—Nth. has for present indic. sg. am, ert (art, es), is (es); pl. er (ar, ern, es); also third sg. bēs, pl. bēn (bēs); pret. sg. was (wes), pl. wēr (wēre, wāre, weir, was). Sth. has pres. indic. second sg. ert, pl. bǭþ (bēþ, būþ); subj. bēo, pl. bēon; pret. was, wǭre, was, pl. wǭren; imp. bēo–bēoþ; inf. bēon; past part. ibēon (ibēn, ybēn). Early Sth. also has the gerund, or inflected infinitive bēonne.

2. Willen 'will.' Pres. indic. wil (wol), wilt (wolt), wil (wol); plur. wiln (wil, woln, wol); pres. subj. wile (wole); pret. wolde (wilde), woldest (wost, wilde), wolde (wilde, walde, welde); plur. wolden (wold, welde). A negative form, nillen 'will not' also occurs.

Note.—Nth. has pres. indic. sg. and pl. wil (will, wille, wel); pret. wald (wild, weld). Sth. uses pres. indic. wülle (wülle, ich ülle, ich olle = ich wulle), wült, wüle; pl. wülleþ; pres. subj. wüle–wüllen; pret. wolde.

3. Dōn (dō) 'do.' Pres. indic. dō, dōst, dōþ (dōth); plur. dōn; subj. dō–dōn; imp. dō–dōþ (dōth); pres. part. dōende (dōinge); pret. dide (dēde); past part. dōn (dō).

Note.—Nth. has pres. indic. dō, dōs (dōse, duse); pl. dō (dōse, dōn); pres. subj. sg. and pl. dō; imp. dō-dō (dōs); pret. did (dēd)–did (dide); pres. part. dōand; past part. dōn (dune). Sth. has pres. indic. dō, dēst, dēþ; pl. dōþ (dōth); pret. dūde; pres. part. dōnde; past part. idōn.

4. Gǭn (gǭ) 'go.' Pres. indic. gǭ, gǭst, gǭþ (gǭth); plur. gǭn; pres. subj. gō̆–gō̆þ (gō̆th); pres. part. gō̆end (gō̆ing). The preterit is supplied by a different root, in the earlier period by ȝēde (ȝōde, ȝēde), OE. geēode, later by wente–wenten from wēnden 'wend, go.'

NOTE.—Nth. has inf. gān (gā); pres. indic. gā, gās (gāse, gais), gās (gāse, gais); pl. gās; pres. subj. gā–gā (gān); imp. gā ·gā (gān); gā (gās, gaes, gais); past part. gān (gāne, gain); pret. supplied by went. Sth. has inf. gō̆n; pres. indic. gō̆, gēst, gēþ (gēth); pl. gō̆þ (gō̆th); pres. subj. gō̆–gō̆n; pret. ēode (ȝēde, ȝōde).

THE ADVERB

190. Many adverbs in Middle English do not differ from their Old English forms, except for phonetic changes common to them with other words. They are based on adjective, substantive, and pronominal roots, and are both simple and compound. Simple adverbs, based on adjectives, end in e, lĭ̆ke (lĭ̆, lȳ̆), inge (linge). Those of the first class include adverbs which retain OE. e, or have e from a by weakening, as sōfte 'softly,' sōþe 'in truth,' sōne (OE. sōna) 'soon'; those of the second, adverbs which ended in līce in OE., and many which assumed this ending in Middle English, as hārdlīke (hārdlĭ̆) 'hardly,' sōþlĭ̆ke (sōþlĭ̆) 'soothly'; to the third, those ending in inga, enga, unga (linga, lenga, lunga) in Old English, as allunge 'wholly.' During the period those of the first class gradually lost final e, and thus had the same form as the corresponding adjectives. With them came to be associated many adverbs from Old French which had the same form as the corresponding adjectives, as just, verȳ, quīte. The second adverbial ending, lĭ̆ke, was gradually weakened until it became confused with the adjective ending lĭ̆ (lȳ̆), OE. līc, which henceforth came to be the distinctive adverbial ending and was greatly extended in its use with both native and foreign words. The third ending above is least frequent of all, and was not extended in the ME. period.

191. Adverbs, formed from the oblique cases of adjectives or substantives in Old English, also remain in Middle English. These are most commonly genitives in es, the masculine-neuter ending, as elles 'else,' unwāres 'unawares,' daies 'by day,' nihtes 'by night,' nēdes 'needs.' This ending was considerably extended in its use in Middle English, as to adjectives otherwise ending in e, inge (linge), and to nouns without regard to original gender. Old accusatives are lĭtel, līt 'little,' firn 'formerly,' ful 'fully,' ȝenōh (enough, anough). Old datives are sēlre, seldom, whīlom, relics of OE. dative-instrumental singulars or plurals. Neither of these last two case-forms was frequently used in forming ME. adverbs, and many formed in OE. gradually disappeared.

192. Pure pronominal adverbs are þō 'when,' þus 'thus,' hū (hōū) 'how,' whȳ 'why,' þan (þen), whan (when). Adverbs of place, based on adjective or pronominal roots, commonly have the ending en, from OE. an, as in case of those signifying 'where' or 'whence.' Examples of adverbs signifying 'place where' are innen (inne) 'in, within,' ūten (ūte) 'out,' fōren (fōrn, fōre) 'before'; of those signifying 'place from which' hennen (henne) 'hence,' hwennen (hwenne, whenne) 'whence,' ēsten (ēste) 'from the east.' To this class was added also some Norse forms, as heþen 'hence,' þeþen 'thence.' On the other hand, some of these adverbs have es instead of en in late Midland by extension of the es ending, as already mentioned above. A few adverbs denoting 'place whither' end in der, originally comparative, as hider 'hither,' þider 'thither,' and perhaps by influence of these ȝonder.

193. Compound adverbs are frequent, some being of OE. origin, some of Middle English formation. As belonging to the former, those ending in līke might be counted, although this had become a well-established adverbial ending in OE. Better examples are those ending in ward, OE. weard; as upward, sūþward 'southward,' and mēle, OM. mēlum, as dropmēle 'drop by drop.' To these were added in Middle English many ending in ful, dēl, 'part,' līme, whīle, way, wīse, and others. Still other compound adverbs are made up of a prefix, the relic of an older preposition, and a noun or pronoun, as besīde, away, adūne 'adown,' forþī 'because,' þerin 'therein,' þērof 'thereof.' Such adverbs as alway (always), sum- līme, sumwhīle, are made up of an indefinite pronoun and a noun, and such as within, withoūten (withōūte) of two adverbs.

Note 1.—In early Midland adverbs differ little from the later time except as they conform somewhat more nearly to OE. forms.

Note 2.—The principal variations of the dialects are as follows. Nth. shows the loss of final e in most adverbs, so that adjectives and corresponding adverbs are invariable as a rule. The ending līke was early weakened to lĭ (lў), and in its place Norse -leiki is sometimes found, as hardlaike 'hardly.' The ending inge (lingē) frequently becomes inges (linges), and the es ending is otherwise extended, as to numeral adverbs ānes 'once,' &c. The Norse adverbs of place are much more common, as hepen 'hence,' quepen 'whence.' Among compound adverbs, Nth. uses the Norse suffix gāte 'way, manner,' as in algāte 'always,' þusgāte 'in this manner,' while forms like ūtwith 'without,' forwith 'before,' are more common. The preposition on, when becoming a prefix, remains on (o), as in obove 'above,' onān 'anon,' onlīve (olīve) 'alive.' Sth. retains the e ending, even where wholly lost in other dialects, as in the numeral adverbs ēne 'once,' &c. The Sth. form of OE. līce is līche, which is not weakened to lĭ (lў), and inge (lingē) does not become inges (linges). The ending en (e) is more extended in its use. Norse forms are not found, and OE. on, when becoming a prefix, is weakened to an (a) as in alīve, abōūt, anēn.

194. The comparative and superlative of the adjective may be used as an adverb without change. In addition, a few adverbs not derived from adjectives have comparative endings. A few monosyllabic adverbs with mutation remain from OE. times, as bet 'better,' ēr (ēre) 'ere,' leng 'longer'; compare Sievers, 'Gr.' § 323.

THE PREPOSITION.

195. Little need be said of Middle English prepositions, since they present no serious difficulties, and show few changes not easily understood from the ordinary changes in phonology. Most OE. prepositions were preserved in Middle English, and some few were added from other sources, as Norse. Thus frē 'from' is derived from Norse frā, as is probably umb (um), cognate with OE. ymbe 'around.' Some few prepositions altered their meaning, as wiþ 'with,' which more commonly meant 'against' in Old English. In Middle English it ordinarily came to mean 'with,' doubtless through use in such expressions as fight with, in which it could have either signification. When this came to be true, mid in the latter meaning gradually disappeared. Simple prepositions from OF. were adopted in certain phrases, as par amūr, par fai, paraventure (paraunter), and certain OF. words came to be used as prepositions; examples are rūnd 'round,' except, maugrē 'in spite of,' sāve, acordaunt, later acording. Compound prepositions and prepositional phrases became common in Middle English, as ayein (again), ayeines, amōng, alōng, besīde, nēyhōnd (nērhōnd) 'near at hand, near,' tōward, ūttāken 'except.' OF. words were also united in these phrases as bi cause of, be rȳson of, in regard of, arōund, according tō.

Note.—It is naturally impossible to separate dialects on the basis of prepositions only, but some prepositions seem almost peculiar to certain dialectal divisions. Thus Nth. uses at and til (intil, until) for tō and untō, amēl (omēl, emēl, imēl) for betwēn, and wiþ more commonly instead of mid. Sth. has an (a) for on, tō, untō, and med for wiþ.

THE CONJUNCTION

196. Old English conjunctions in general remain in Middle English, subject to such changes as were natural to their phonetic forms. Among those deserving special mention are eiþer (eiȝþer) 'either,' ouþer (ōþer, or) 'or,' siþen (siþenes, siþe, sith, sepe, &c.) 'since,' Nth. sin, sen. Among correlative conjunctions, þē . . . þē remain from OE. þȳ : . . þȳ with different vowel by analogy of þē; but OE. swā . . . swā gave place to alswȳ . . . ase, or as . . . as. From OE. correlatives and preceding indefinite pronouns also arose the new correlatives of Middle English, as eiþer (ōþer) . . . or, neiþer (nōþer) . . . nor, in which or, nor are weakened forms of the indefinite ōþer, OE. āhwæðer, āwðer. The common negative of Middle English is ne, which often suffers apocope of e and unites with the following word as in Old English. The OE. nā, from ne + ā, remained sometimes in nō, as to-day in no better, no more of it, but at the same time a new negative nat (not), based on OE.

nāwiht 'naught,' came into use and gradually supplanted both of the others in most situations. Sometimes both ne and nat (not) were used in the same sentence. In Middle English also, the Norse negative nei (nay) was adopted, as was also the affirmative ei (ay) beside the OE. affirmative ȝes (ȝis, yes).

THE INTERJECTION

197. Middle English interjections come from Old English, as lō, ō (ōh), wō, with the weak forms la, a (later perhaps lā, ā, āh), wa (walawa). From Norse came wei (wai) 'woe,' weilawei (wailawai), and hō; from Old French alas, fȳ. The adoption of foreign interjections is probably mainly of literary origin.

SYNTAX

WORD ORDER

198. The order of words in early Middle English prose follows that of the older language in the freedom of word-position. This is especially true of the verb, which may appear at the end of the clause, that is after object or modifiers, or before the subject (inverted order). Examples of the first in principal clauses are: oc Crīst it ne wolde (1, 8); and tē Lundenisce folc him underfēng (2, 8); and tē king it besæt (2, 13); and hī tōgædere cōmen (2, 16). Subordinate clauses with final verb are even more common: þe þēr wǣron (1, 6); þā hē nān mōr ne mihte (1, 7); ðat hē mīlde man was (2, 27). The verb precedes the subject even more frequently than it ends the clause. Compare cōm Henrī (1, 1); was it noht (1, 8); warth þē kīng dēd (1, 18); and forhī him iuveden God and gōd men

'and because God and good men loved him' (4, 27); and in subordinate clauses, þā wiste þē kīng (1, 6); þā þēstrede þē dai (1, 14); þā diden hī alle wunder (2, 28). The subjunctive inverted appears in come þōū 'if thou shouldst come' (52, 8); wēre hē never sō hōlȳ man 'if he were, &c.' (74, 11). Poetical usage naturally shows metrical inversion, and some greater liberties are taken than in the modern period. As Middle English develops, the order of the modern language more and more appears.

NOTE.—In syntax, as in versification, there are few strongly marked dialectal peculiarities. Sth. is most conservative, Nth. most radical. For example, early Sth. tends to preserve the older word order. Nth., as later in development, shows the modern order; compare Rolle of Hampole, p. 143 f.

199. Other peculiarities of word order are not numerous. In the early time the appositive sometimes follows the noun, as in Henrī kīng and Henrī abbot (1, 1); Stēphnes kīnges (4, 28); þē kīnges sune Henries (5, 13). When the last usage gave way to a phrase for the appositive, it also follows, as in þē kīnges suster of France (7, 1). The predicate modifiers may precede the verb, as in gōdman hē wes (2, 3); þais hē makede men (2, 4); manī þūsend hī drāpen mid hūnger (3, 18). The adjective sometimes follows the noun in prose, but perhaps usually under foreign influence, as in ȝātes everlastand (101, 24); lufe ynesche (144, 14); þē hert sorowful and mēke (102, 23). It is common for the relative to be separated from the antecedent, as in āvre man . . . þe mihte 'every man who might' (2, 1); Tēobāld . . . þe was abbot (5, 17). The final position of the adverb, which later, as preposition, preceded the relative, is usual, as in hē þat al his trīst is tō 'he in whom is all his trust' (51, 15). In alle hī (2, 29), alle hē 28 20 the order is the reverse of what is now possible.

200. Middle English syntax is loose compared with that of to-day. This is shown by the unnecessary repetition of the subject, not only as in wan þē gōst it scholde gō (48, 5); þē bodī it seide (52, 9); þē wreche peoddare mōre noise hē mākeð (198, 27); but also in such cases as wanne hē is ikindled stille līð þē lēūn (14, 8), instead of 'when born the lion lies still'. So the appositive is sometimes loosely used instead of a closer syntax, as in Rogingham þē castel (4, 22); Vaspāsian hys tȳme (220, 7); Vaspāsian þē emperor hys tȳme (220, 17).

THE NOUN, ADJECTIVE, AND PRONOUN

201. The oblique cases of the noun retain some older uses. Thus the objective genitive persists, as in for ūre Drihtines luve 'for the love of our Lord' (4, 31); nāness kinness shaffte (12, 32). So the genitive of inanimate things, as in tē sȩes grūnd 'the bottom of the sea' or 'the sea bottom' (19, 23). The adverbial genitive remains in the phrases here þankes . . . here unþankes 'according to their pleasure . . . according to their displeasure', or 'willingly and unwillingly' (6, 31–32). The dative without to appears more freely, as in tē kīng iaf ðat abbotrīce ān prīōr 'to a prior' (1, 9); þē wærse hī wāron him 'to him' (5, 20); sais us 'says to us' (149, 19). It is used adverbially after certain verbs, as and benam him al 'and took away from him all' (5, 21); hē bitagte Iōsēp his ring (24, 11); us sal bēn hard 'it shall be hard for us' (27, 11). It is used as an old instrumental in þat God himselve ran on blōde 'on which God himself ran with blood' (78, 3); al his wlite wurð tȩres wȩt 'with tears' (28, 32). It expresses time in which, as in þis gēar (1, 1); þis gēare (2, 18). The accusative without preposition denotes duration of time, as in þā nigentēne wintre (3, 21); nigentēne wintre (4, 9). Two accusatives occur with certain verbs, as in al ðat hē cūthe āxen him (5, 19).

202. The adjective syntax is chiefly distinguished by frequent use as a noun. Compare for hęvīe 'for heaviness' (35, 20); for nō newe 'for no new love' (37, 14); hīdinges 'hiding places' (233, 22). The definite form (§ 138) occurs after a demonstrative or possessive pronoun, a noun in the possessive, in direct address, and when used substantively. The last use is illustrated by the examples above. Other examples of the definite form are tē

Lundenisce folc (5, 33); þē þridde wīse (8, 15); þiss Englissche bōc (13, 22).

203. The pronoun syntax differs from to-day in several particulars. It may be omitted as subject or object, as in ðat him brēcon alle þē limes 'that they broke', &c. (3, 13); wēnde tō begæton 'they thought to get' (7, 2); wrythen tō ðat 'twisted them so that' (3, 8). Again, the subject may be repeated in a pronoun, as wan þē gōst il scholde gō (48, 5); þē bodī il seide (52, 9). Lack of concord between pronoun and antecedent is not uncommon: give wē ilk ān pāre langāge 'if we give each one their language' (134, 5).

204. The personal pronoun is used reflexively, as in mē nogt wēren 'not protect myself' (22, 19); hē lutten him 'they bowed themselves' (25, 3). The plural of the second person is first used as a singular in but gē wið us sēnden Benjamin (27, 16). Yet the singular remains the rule long after the time of this selection. The genitive of the personal pronoun is used objectively, as in her nouþer 'neither of them' (6, 16); ūre nōn 'none of us' (28, 6). The dative without a preposition is used much more freely than at present: as indirect object in gūr silver is gū brogt agōn (28, 4); as dative of advantage or disadvantage in ðat him brēcon 'that they broke for them' (3, 13); annd fōrþedd tē þīn wille 'and accomplished for thee thy will' (8, 18); what hire wēre 'what was to her = the matter with her' (36, 19). An accusative for the genitive appears in wart it war 'became aware of it' (5, 12).

205. The demonstrative is sometimes used for the possessive, as in als thē ēom wes 'as his uncle had been' (2, 20); alle þē limes 'all their limbs' (3, 13). It is also omitted where necessary at present, as in ēvric man sōne rāvede ōþer þe mihte 'the other' (2, 1). It is used as an indefinite in wiþ þat hē mūde 'with that which he made', OE. wiþ þat þat hē macode (67, 16); þat understōndes þat Ī tell (134, 8). The relative pronoun is frequently omitted, as in Martin was gehāten 'who was called Martin' (1, 11). It precedes its antecedent, as in that þey receyve in forme of brēd, hyt is Goddes bodȳ (122, 5). The nominative-accusative is used for a dative in þat bērs of bāret bē ful irk 'to which', &c. (150, 2). The relative may refer to a genitive antecedent, as in in his ward . . . þat māked him 'in the custody of him who made him' (67, 28–29); þaire wyll þat aghte it 'the will of them that owned it' (147, 13)

THE VERB AND OTHER PARTS OF SPEECH

206. The verb does not always agree with its subject, especially if the latter follows, as in wes al unfriþ and yvel and rāflāc (2, 10); cōm tō Flǭrīs writ and sǭnde (46, 28). The copula is sometimes omitted, as in wēl mē 'well is to me' (32, 3). The impersonal verb is common, as in unnc birrþ 'it behooves us two' (8, 26); him līkede 'it pleased him' (14, 16); hem drempte 'it came to them in vision' (21, 13); mē wǭre lēvere 'it were pleasanter to me' (22, 21). Change from indirect to direct discourse or the reverse often occurs, as in passages at 27, 15–16; 29, 12 f.; 82, 14 f. The auxiliary of the passive for intransitive verbs is still the verb to be, as in dērde is cumen 'dearth has come' (30, 25); hē bēn cumen (35, 8); hū hit is went (42, 19).

207. The inflected tenses are still used with general force, the present for present and future, the preterit for all past time. Thus the preterit is a past perfect in þā was hē kīng strengere þanne hē ēvert ǭr was 'had been' (7, 23). On the other hand the compound tenses are also common, and make more explicit the time relations. The preterit tense is also used as a present in clauses of unreality, as hū ðǭ him līkede . . . migte nevre divel witen 'may the devil never know' (14, 16–17).

208. The subjunctive is common in both subjunctive and optative senses. Examples are fāre hē 'if he go' (16, 26); ðū it sǭge 'if thou shouldst see it' (19, 4); 3yf þoū hade wolde 'if thou hadst wished' (102, 20); wāre Henrī king 'Henry should be king' (7, 16); þat ōþer deide beforē 'that the other should die before [him]' (45, 2); hāve hē 'may he have' (77, 29).

209. The infinitive without to is common, as in unnc birrþ bāþe þannkenn (8, 26); dēde hem wassen 'made them wash' (29, 3); dōn bē 'made to be' (34, 13); wēnde hir finde 'thought to find' (40, 29). The infinitive as a verbal complement still persists, especially in Southern, as in þēr cōm . . . līðen 'there came . . . going' (191, 1–2); whan Arður cume līðen 'when Arthur may come' (191, 10). Occasionally a participle is used as a noun, perhaps under Latin influence, as in þē sēchand hym 'the [ones] seeking him' (101, 19).

210. Certain uses of adverbs and prepositions may be noted. Thus sǭ . . . sǭ are correlative, as in al sǭ briht sǭ it wēre day (83, 2); and so for as in al is man sǭ is tis ƹrn (16, 13). The preposition toward is divided, as in tō Gode ward (16, 21); tō ðē hevene ward (18, 9).

NOTE.—Nth. sometimes uses til (till) for Ml., Sth. tō, as in tō cum þē till 'to come to thee' (140, 2); till ēnd 'to the end' (141, 3). So also Nth. is characterized by the use of at for tō, as in noght at hīde 'nought to hide' (158, 5).

VERSIFICATION

211. Like modern English verse Middle English poetry is accentual, and the metrical stress regularly coincides with the principal or secondary stress of the word as usually pronounced. Yet ME. verse shows considerable variety of form. There are in this book examples of the older alliterative line, the Latin septenarius or line of seven stresses without rime, the same with rime, the four and five stressed couplets, and several stanza forms. All lines but the alliterative are prevailingly iambic.

212. The alliterative line is of complicated structure, its principal features being two half-lines of two principal stresses each, but without syllabic regularity. The half-lines are usually bound together by alliteration of the stressed syllables, one in each half-line, two in the first and one in the second, or two in each. Besides, there may be assonance in the final stressed syllables of the half-lines, or rime with more or less frequency. A good example of a verse matching the Old English scheme is,

Welle hēg is tat hil ðat is hevenrīche (14, 14).

But the alliterative syllable of the second half-line is often on the second, rather than the first principal stress, as in Bī wilc weie sǭ hē wille to dǣle niðer wēnden (14, 3).

Again, the alliteration may fail altogether in the second half-line, as in Ǭðer dūst ǭðer deu ðat hē ne cunne is fīnden (14, 6).

On the other hand, there may be two alliterative syllables in the second half-line, as in Figteð wið ðis wirm and fāreð on him figtande (17, 21).

Crossed alliteration of the forms abab or abba may also occur, as Drāgeð dūst wið his stert ðēr hē dūn steppeð (14, 5);

Ǭðer ðurg his nǣse smel smāke ðat hē negge (14, 2).

213. Rime sometimes appears in the alliterative line at the end of each half, as in

In a stǭn stille hē lai til it kam ðē ðridde dai (15, 12); or two lines may be bound together into a couplet, as in

His hǭpe is al tō Gode ward, and of his luve hē lēteð,

Ðat is tē sunne sikerlīke, ðus his sigte hē bēteð (16, 21–22).

Again, a couplet may rime finally and in its first half-lines, as

And tus hē neweð him, ðis man, ðanne hē nimeð tō kirke, Ǭr hē it biðenken can hise ēgen wēren mirke (16, 15–16).

Occasionally rime may appear as a tag to the preceding line, as at the bottom of page 14. The rime may entirely supersede alliteration as a binding force for the half-lines, and couplet structure results as on pages 15 and 19; compare also the selection from Layamon's Brut at p. 181. On the other hand alliteration has remained an occasional adjunct of all rimed verse; see § 218.

214. The septenarius without rime appears in the selection from the Ormulum (p. 18), and its couplet structure in the Poema Morale (p. 176) and Gloucester's Chronicle (p. 203). The first is stilted verse, the stress of the word not corresponding to the metrical stress, as in afterr (8, 13, and 20), unnderr (8, 17). In these and other cases we probably are to see the substitution of the trochee for the iamb, so common in modern verse. Orm's lines are invariably of fifteen syllables each. In other poems the first unstressed syllable may be omitted, as in

or after the cesural pause, as in

Wēl late ic habbe mē biþoht, bute mē God dō milce (176, 8).

Robert of Gloucester is considerably less regular in his verse structure, often omitting the fifteenth syllable (feminine ending) as well as the first, and occasionally unstressed syllables within the line, as well as sometimes misplacing accents.

215. The four-stressed line is normally of eight syllables, as the five-stressed is of ten. But any such line may have an extra unstressed syllable at the end, as in

And hāveð dempt Iōsēp tō bāle (21, 2);

As rīot, hasard, stywes and tavernes (237, 3).

Besides, a stressed syllable at the beginning of the line may do duty for the whole of the first foot, as in

Cūpen hē lēt fille of flūres (35, 15); or for the first after the cesural pause, as in

Þē duc þat þē ring fūnde (44, 13).

As in modern verse a trochee may appear for the first iamb, or for the first after a cesural pause, the latter as in Þē Admiral þǭ, wēl him bitīde (46, 9).

216. The loss of unstressed syllables has already been treated in §§ 80–90. In addition, final unstressed e is elided in poetry before a vowel or weak h. Sometimes it is also dropped before a consonant, as in Mē drempt(e) als ic was wun(e) tō dōn (22, 2).

Contraction and slurring in other cases will be clear from the principles given above.

217. Perfection in rime is naturally a gradual development. In the earliest verse even assonance is sometimes sufficient, as in

Đē kinges kuppe ic hadde on hǭnd ;

Đe beries ðǭrinne mē ðugte ic wrǭng (21, 27–28).

Rime in the consonant and not the vowel of the syllable may be found, as in Effraym—hem (24, 23–24). So rime of long and short vowels is not unusual, as in wīn—ðērin (22, 3–4); sperd—ērd (22, 29–30); Chanaan—forðan (24, 27–28). Rime words also differ in the quality of the vowel, especially open ē's and ō's often riming with the corresponding close vowels. Examples are spēd—frigtihēd (26, 29–30); lǭden—ðēden (29, 13–14); ǭn—Pharaōn (23, 29–30); gǭn—Symeōn (26, 3–4).

218. Alliteration has always been an ornament of English poetry. When it ceased to be the regular binding feature of the half-lines in alliterative verse, it continued as an occasional adjunct of the poetic line. In short lines, two or three stressed syllables may be bound together by this head-rime. In longer lines, four syllables may begin with the same consonant, or with the same or different vowels. Examples will be easily found in every selection.

Hē drōȝ forþ a rīche ring
His mōder ȝaf him at his parting:

Þē ring hē hāveþ forþ araȝt

Þē ring hēo wolde aȝē rēche

Sǭ hī wēre in here sorīnesse.

Þē duc þat þē ring fūnde

V. ADAM AND EVE

Ēve haþ Seþ yladde
Tō Paradȳs as Adam badde.
And[4] Ēve drouȝ hir fram þē ȝāte,
Schē ne[5] durst nouȝt lōke in þērate,
Schē durst nouȝt schewe God hir fāce,
Bot lēte Seþ abīde grāce.
And Seþ in þilke stēde,
Sǭre wēpeand, in hǭlȳ bēde,
Hē abǭd þēr alle stille
Godes mercī and Godes wille.
Þurch[6] þē vertu of Godes miȝt
Þēr cōm adoūn an āngel briȝt,
And seyd tō Seþ in þis manēre[7],
Þat hē miȝt wiþ ēren hēre:
'God þat al þē warld haþ wrouȝt
Sēnt þē wōrd, þoū biddest for nouȝt,
Ēr þē terme[8] bē ygǭn
Of fīve þoūsende winter and ǭn,
And fīve and twentī winter and mǭ.

[1] muchele. [2] sunful, as also in next line. [3] þo þat sunful ben.
[4] ȝ, as often [5] no, as always. [6] þurth. [7] maner. [8] term.

Ēr þat terme[1] bē agō,
And God þat is ful of miȝt
Bē intō ērþe yliȝt,
And hāve ynomen kīnd of man,
And bāþed in þē flom Jordan;
Þan schal Adam and Ēve his wiif
Bē anoint wiþ oyle of liif,
And alle þō þat after hem comen
Þat have cristendōm[2] ynomen.
Gō tel Adam þī fader þis,
Þat nōn ōþer grāce þēr nis;
And tō graiþe him bid him hȳȝe[3],
His terme neiȝeþ þat hē schal dȳe.
And when þē bodī þat haþ dōn sinne,
And þē soule schal parten atwinne,
Riȝt whan þat tīme schal bē,
Miche mervayl ȝē schullen ysē.
Sō seyþ[4] mī Lōrd þat alle haþ wrouȝt,
And biddeþ þat ȝē ne drēde nouȝt,
For nouȝt þat ȝē schul hēre ne sē;
Sō hē sent ȝōū wōrd bī mē.'
Ēve and Seþ her waye nōme,
And went aȝain[5] as þai cōme,
And tōld Adam þē tīding
Þat him sent þē Hevenking;
And Adam hēld up bōþe his hōnd,
And þonked God of alle his sōnd.
Adam his eiȝen unfēld,
And seþþen his sone hē bihēld
And seyd, 'Mercī, swēte Jēsus[6],
Whō haþ wōūnded mī sone þus?'
'Bī God, Adam,' quaþ Ēve,
'Hē þat is abōūt tō grēve

Þat is þē fēnde, þat is our fō̤,
Þat haþ ōūs brouȝt intō þis wō̤.
Hē cōm and mette[1] wiþ ōūs tway
As wē ȝēden in þē way,
And went tōward Paradȳs;
Þus hē bō̤t him in þē viis.'
'Ō̤ wē̤, Ēve,' quaþ Adam þō̤,
'Þōū hast ywrouȝt michel wō̤!
Alle þat after ōūs bē bō̤re,
Alle schal curssen ōūs þērfō̤re;
And alle þat after ōūs liven,

Schul bē bisȳ tō bē̤re þē wō̤
Þat is ywākened of ōūs twō.
Þērfō̤re, Ēve, telle alle þīne childer
Bō̤þe þē ȝonger and þē elder,
Þat þai bē fīled of ōūr sinne,
And bid hem ē̤ch ō̤n[2] biginne
Niȝt and day mercī tō crīe.
Mī tīme is comen, Ī[3] schal dȳe.'
Þus Adam bad Ēve his wiif
Tē̤chen his childer after his liif,
Hōū þai schuld anō̤n beginne
Tō crīen mercī for her sinne.
And þō̤ hē hadde ytauȝt hem þus,
As þē bōke telleþ ōūs,
Hē knēled adōūn in his bē̤de,
And dȳed anō̤n in þat stē̤de.
And as þē āngēl hadde yseyd,
Alle þē liȝtnisse was yleyd[4];

[1] mett. [2] ichon. [3] y. [4] aleyd.

Sonne and mōne lorn her liȝt
Sexe[1] days and sexe[1] niȝt.
Ēve bigan tō wēpe and crīe,
Þō schē[2] seyȝe Adam dȳe;
And Seþ māde rewelī mǭn,
And fēl dōūn on his fader anǭn,
And as it telleþ in þē bōk[3]
In his armes his fader hē tōk,
And ful bitterlīche hē wēpe.
And God Almiȝtī þērof tōke kēpe,
And sent adōūn an āngel briȝt
Þat seyd tō Seþ anǭn riȝt,
'Arīse and lēte þī sorwe bē,
And wiþ þīne eyȝen þōū schalt sē
God,' þat al þē warld schal glāde,
What hē wil dō wiþ þat hē māde.'
God þat sit in heven heyȝe
Tōk Adam soule, þat Seþ it seiȝe,
And bitōk it Seynt[4] Miȝhēl,
And seyd: 'Hāve, lōke þis soule wēl,
And put it in sorwe and þesternisse,
Out of joie[5] and alle liȝtnisse,
Til fīve þōūsend winter bēn agǭ,
Twō hundred and eiȝte and twentī mǭ,
Frǭ þē tīme þat hē ēte
Of þat appel him þouȝt sǭ swēte.
Sǭ lǭnge[6] for his gilt,
In his ward hē schal bē pilt,
Þat māked him mīn hēste[7] brēke;
Sǭ lǭnge ich wil bēn awrēke

Ēr prīde was in his hert aliȝt.'
Þus seyd Jēsus þat sitt an heyȝe,
And seþþen intō heven hē steiȝe.
Fram þē tīme þat cās fēl
Þat curssed Kaim slouȝ Abēl,
Til Adam dȳed upon mōld,
As swēte Jēsus Crīst it[1] wōld, ȝēte lay Abēl above ērþe;
Til Jēsus Crīst,—herd mōt hē wērþe—
Bad his āngels þat þai schōlde
Birȳ þē bodīs under mōlde.
Þē āngels al wiþōuten chēst
Dēde anō̩n Godes hēst.
Intō[2] clō̩þes þē bodī þai fēld;
Ēve and hir children stōde and biheld
Riȝt in þilke selve stē̩de,
And hadde wonder what þai dēde,
For þai ne hadde ar þan
Never sēn birȳ nō̩ man.
Þan seyd an āngel þēr hē stōde,
Tō Ēve and tō al hir brōde:
'Tāke ȝēme hōw wē dō,
And hēr afterward dō sō.
Birīeþ alle sō̩ þat dȳen
As ȝē sē wiþ ȝōure ȳȝen[3];
Þat wē dōn þis bodīs hēre,
Dōþ ȝē in þē selve manēre.'

Þō̤ þē ängels had seyd þus
Þai wenten oȝain tō swēte Jēsus,
Tō heven þēr þai formast wēre,
And lēved Ēve and hir children þēre.
Sex days after Adam was dēde,
God Almiȝtī an ängel bēde
Gō̤ tellen Ēve, Adames wiif,
Þē terme was comen of hir liif.
Þō̤ Ēve wist schē schulde[1] dȳe,
Schē clēped forþ hir progenīe,
Bō̤þe þē ȝonger and þē eldre,
Hir childer and hir childer childre,
And sayd þat alle miȝten hēre:
'Þō̤ ich and Adam, mī fēre,
Brēken Godes comandement[2],
Anō̤n his wrēþe[3] was ysent
On ōūs and on ōūr progenīe;
And þērfō̤re mercī ȝē schul crīe,
And bō̤þe bī day and ēke bī niȝt
Dōþ penance bī al ȝōūr miȝt.
And þōū, Seþ, for anī þing
Ich comand þē on mī blisceing
Þat þī fader liif bē write,
And mīn alsō̤, everī smite,
Frō̤ þē bigining of his liif
Þat hē was māked, and ich his wiif,
And hōū wē wēre fīled wiþ sinne,
And what sorwe wē[4] hān lived inne,
And in whiche manēr þat þōū seye
Rēdīlīche wiþ þīne eyȝe
Þī fader soule tō pīne sent,
For hē brak Godes comandement[2].

[1] schuld. [2] comandment. [3] wretþe. [4] whe.

Alle þis lōke þat þōū wrīte
As wēle as þōū kanst it dīte,
Þat þō̤ þat bē nōw ȝong childre
Mai it see, and her elder,
And ōþer þat hēreafter bē bō̤re,
Hōū wē hān wrouȝt hēre biſō̤re,
Þat þai mowe tāken ensaumple of ōūs,
And amenden aȝain[1] Jēsus.'
Þō̤ Ēve hadde þus yseyd,
And hir erand on Seþ yleyd,
Schē knēled adōūn and bad hir bē̤de;
And riȝt in þilke selve stē̤de,
Þat alle hir kin stōden and seyȝe
Whēre, schē dȳed biforn her eyȝe.
Anō̤n riȝt as Ēve was dē̤de,
Her children tōken hem tō rēde,
And bēren hir þilke selve day
Untō þē stē̤de þēr Adam lay,
And birīed hir in þilke stē̤de,
Riȝt as þē āngels dēde
Þat birīed Adam and Abēl;
Þērof þai tōken hēde ful wēl.
And þō̤ schē was in ērþe ybrouȝt,
Þai wēre sō̤rī in her þouȝt,
And wōpen and māde miche wō̤.
Þō̤ Adam and Ēve was agō̤,
Bō̤þe an ēven and ā morwe
Þai wōpen and māde miche sorwe.
And at þē foure[2] dayes ēnde,
Jēsu[3] māde an āngel wēnde,
And seyd þēr þai wēpen sō̤re:
'Dōleþ sex days and na mō̤re;

[1] oȝain. [2] four. [3] Ihu.

Þē seven day rest of ȝōūre[1] sorwe,
Bō̄þe an ēven, and ā morwe.
For God þat alle þē warld haþ wrouȝt,
And alle þē warld māde of nouȝt,
As him þouȝt it wold[2] bē best,
Þē seven day hē tōke rest.
And anōþer þing witterlȳ.
It bitō̄kneþ þē day of mercī;
Þē seven day was Sonenday[3],
And þat day schal bē dōmesday,
And alle þē soules þat wēle hāve wrouȝt
Þat day schul tō rest bē brouȝt.'
Þō̄[4] þē āngel hadde his erand seyd
Þat God Almiȝtī[5] ladde on him leyd,
Intō heven þē way hē nam,—
Þai wist never whar hē bicam.
Seþ anō̄n riȝt bigan
Of Adam þat was þē forme man,
Al tōgider hē wrō̄t his liif,
As Ēve hade beden, Adames wiif,
As telleþ þē bōke þat wēle wō̄t,
In stō̄n alle þē letters hē wrō̄t,
For fīr ne water opon mōld
Never grēven it ne schō̄ld.
Þō̄ Seþ hadde writen Adames liif,
And Ēves þat was Adames wiif,
Riȝt in þilke selve stēde
Þēr Adam was won tō bide his bēde,
In þilke stēde þē bōk hē leyd,
As wīse men ēr þis hān seyd[6],
Þēr Adam was won tō biden his bēde,
And lēved it in þilke stēde;

[1] ȝour. [2] wald. [3] sononday. [4] to. [5] almiȝten. [6] yseyd.

And þēr it lay alle Nōēs flōde,
And ne hadde nouȝt bot gōde.
Lǭng after Nōēs[1] flōd was gǭ,

Þat was heir[2] of Dāvid lǭnd;
And Adames liif þēr hē fǭnd,
And al in stǭn writen it was,
And damāged[3] nǭn letter þēr nas.
For alle þat Salamōn cōūþe
Þink in hert or spǭke wiþ mōūþe,
Qn wōrd hē ne cōūþe wite.
Of alle þat ever was þēr write,
Hē ne cōūþe ǭ wōrd understǭnd
Þat Seþ hadde writen wiþ his hǭnd.
And Salamōn þat was wiis
Bisouȝt þē King of Paradȳs,
Þat hē schulde[4] for his miȝt
Sēnde him grāce fram heven liȝt,
Þat hē miȝt hāve grāce tō wite
What þing wēren þēre ywrite.
God—yblisced mōt hē wērþe—
Hē sent an āngel into ērþe
Þat tauȝt Salamōn everī smite,
Alle Adames liif ywrite,
And seyd tō Salamōn ywis:
'Hēre, þēr þis wrīteing is,
Riȝt in þis selve stǭde,
Adam was wont tō bid his bǭde.
And hēre þōū schalt a temple wirche
Þat schal bē clǭped hǭlī chirche,
Þēr men schal bid hǭlȳ bǭde
As Adam dēde in þis stǭde.'

Þat ever in warlde[2] was bigonne.
Nǭw hāve ȝē herd of Adames liif,
And of Ēve þat was his wiif,
Whiche liif þai ladden hēre on mǭld,
And seþþen diden as God wōld.
And þǭ Adam in ērþe was dę̄d,
For sinne þat cōm of her sēd,
God sent Nōēs flōd
And adrenched al þē brōd[3];
Swiche[4] wrēche God ynam[5]
Of alle þat of Adam cam,
Sāve Nōē[6] and his wiif
Þat God hadde graunted liif,
And his children þat hē hadde
Tō schip wiþ him þat hē ladde.
Of Nōē seþþen and of his childer
Wē bēþ ycomen al tōgider.
And seþþen þai lived[7] in swiche sinne
Þat for þē liif þai liveden inne

As wē hēre clerkes telle.
And anōþer nǭble citē,
Þat was yhǭten Ninivē,
Was in þilke selve cas;

And þo̧ þai wēre tō penaunce pilt
God forȝaf hem here[1] gilt;
Þus Ninivē sāved was

Ȝēte after Nōes flōd,
Al þat cōm of Nōēs[2] blōd,—
Wēre[3] hē never so̧ ho̧lȳ man,—
For þē sinne þat Adam bigan,
Þēr mōst no̧n in heven com,
Er God hadde his cōnseyl nome
Tō liȝten in þē virgine Mārīe,
And on þē rōde wolde[4] dȳe,
For tō biggen ōūs alle frē,— Yherd and heyed mōt hē bē.
Nōw hāve ȝē herd of swēte Jēsus,
As þē bōke[5] telleþ ōūs;
Of þē warld hōū it bigan,
And hōū hē mãde of mōlde[6] man.
Jēsu þat was nomen wiþ wro̧ng,

VI. HAVELOK THE DANE

In þat tīme, sō it bifelle,
Was in þē lōnd[1] of Denemark
A rīche king, and swȳþe stark;
Þē[2] nāme of him was Birkabeyn.
Hē hāvede manī knict and sweyn;
Hē was fayer[3] man, and wicht[4],
Of bodī hē was þē beste knicht[5],

Hē hāvede a sone and[8] douhtres twō,

Hē þat wile nōn forbēre,

Dēth him tōk þan hē best wilde[9]
Liven; but hyse dayes wēre filde[10],

For gōld[11] ne silver, ne for nō gyve.
Hwan hē þat wiste, rāþe hē sende

Hwīl his bodī wēre on līve.

Hwō micte yēme hise children yunge,
Til þat hē kōuþen spēken wiþ[1] tunge;

Hē spōken þēroffe, and chōsen sōne
A rīche man þat[3] under mōne
Was þē trewest þat hē wēnde,

And seyden hē mouchte[4] hem best lōke,

Til hise sone mouhte[5] bēre
Helm on hēved, and lēden ūt hēre,
In his hand a spēre stark,
And king bēn māked of Denemark.
Hē wēl trowede þat hē seyde,
And on Godard handes leyde,
And seyde, 'Hēre bitēche Ī þē
Mīne children alle þrē,

Til þat mī sone of ēlde[6] bē.
But þat ich wille, þat þōu[7] swēre

For þē king þat deide sōne.
Jēsu[2] Crīst þat māked mōne
On þē mirke niht[3] tō shīne,
Wite his soule frō hellepīne,
And lęve þat it mōte wone
In hevenerīche with Godes sone.
Hwan Birkabeyn was leyd in grāve,
Þē ērl dēde sōne tāke þē knāve,
Havelok, þat was þē heir[4],
Swanborow his sister, Helflēd þē tōþer,
And in þē castel dēde hē hem dō,
Þēr nǭn ne mīcte hem comen tō
Of here kyn, þēr þei sperd wǭre[5].
Þēr hē grēten ofte sǭre,

Hē hem clǭþede riht[7], ne fedde,
Ne hem ne dēde rīchelīke bedde[8].
Þanne Godard was sikerlike
Under God þē mǭste swike
Þat evre in ērþe shāped was,
Withūten ǭn, þę wike Judas.
Hāve hē þē malisūn tōday

Warīed worþe[1] hē of norþ and sūth,
Offe alle men[1a] þat spēken kunne,
Of Crīst þat māked[2] mōne and sunne!
Þanne hē hāvede of al þē lōnd
Al þē folk tilled intil his hōnd,
And alle hāveden sworn[3] him ōth,
Rīche and pōvre, lēf and lōth,
Þat hē sholden hise wille frēme,
And þat hē shulden him nouht[4] grēme,
Hē þouhte[5] a ful strōng trēcherȳ,

Of þē children for tō māke,—

Hwan þat was þouht[6], onōn hē ferde
Tō þē tūr þēr hē wōren sperde,
Þēr hē grēten for hunger and cōld.
Þē knāve, þat was sumdēl bōld,
Kam him ageyn, on knēs him sette,
And Godard ful feyre hē þēr grette.
And Godard seyde, 'Wat is yū?
Hwī grēte yē and goulen nūū?'
'For us hungreth swīþe sōre,' Seyden hē wiþūten[7] mōre;
'Wē ne hāve tō ēte[8], wē ne hāve

Godard herde here wā,—

But tōk þē maydnes bōthe sāmen,
Al sō it wēre upon his[3] gāmen,

Havelok it saw, and þēr[6] bī stōd:
Ful sōrī was þat sēlī knāve,

For at hise herte hē saw a knīf
For tō rēven him hise lȳf.
But þē knāve[8] þat lītel was,
Hē knēlede biſōr þat Juḍas.

Hwan þē devel herde[2] þat

Of þē sēlī children blōd.
Þēr was mirācle fair and gōd,

But for rewnesse him wiþdrow[3].
Of Havelok[4] rewede him ful sōre,
And þoucte hē wolde þat hē dēd wōre,

Grim tōk þē chīld and bǭnd him faste
Hwīl þē bǭndes micte laste,

Þē hąlte, and þē dōūmbe spęke[8],

Hwan Dāme Lēve[3] herde þat,

Hē stirten bǭþe up tō thē knāve,—

Sōne sǭ it was liht[5] of day,

VII. ROBERT MANNING'S HANDLYNGE SYNNE

THE TALE OF PERS THE USURER

ON Ōkerērs and kauersyns,[OF]
As wykked þey āre as Sarasyns.
Whōsǭ myȝt prēve whych þey wǭre,
Wēre þey lewed or wēre þey lǭre,
Þey shulde nat come in[1] Crȳstys hērde,

Of Pērs þat was a tollēre;
And Ī[2] shal telle ȝōw as quyk
Hōw hē was bǭþe gōde and wyk.
Seynt Jǭne[3] þē aumenēre
Seyþ Pērs was an ōkerēre,
And was swȳþe coveytōus,

At whych þey had gōde, and at whyche nǭne[2];
Þēre þey hadde gōde þey preysed weyl,
And þēre þey hadde noght, never a deyl.
As þey spāk of manȳwhat,
Cōme Pērs forþ in þat gat;
Þan seyd ęch ǭne þat sate and stōde,
'Hēre comþ Pērs þat never dyd gōde.'
Ęch ǭne seyd tō ōþer jangland,

Pe̅rs of hys sle̅pe gan blynke,
And gre̛̅tly̅ on hys dre̛̅me gan þynke,

[1] hymself. [2] to ȝelde. [3] touþer. [4] a. [5] leyd.

Syghyng wyþ mōrnyng chēre
As man þat was in grę̄te wę̄re,
Hōw̄ þat hē acōūped was
Wyþ fēndes fę̄le for hys trespas,
And hōw̄ þey wulde hāve dampned hym þēre, ȝyf mercȳ of Jēsu[1a] Crȳst ne wēre.
Alle þys in hys herte hē kast,
And tō hymself hē spak at þē laste,
Þat 'For a lǭfe in ę̄vyl[1] wylle
Halpe mē in sǭ grę̄te perel,
Moche wulde[2] hyt helpe at nēde
Wyþ gōde wyl dō almesdēde.'
Frǭ þat tȳme þan wax Pērs
A man of sǭ feyre manērs,
Þat nǭ man myȝte[3] in hym fȳnde
But tō þē pōre bǭþe mēke and kȳnde;
A mȳlder man ne myȝt nat bē,
Ne tō þē pōre mǭre of almes frē,
And reuful of herte alsǭ hē was
Þat mayst þōū hēre lę̄re in þys pas.
Pērs mette, upon a day,
A pōre man bȳ þē way
As nāked as hē was bǭre,
Þat in þē sę̨ę had alle lǭre.
Hē cōme tō Pērs þēre hē stōde,
And asked hym sum of hys gōde,
Sumwhat of hys clǭþing,
For þē love of Hevenekyng.
Pērs was of reuful herte,
Hē tōke hys kyrtyl of as smert,
And dēd hyt on þē man above,
And bad hym wę̄re hyt for hys love.

[1] eveyl. [1a] Ihu, as always. [2] wlde. [3] myȝt.

Þē man hyt tōke and was ful blȳþe;
Hē ȝēde and sǭlde hyt as swȳþe.
Pērs stōde and dyd behǭlde
Hōw̄ þē man þē kyrtyl sǭlde,
And was þērwyþ fērlȳ wrǭþe
Þat hē sǭlde sō sōne hys clǭþe.
Hē myȝt nǭ lēnger for sorow stand[1],
But ȝēde hǭme ful sǭre grētand,
And seyd hyt was an ēvyl sȳgne,
And þat hymselve[2] was nat dȳgne
For tō bē in hys preyēre;
Þērfor nolde hē þē kyrtyl wēre.
Whan hē hadde ful lǭng grēte,
And a partȳ þērof gan[3] lēte,—
For comūnlȳch after wēpe
Fal men sōne on slēpe,—
As Pērs lay in hys slēpyng,
Hym þoght a feyre swevenyng.
Hym þoght hē was in hevene lyȝt,
And of God hē had a syght
Syttyng in hys kyrtyl clad,
Þat þē pōre man of hym had;
And spak tō hym ful mȳldelȳ,
'Whȳ wēpest þōū and art sǭrȳ?
Lǭ Pērs,' hē seyd, 'þys is þȳ clǭth;
For hē sǭlde hyt, wēre þōū wrǭth.
Know hyt weyl, ȝyf þat þōū can,
For mē þōū ȝāve hyt þē pōre man;
Þat þōū ȝāve hym in charytē,
Everȳ deyl þōū ȝāve hyt mē.'
Pērs of slēpe ōūte breyde,
And þoght grēte wunder and seþen seyd[4],

[1] stande. [2] hymself. [3] began. [4] seyd.

'Blessyd be alle pōre men
For God Almyȝtȳ loveþ hem;
And weyl is hem þat pōre āre hēre,
Þey āre wyþ God bo̅þe lēfe and dēre,
And Ī shal fonde bȳ nyȝt and day
Tō bē pōre, ȝyf þat Ī may.'
Hāstlȳ hē tōke hys kateyl
And ȝāve hyt tō pōre men e̅che deyl.
Pērs kalled tō hym hys clerk
Þat was hys no̅tarȳe, and bad hym herk:—
'Ī shal þē shewe a pryvytē,
A þyng þat þōū shalt dō tō mē,
Ī wyl þat þōū no̅ man hyt telle;
Mȳ bodȳ Ī tāke þè hēre tō selle
Tō sum man as in bo̅ndāge,
Tō lyve in povert and in servāge;
But þōū dō þus Ī wyl bē wro̅th,
And þōū and þȳne shal bē mē lo̅th.
ȝyf þōū dō hyt, Ī shal þē ȝyve
Tēn pōūnd[1] of gōld wēl wiþ tō lyve;
Þo̅ tēn pōūnd Ī tāke þē hēre,
And mē tō selle on bo̅nde manēre,
Ī ne recche untō whōm,
But o̅nlȳch hē hāve þē crystendōm.
Þē raunsūn þat þōū shalt for mē tāke,
Þarfo̅re þōū shalt sykernes māke
For tō ȝyve hyt blȳþelȳ[2] and weyl
Tō pōre men everȳ deyl,
And wyþho̅lde þērof no̅ þyng
Þē mōūntouns of a ferþyng.'
Hys clerk was wo̅ tō dō þat dēde,
But o̅nlȳ for manās and for drēde.

[1] pownd, as in next line. [2] bleþely.

For drēde Pērs māde hym hyt dō[1],
And dēde hym plyghte hys trouthe þērtō.
Whan hys clerk had māde hys ǭthe,
Pērs dēde on hym a fōūle clǭthe;
Untō a cherche bǭþe þey ȝēde
For tō fulfylle hys wyl in dēde.
Whan þat þey tō þē cherche cōm,
'Lǭrde,' þoght þē clerk, 'nōw whōm
Myȝt Ī fȳnde, þys yche sēle,
Tō whōm Ī myȝte[2] selle Pērs wēle?'
  Þē clerk lōked everȳwhēre,
And at þē last hē knew whēre
A rȳche man was[3] þat ēr had bē
Specyal knowlych ever betwē,
But þurgh myschaunce at a cas
Alle hys gōde ylǭre was;
ȝōle, þus þat man hyghte,
And knew þē clerk wēl bē syghte.
Þey spak of ǭlde aqueyntaunce,
And ȝōle tǭlde hym of hys chaunce.
'ȝē,' seyde þē clerk, 'Ī rēde þōū bȳe
A man tō dō þȳ marchaundȳe,
Þat þōū mayst hǭlde in servāge
Tō restǭre weyl þyn dammāge.'
  Þan seyd ȝōle, 'On swych chaffāre
Wulde Ī feyn mȳ sylver wāre.'
  Þē clerke seyd, 'Lǭ, ǭne hēre,
A trew man and[4] a dubonēre[5],
Þat wyl serve þē tō pay
Peyneble, al þat hē may.
Pērs shalt þōū calle hys nāme,
For hym shalt þōū hāve moche frāme.

Hē is a man ful grācyōūs
Gōde tō wynne untō þȳn hōūs,
And God shal ȝyve þē hys blessyng,
And foysyn in alle þyng.'
Þē clerk ȝāve alle hys raunsūn
Tō þē pōre men of þē tōūn,—
Plenērlȳ alle þat hē tōke
Wyþhēlde hē nat a ferþyng nō̄ke.
Þē emperōūre sent hys messagēres
Alle abōūte for tō sēke Pērs,
But þey ne myȝte[1] never hēre
Of rȳche Pērs, þē tollēre,
In what stē̄de hē was nome,
Ne[2] whydyrward hē was become;
Ne þē clerk wuld telle tō nō̄ne
Whydyrward þat Pērs was gō̄ne.
Now is Pērs bycome brȳche,
Þat ē̄r was bō̄þe stōūte and rȳche.
Alle þat ever anȳ man hym bad[3],
Pērs dyd hyt wyþ herte[4] glad.
Hē wax sō̄ mȳlde and sō̄ mēke,
A mȳlder man þurt nō̄ man sēke;
For hē mēked hymself ō̄verskyle
Pottes and dysshes for tō swyle[5].
Tō grē̄te penaunce hē gan hym tāke,
And moche for tō fast and wāke,
And moche hē loved þō̄lmōdnesse;
Tō rȳche, tō pōre, tō mō̄re, tō lesse.
Of alle men hē wuld hāve dōūte,
And tō here byddyng mēklȳ lōūte;
Wulde þey bydde hym sytte or stande,
Ever hē wulde bē bōwande.

[1] myȝt. [2] no, as in next line. [3] do bad. [4] hert. [5] swele.

And for hē bāre hym sǭ mēke and softe,
Shrewes mysdēde hym ful ofte,
And hēlde hym folted or wǭde
For hē was sǭ mȳlde of mōde.
And þey þat wēre hys felawes[1]
Mysseyd hym mǭst in here sawes;
And alle hē suffred here upbreyd,
And never naght aȝēns hem seyd[1a].
Ȝōle, hys lǭrde, wēl undyrstōde
Þat al hys grāce and hys gōde
Cōm hym[2] for þē love of Pērs,
Þat was of sǭ hǭlȳ manērs.
And whan hē wyst of hys bōūntē,
Hē kalled Pērs in pryvytē:
'Pērs,' hē seyd, 'þōū wēre wurþȳ
For tō bē wurscheped mǭre þan Ī,
For þōū art weyl wyþ Jēsu,
Hē sheweþ for þē grę̄te vertu;
Þarfǭr Ī shal māke þē frē,
Ī wyl þat my felaw þōū bē.'
Þartō Pērs graunted noght
Tō bē frēman as hē besoght;
Hē wulde bē as hē was ǭre
In þat servāge for evermǭre.
Hē þanked þē lǭrde mȳldelȳ
For hys grę̄te curteysȳ.
Syþþen Jēsu, þurgh hys myȝt,
Shewed hym tō Pērs syȝt,
For tō bē stalworþe in hys fǭndyng,
And tō hym hāve lovelǭngyng.
'Bē nat sorowful tō dō penaunce,
Ī am wiþ þē in everȳ chaunce;

[1] felaus. [1a] seyde. [2] hym, not in MS.

Pērs, Ī hāve mȳnde of þē,
Lo̱ hēre þē kyrtyl þōu[1] ȝāve for mē,
Þērfo̱r grāce Ī shal þē sēnde
In alle gōdenesse weyl tō ēnde.'
Byfyl þat serjauntes[2] and squyērs
Þāt wēre wunt tō serve Pērs
Went in pylgrymāge, as in kas,
Tō þat cuntrē þēre Pērs was.
Ȝōle ful feyre gan hem kalle,
And preyd hem ho̱me tō hys halle.
Pērs was þēre þat yche sēle,
And everȳch o̱ne hē knew hem wēle.
Alle hē served hem as a knāve
Þat was wunt here servȳse tō hāve.
But Pērs nat ȝyt þey knew,
For penaunce chaunged was hys hew;
Nat forþȳ þey behēlde hym fast,
And oftyn tō hym here yȝen þey kast,
And seyde[3], 'Hē þat stonte hēre
Is lȳche tō Pērs þē[4] tollēre.'
Hē hydde hys vysege al þat hē myȝt
Out of knowlych of here syȝt;
No̱þelę̄s þey behēlde hym mo̱re
And knew hym weyl, al þat wēre þo̱re,
And seyd, 'Ȝōle, is ȝone þȳ pāge?
A rȳche man is in þȳ servāge;
Þē emperōure bo̱þe fer and nēre
Haþ dō hym sēche þat wē fȳnde hēre.'
Pērs lestned, and herd hem spę̄kyng,
And þat þey had of hym knowyng;
And pryvylȳ awey hē nam
Tyl hē tō þē portēr cam.

[1] kyrtyl þat þou. [2] seriauntes. [3] seyd, [4] þe, not in MS.

Þē portēr had hys spēche lǭre,
And hēryng alsǭ, syn hē was bǭre;
But þurgh þē grāce of swēte Jēsu
Was shewed for Pērs feyre vertu.
Pērs seyd, 'Late mē furþe[1] gǭ.'
Þē portēr spak and seyde[2] 'ȝǭ.'
Hē þat was dēf, and dōūmbe alsō,
Spak whan Pērs spak hym tō.
Pērs ōūte at þē ȝāte wente,
And þedyr ȝēde þēre God hym sente.
Þē portēr ȝēde up tō þē halle,
And þys merveyle tǭlde hem alle,
Hōw̄ þē squylēr of þē kechyn,
Pērs, þat haþ woned hēreyn,
Hē asked lēve ryȝt nōw̄ lāte,
And went furþ ōūt at þē ȝāte.
'Ī rēde ȝōw̄ alle, ȝeveþ gōde tent,
Whederward þat Pērs is went;
Wyþ Jēsu Crȳst hē is pryvē,
And þat is shewed weyl on mē,
For what tȳme hē tō mē spak,
Ōūt of hys mōūþ mē þoghte[3] brak
A flamme of fȳre bryght and clēre;
Þē flaumme mādе mē bǭþe spēke and hēre,
Spēke and hēre nōw̄ bǭþe Ī may,
Blessed bē God and Pērs tōday.'
Þē lǭrde and þē gestes alle,
Ǭne and ōþer þat wēre in halle,
Had merveyle þat hyt was sō,
Þat hē myȝte swych myrācle dō.
Þan as swȳþe Pērs þey soght,
But al here sēking was for noȝt.

[1] furþ. [2] seyd. [3] þoght.

Never Pērs þey ne ſoūnde,
Nyȝt ne day, in nō̤ stōūnde,
For hē þat tōke Ennok and Ēlȳ
Hē tōke Pērs þurgh hys mercȳ,
Tō reste wyþoūtyn ēnde tō lę̄de,
For hys mēknes and hys gōde dēde:
Tāke ensample hēre of Pērs,
And parteþ wyþ þē pōre, ȝē ōkerērs,
For ȝōw̄ shal never come joye[1] wyþynne,
But ȝē lę̄ve fyrst þat synne,
And ȝyve tō almes þat yche þyng
Þat ȝē hāve wune wyþ ōkeryng.
Nōw̄ wyþ God lę̄ve wē Pērs;
God ȝyve us grāce tō dō hys manērs.

VIII. THE WEST MIDLAND PROSE PSALTER

Psalm I.

Blesced bē þē man þat ȝēde nouȝt in þē counseil of wicked, ne stōde nouȝt in þē waie of sinȝę̄res, ne sat nauȝt in fals jugement. 2. Ac his[2] wylle was in þē wylle of ōure Lō̤rd, and hē schal þenche in his[2] lawe bō̤þe daye and nyȝt. 3. And hē schal bē as þē trē þat is[2] sett bȳ þē ērnynges of waters, þat schal ȝeve his frūt in his[2] tȳme. 4. And his[2] lę̄f schal nouȝt fallwen, and alle þynges þat þē ryȝtful dōþ schal multiplīen. 5. Nouȝt sō̤ bēn þē wicked, nouȝt sō̤; as a poudre þat þē wȳnde caſteþ fram þē fāce of þē ērþe[3]. 6. Forþī ne schal nouȝt þē wicked arīse in jugement, ne þē sinnię̄rs in þē cōnseyl of þē ryȝtful. 7. For oure Lō̤rd knew þē waie of þē ryȝtful, and þē waye of synnę̄rs schal perissen.

Psalm XXIII.

Our Lord governeþ mē, and nōþyng shal defailen tō mē; in þē stēde of pasture hē sett mē þēr. 2. Hē norissed mē up water of fyllyng; hē turned mȳ soule fram þē fende. 3. Hē lad mē up þē bistiȝes of riȝtfulnes for his nāme. 4. For ȝif þat ich hāve gōn amiddes of þē shadowe of dēþ, I[1] shal nouȝt doute ivels, for þou art wyþ mē. 5. Þȳ discipline and þȳn amendyng conforted mē. 6. Þou mādest radī grāce in mȳ siȝt oȝayns hem þat trublen mē. 7. Þou mākest fatt mȳn hēved wyþ mercȳ; and mȳ drynk, mākand drunken, is[2] ful clēre. 8. And þȳ mercī shal folwen mē alle daies of mī līf. 9. And þat ich wonne in þē hous of our Lord in lengþe of daies.

Psalm XXIV.

1. Þē ērþe is our Lordes and his plentē; þē world and ich ōn þat woneþ þērinne. 2. For hē bigged it up þē sęęs, and māde it rędī up þē flōdes. 3. Whō shal climben intō þē mountein of our Lord, ōþer whō shal stonde in his hōlȳ stēde? 4. Þē innocent in hōnde and of clęne hert, þat ne tōke nouȝt his soule in īdelnesse and ne swōre noȝt in gilerī tō his neȝbūr. 5. Hē shal tāke bliscyng of our Lord, and mercȳ of God his helpe. 6. Þis is[4] þē biȝetyng of þē sēchand hym, sēchand þē fāce of God of Jācob[3]. 7. Ōpeneþ ȝour ȝātes, ȝē princes of helle, and bēþ ȝē lifted, ȝē everlastand ȝātes, and þē kynge of glōrīe shal entre. 8. Which is hē, þat kyng of glōrīe? Þē Lord strōnge and miȝtful, þē Lord myȝtful in batail. 9. Ōpeneþ ȝour ȝātes, ȝē princes of hevene, and bēþ ȝē lifted, ȝē ȝātes everlastand, and þē kynge of glōrīe shal entren. 10. Which is hē, þat kynge of glōrīe? Þē Lord of vertu, hē is[4] kynge of glōrīe.

Psalm LI.

1. Hā mercȳ on mē, God, efter þȳ mychel mercȳ. 2. And efter þē mychelnes of þȳ pitēs, dō way mȳ wickednes. 3. Wasshe[5]

mē mǭre of mȳ wickednes, and clense mē of mȳn synne. 4. For ich knowe[1] mȳ wickednes, and mȳ synne is evermǭre oȝains me. 5. Ich hāve synned tō þē alǭn, and ich hāve dōn ivel tōfǭre þē, þat ōū bē māde ryȝtful in þȳ wōrdes, and þat ōū ǭvercum whan þōū art juged. 6. Sē, for ich am conceived in wickednesses, and mȳ mōder conceived mē in synnes. 7. Sē, for þōū loved sōþenes; þē uncerteyn þynges and prȳvē of wisdōm þōū māde tō mē apert. 8. Þou sprengest mē, Lǭrd, wyþ þȳ mercȳ, and Ī shal bē māde clęne; þōū shalt purifīe mē, and Ī shal bē māde whȳte[2] up snowe. 9. Þōū shalt ȝeve joie and gladnes tō mȳn hēryng[3], and þē mȳlde dēdes of mȳ hert shul glāden. 10. Turne þȳ fāce fram mȳn synnes[4], and dō oway al mȳn wickednes. 11. Ha, God, māke in mē clęne hert, and newe þōū a ryȝt gǭst in mȳn hert. 12. Ne putt mē nouȝt fram þȳ fāce, and ne dō nauȝt oway fram mē þȳn hǭlȳ gǭst. 13. Ȝēlde tō mē gladnes of þȳn helpe, and conferme mē wyþ þȳn hǭlȳ gǭst. 14. Ī shal tęchen þē wicked þȳn wayes, and þē wicked shul bēn converted tō þē. 15. Ha, þōū God, God of mȳn helþe, deliver mē of sinnes[5], and mȳ tunge shal glāden þȳ ryȝtfulnes. 16. Lǭrd, þou shalt ǭpen mȳn lippes, and mȳ mōūþe shal tellen þȳn hęryyng. 17. For ȝyf þōū hade wolde, ich hade ȝeven sacrifīce; forsōþe þōū ne shalt nouȝt delīten in sacrifīces. 18. Trubled gǭst[6] is sacrifīce tō God; þōū, God, ne shal nouȝt despīsen þē hert sorowful and mēke. 19. Dō blisfullīch, Lǭrd, tō þȳ chǭsen in þȳ gōde wille, þat þē gōde bē confermed in hevens. 20. Þan shalt oū tāke sacrifīce of ryȝt servīce, and honōurs; hii shul þan setten gōdenesses tōfǭre þy thrǭne.

Psalm XC.

1. Lǭrd, þōū art māde socōūr tō ōūs fram kȳnde tō kīnde. 2. Tōfǭre þat þē mōūnteins wēre māde, ǭþer þē ērþe[7] wēre fourmed and þē werld þōū art God, fram þē world untō þē world wyþōūten ēnde. 3. Ne turne þōū nouȝt intō mīldnes; and þōū seidest, ȝē

Passe hē as gresse in þē mornyng; florische hē in þē mornyng and passe; falle hē at ę̄ven [1], and harden and wax hē drīe. 7. For wē failed in þȳn īre, and wē bēn disturbed in þȳn vengeaunce. 8. Þōū laidest ōūr wickednesse in þȳ siȝt; ōūr world is in liȝtyng of þȳ chēre. 9. For alle ōūr daies faileden, and wē failed in þȳn ȳre. 10. Our ȝēres shul þenchen as þē ꝑob, þē daies of our ȝēres in þē seventī ȝēre. 11. Forsōþe ȝyf eȝtī ȝēre bēn in myȝtes, þē mǭre ǭver hem shal bē travail and sorowe. 12. For mīldnes comeþ [2] þēron, and wē shul bē wiþnumen. 13. Whō knew þē myȝt of þȳn īre, and tō tellen þȳ wraþe for þȳ drēde? 14. Māke sǭ þȳn helpe knowen, and þē lę̄red of hert in wisdōme. 15. Lǭrd, bē þōū turned untō nōū, and bē þōū bidlīch up þȳ servantes. 16. Wē bēn fulfild ę̄rlīch of þȳ mercȳ, wē shul glāden and delīten in alle ōūr daies. 17. Wē glāded in þē daies in which þōū lowed us, for þē ȝēres in which wē seiȝen ivels. 18. Lōke tō þȳ servauntes and tō þȳn werkes, and dresce her sones. 19. And þē shȳnyng of ōūr Lǭrd God bē up us, and dresce up us þē werkes of ōūr hǭndes, and dresce up us þē werkes of ōūr hǭndes [3].

Psalm XCI.

1. Hē þat woneþ [4] in þē helpe of þē heȝest, hē shal dwelle in þē defens of God of heven. 2. Hē shal saie tō ōūr Lǭrd, Þōū art mȳ tākēr and my refut; mī God, Ī shal hǭpen in hym. 3. For hē deliverd mē fram þē trappes of þē fēndes, and fram asper wōrd of men. 4. And hē shal shadow þē wyþ hys shulderis, and þōū shalt hǭpe under hys feþers. 5. þē sōþenes of hym shal cumpas þē wyþ shēlde, and þōū ne shalt nouȝt dōūte of þē drēde of nyȝt; 6. For þōū, Lǭrd, art mȳn hǭpe, and þōū setted þȳ refut alderheȝest. 10. Yvel ne shal nouȝt com tō þē, and turment ne shal nouȝt com nēre þȳ tabernācle. 11. For hē sent tō his aungels of þē, þat hii kēpe þē in alle þȳn waies. 12. Hii shul bēre þē in hǭndes þat tōū ne hirt nouȝt, peraventure, þȳ gōst wyþ vīces. 13. Þōū shalt gǭn up queintīs [1] and gōdenes, and þōū shalt defōūle þē fēnde and helle. 14. For hē hǭped in mē, and Ī shal deliver hym; Ī shal defēnden hym, for hē knew mȳ nāme. 15. IX. THE EARL OF TOULOUSE

Less [illegible]

All they assentyd tō the sawe,
They thoght hē spake rę̄sōn and lawe.
Then answeryd þē kyng wyth crōwne,
'Fayre falle thē for thȳn avȳse.'
Hē callyd knyghtys of nǭbyll prȳce,
And badd them bē rę̄dȳ bōwne
For tō crȳe thorow all þē lǭnde,
Bǭthe be sę̄ę and be sǭnde,
If[9] they fȳnde mōwne
A man þat is[10] sǭ moche of myght,

Messangērys, Ī[1] undurstōnde,
Crȳed thorow all þē ꝉōnde
In manȳ a rȳche cytē,
If anȳ man durste prōve hys myȝt
In trewe quarell for tō fyght,
Wēle avaunsed schulde hē bee.
The Ērle of Tolōūs[2] herde[3] þys telle,
What anger thē lādȳ befelle,
Thēreof hē thoghte[4] grẹ̄te pytē.
If hē wyste that schē had ryght,
Hē wolde aventure hys lȳfe tō fyght
For that lādȳ free.

For hur hē mōrned nyȝt and day,
And tō hymselfe can hē say
Hē wolde aventure hys lȳfe:
'If Ī may wytt þat schē bē trewe,
They þat hāve hur accused schull rewe,
But they stynte of thēr strȳfe.'
The ērle seyde, 'Bī[5] Seynte Jōhn,
Intō[6] Almayn wyll Ī gọọn
Whēre Ī hāve fọ̄men rȳfe;
Ī prey tō God full of myght,
That Ī hāve trewe quarell tō fyȝt,
Out of wọ̄ tō wynne þat wȳfe.'

Hē rọ̄de on huntyng on a day,
A marchand mett hē bī þē way,
And asked hym of whens hē was.
'Lọ̄rde,' hē seyde, 'of Almayn.'
Anọ̄n thē ērle can hym frayne

Is schē gyltȳ[2], sǭ mōte thōū thē?'
'Nay, bī hym þat dȳed on tree,
That schōpe man aftur hys fāce.'

Then seyde the ērle wythōūte[3] lett,
'When is thē day sett,
Brente that schē schulde bee?'
The marchande seyde, 'Sikerlyke[4],
Ę̄ven thys day thrē wyke,
And thērfǭre wǭ is mee.'
Thē ērle seyde, 'Ī schall thē telle,
Gōde horsys Ī hāve tō selle,
And stēdys twō or thrē.
Certys myght Ī selle þem yāre,
Thidur[5] wyth thē wolde Ī fāre

Thē marchand seyd wyth[7] wōrdys hēnde,

Hyt wolde bē for yōūre prōūwe;
Thēre may yē selle þem at yōūr wylle.'
Anǭn thē ērle seyde hym tylle,
'Sȳr, herkyn tō mē[8] nōūwe;
Thys jurney[9] wylt þōū wyth mē dwelle
Twentȳ pōūnde[10] Ī schall thē telle
Tō mēde, Ī māke a vōūwe.'
Thē marchand grauntyd hyt[11] anǭn.

Hē busked hym þat nǭ man wyste
For mikyll[1] on hym was hys tryste.
Hē seyde, 'Sȳr, gǭ wyth mee.'
Wyth them they tōke stēdys sevyn,— Thēre wēre nǭ fayrer[2] undyr hevyn
That anȳ man myght see.
Intō Almayn þey can rȳde;
As a corsur of mikyll[3] prȳde
Hē sēmyd for tō bee.

Thē marchand was a trewe gȳde;
Thē ērle and hē tōgedur can rȳde
Tyll they cāme tō that plāce.
A mȳle besȳde thē castell,
Thēre thē emperōure can dwelle,
A rȳche abbey thēr was;
Of the abbot lēve they gatt
Tō sǭjorne[4] and māke þēr horsys fatt;
That was a nǭbyll cās.
The abbot was the lādyes ēme,
For hur hē was in grēte wandrēme,
And moche mōrnyng hē mās[5].

Sǭ hytt befelle upon a day
Tō churche thē ērle tōke þē way,
A masse for tō hēre.
Hē was a feyre man and an hȳe;
When thē abbot hym sȳe,
Hē seyde, 'Sȳr, come nēre.

[1] mekyll. [2] fayre. [3] coresur of mekyl'. [4] soyorne. [5] mase.

Syr, when thē masse is dōne,
Ī pray you ę̄te wyth mē at noone,

Thē ērle grauntyd all wyth gāme;
Aſǭre mę̄te they wysche all sāme,
And tō mę̄te they wente in fēre.

Aſtur mę̄te, as Ī yōū say,
Intō an orchard þey tōke þē way,
Thē abbot and thē knyght.
The abbot seyde and syghed sāre,
'Certys, sȳr, Ī lyve[1] in cāre
For a lādȳ bryght;
Schē is accusyd, my herte is wǭǭ,
Thērfǭre schē schall tō dę̄the gǭǭ
All agayne thē ryght;
But schē hāve helpe, verrament,
In a[2] fȳre schē schall bē brente
Thys day sevenyght.'

Thē ērle seyde, 'Sǭ hāve Ī blysse,
Of hyr mēþynkyþ grę̄te rewþe hyt is,
Trewe if that schē bee.'
Thē abbot seyde, 'Bī Seynt Poule,
For hur Ī durre[3] ley mȳ soule
That nevyr gyltȳ[4] was schē.
Soche werkys nevyr schē wroght,
Neythyr in dēde nor in thoght,
Sāve a rynge sǭ free
Tō þē Ērle of Tolōūs schē gaſe[5] wyth wynne,
In ę̄se of hym and for nǭ synne;
In schryfte thus tǭlde schē mē.'

Thē ērle seyde, 'Syth hyt is sǫǫ,
Crȳste wrę̄ke hur of hure[1] wǫǫ,
That boght hur wyth hys bloode.
Wolde yē sekyr mē, wythōūt fayle,
For tō hǭlde trewe cōūnsayle,
Hyt myght bē for yōūre gōde.'
The abbot seyde bī bōkes sę̄le
And hys[2] professyōn, þat hē wolde hę̄le,
And ellys hē wēre wǭde.
'Ī am hē þat schē gafe thē rynge
For tō bē ōwre tǭkenynge,
Nōw hę̄le[3] hyt for the rōde.

Ī am comyn, lę̄fe syr,
Tō tāke thē batayle for hyr,
And[4] thēretō stǭnde wyth ryght;
But fyrste mȳselfe Ī wole hur schrȳve,
And if Ī fȳnde hur clę̄ne of lȳve,
Then wyll mȳ herte bē lyght.

For hur Ī wyll tāke þē[7] batayle,
As Ī am trewe knyght.'

Thē abbot was nevyr sǭ gladd,
Nēre for joie[8] hē waxe madd,
Thē ērle can hē kysse;
They mādе merȳ[9] and slewe cāre
All that sevenyght hē dwellyd þāre,
In myrthe, withōūte[10] mysse.

That day þē[1] lādȳ schulde bē brent
Thē ērle wyth thē abbot wente
In monkys wēde, ywys;
Tō thē emperōūr hē knēlyd blȳve
That hē myght þat lādȳ schrȳve;
Anǫn receyved[2] hē is.

Hē examyned hur wyttyrlȳ,
As hyt seythe in thē stǫrȳ;
Schē was wythōūte gylte.
Schē seyde, 'Bī hym þat dȳed on tree,
Trespas was nevyr nǫne in mē
Whēreforre Ī schulde bē spylte,
Sāve ǫǫnys, wythōūte lęsynge,
Tō thē Ērle of Tolōūs Ī gafe a rynge;
Assoyle mē if thōū wylte.
But þus mȳ destanȳe is come[3] tō ēnde,
That in þys fȳre Ī muste bē brende;
Thēre Goddys wylle bē fulfyllt[4].'

Thē ērle assoyled hur wyth hys hǫnde,
And syþen pertelȳ hē can upstǫnde,
And seyde, 'Lǫrdyngys, pęse!
Yē that hāve accused þys lādȳ gente,
Yē bē worthȳ tō bē brente.'
That ǫǫn knyght māde a rękęs:
'Thōū carle monke, wyth all þȳ gynne,
Thowe yōūre abbot bē of hur kynne,
Hur sorowe schalt thōū not cękęs;
Ryght sǫ thōū woldyst sayne
Thowe all yōūre covent had bī hyr layn,
Sǫ āre yē lythyr and lękęs.'

[1] þat þe. [2] resceyved. [3] comyn. [4] fulfyllyt.

Thē ērle answeryd wyth wōrdys frec,
'Sȳr, that ꝙꝙn Ī trowe thōū bē
Thys lādȳ accused has.
Thowe wē bē men of relygyōn,
Thōū schalt dō us but rę̄sōn
For all thē fāre thōū māȝ;
Ī prōve on hur thōū sayst not ryght,
Lō, hēre mȳ glōve wyth þē tō fyght,
Ī undyrtāke thys cāse;
As[1] false men, Ī schall yōū kenne
In redde fȳre for tō brenne,
Thērtō God gyf mē grāce.'

All þat stōden in that plāce,
Thankyd God of hys grāce,
Wythōūte anȳ fayle.
Thē twō knyghtys wēre full wrǭthe;
Hē schulde bē dedd, þey swę̄re gre̊te ǭthe,
But hyt myght not avayle.
Thē ērle wente thēre besȳde,
And armyd hym wyth mekyll prȳde,

They hewe thorow helme and basenet,

Thē ērle smǭte hym wyth hys spę̄re,
Thorow thē bodȳ hē can hym bę̄re,
Tō grōūnde can hē gꝙꝙ.

[1] os. [2] martyred. [3] redyn.

That sawe that ōþer[1], and faste can flee;
Thē ērle ǭvyrtōke hym undur a trē,
And wroght hym mikyll[2] wǫǫ;
Thēre þys traytōur can hym ȝēlde[3]
As[4] recrēaunt in thē fēlde[5],
Hē myght not flē hym frǫǫ.

Befǭre thē emperōūre they wente,
And thēre hē māde hym, verrament,
Tō telle for the nǫǫnys.
Hē seyde, 'Wē thoghte[6] hur tō spylle
For schē wolde not dō ōwre wylle,
That worthȳ is in wǫnys[6a].'
Thē ērle answeryd hym then,
'Thērfǭre, traytōurs, yē schall brenne
In thys fȳre bǭthe at ǭnys.'
The ērle anǭn them[7] hente,
And in thē fȳre hē þem brente,
Flēsche, felle, and bǫǫnys.

When þey wēre brent bǭthe twǫǫ,
Thē ērle prevelȳ can gǫǫ
Tō that rȳche abbaye.
Wyth joye[8] and processyōūn
They fett thē lādȳ intō thē tōwne,
Wyth myrthe as[4] Ī telle may.
Thē emperōūre was full gladd;
'Fette mē thē monke,' anǭn hē badd,
Whȳ wente hē sǭ awaye?
A byschoperȳke Ī wyll hym gyve[9],
Mȳ helpe, mȳ love, whȳll Ī lyve[10],
Bī God that owyth thys day.'

Hē dwellyth wyth the Po̅pe of Rōme,
Hē wyll bē glad of hys cōme,

'Lo̅rde,' hē seyde, 'sythe hyt is so̅

'Ȝys,' seyde thē emperōūre full fayne,
'All mȳ kynne þogh hē had slayne,
Hē is welcome tō mee.'

Then spake thē abbot wōrdys free,
'Lo̅rde, Ī tryste nōw on thee,
Yē wyll dō as[3] yē say[4];
Hyt is Sȳr Barnard of Tolōūs,
A no̅byll knyght and a chyvalrōūs,

Bī God that owyth thys day.'

Thē abbot seyde, 'I assente.'
Aftur thē ērle anǭn hē wente,
'And seyde, 'Sȳr, gǭ wyth mee.
Mȳ lǭrde and yē, bī Seynt Jǭhn,
Schull bē māde bǭthe at ǫǫn,
Goode frēndys for tō bee.'
Thērof þē ērle was full fayne.
Thē emperōure came hym agayne
And sayde, 'Mȳ frēnde sǭ free,
Mȳ wrathe[3] hēre Ī thē forgyve;
Mȳ helpe, mȳ love, whȳll Ī lyve,
Bī hym that dȳed on tree.'

Tōgedur lovelȳ can they kysse;
Thēreof all men had grẹ̄te blysse,
Thē rǭmaunse tellyth sǫǫ,
Hē māde hym steward of hys lǭnde,
And sẹ̄syd agayne intō hys hǭnde

Thē ērle tōke they thǫǫ,

XI. JOHN MYRC'S INSTRUCTIONS FOR PARISH PRIESTS[1]

Goᴅ seyth hymself, as wryten wẽ sȳnde,
That whenne þẽ blȳnde lẽdeth þẽ blȳnde
Intō þẽ dyche þey fallen bo̧o̧,
For þey ne sẽn wharebȳ tō go̧.
So̧ fāren prēstes nōw̄ bȳ dawe;
They bēth blȳnde in Goddes lawe,
That whenne þey scholde þẽ pēpul rēde,
Intō synne þey dō hem lẽde.
Thus þey hāve dō nōw̄ fulle ȝo̧re,
And alle is[2] for defawte of lo̧re;
Whareso̧re, þōū prēste curatōūre, ȝef þōū plẽse thȳ Sāvyōūre, ȝef thōw̄ bẽ not grẽte clerk,
Lōke thōw̄ mōste on thys werk;
For hēre thōw̄ myȝte sȳnde and[3] rēde
That þẽ behōveth tō cōnne nēde,
Hōw̄ thōw̄ schalt thȳ paresche prẽche,
And what þẽ nēdeth hem tō tẽche;
And whyche þōū mōste þȳself bẽ,
Hēre also̧ thōw̄ myȝte hyt sẽ,

Of hǫnde and mow̄þe þoū mōste bē trewe,
And grȩte ǫþes thow̄ mōste eschewe[1];
In wōrde and dēde þoū mōste bē mȳlde, ȝef þow̄ wolt serve God tō pay.

Tȩ̄che hem þenne, never þē later,

Tę̄che hem þus, ǭþer sum ōþere þynge,

For ry3t[1] glad may þat mon bē

For tō stynte þō̅w schalt not spāre;

But for tō praye in, as þē bōke telles;

II. THE DEATH OF SAINT ANDREW

Saint Andrew, Crīstis apostil dēre,
Whīls hē went in þis werld hēre,
Ful mekill folk in sēre cuntrē
Tō cristen trouth convertid hē;
And at þē last, sǭ it byfell,
In a cetē whǭre hē gun dwell.
A dōmesman in þat cetē was,
And his nāme was cald Ēgēas;
A man þat lifed in maumetrȳ
And in fals goddes, ful of envȳ.
Hē gederd tōgedir bǭth bǭnd and[1] frē,
Rīche and pōver of ilk cuntrē,
And bad þai suld māk sacrafīse
Untō his goddes of mekil prīse;
And whōsǭ wold noght ofrand māke,
Grę̄te vengeance wold hē on þām tāke.
Þē folk ful fast þan þeder soght
And tō þǭ warlaus wirschip wroght.
And sōne when Saint Andrew herd tell
Of þat fōūl fāre hōw̄ it bifell,
Þedir ful playnlī gun hē pas,
And þus sayd[2] unto Ēgēas:
'Sen þōū covaytes þat folk þē ken
Als dōmesman ǭver al ōþer men,
Þan suld þōū knaw in dēde and stevyn
Þī dōmesman, þat es God in hevyn,
Þat sal þē dēme efter þī dę̄de.
Him for tō knaw nōw̄ wār it nēde;

[1] &, as often. [2] he sayd.

Hē es þī God and o͝ver all mightī,
And all ōþer er fals maumetrī;
Him for tō honūre evermo͝re þē awe
And verrailȳ for þī God him knawe,
And draw þī hert fro͝ dēvils oway,
Þat lę̄dis tō pīne þat lastes ay.'
Ēgēas þan answerd ogayne:
'Þīr wurdes,' hē sayd, 'er all in vayne,
And no͝thing suth þōū tels mē till
Þat may Ī prōve bȳ propir skill;
For, whīls ȝōwre God þat ȝē on call
Prę̄chid þē pōple in ērth o͝verall,
And tę̄chid his men þat with him dweld
Tō prę̄che þē sāme þat þōū hēre teld,
Omāng þē Jews[1] hēre tāne was hē
And nayled and hānged high on trē;
And had hē bēne God, als þōū says,
It had noght bēne sō, by nō ways.
Þārfo͝re Ī say, þīr wurdes er vayne.'
Saint Andrew þan answerd ogayne:
'And þōū kōūth klērelȳ knaw and sē
Þē vertu of þat ilk hālȳ trē
Þat nāmed es þē cros in lānd,
Þan wald þōū wit and understānd
How Jēsu[2] Crīst, mȳ maystir frē,
Bī rę̄sonāble caus of charitē,
And for petē þat hē had in mȳnde
Of þē grę̄te meschēvys of mankȳnde,
Payn of þē cros hē put[3] him till,
Noght mawgrē his, bot with his will.'
Ēgēas þan untō þis thing
Answerd als in grę̄te hę̄thing;

[1] Iews. [2] Ihu, as usual. [3] putted.

Hē sayd, 'Hōw may þōu say þīr sawes,
Sen þat þīself þē suth wēle knawes?
At þē first tīme bitrayd was hē,
And thurgh āne of his awin mę̄nȝē,
And sethin tākin with Jewes[1] kēne,
And būnden and led furth þām bitwēne
Tō Cayfas hall þē graythest gāte,
And frǭ þeþin untō Sir Pīlāte;
Þǫre was hē dēmid on cros tō hāng,
Als þē Jews ordāned[2] þām omāng.
Maugrē his þai gun him spill,— Hōw prōves þōu þan it was his will?'
Saynt Andrew says, 'His will it was,
Þat may Ī prōve wēle ǭr Ī pas;
Of his mę̄nȝē mīself was āne[3]
In þē sāme tīme when hē was tāne[4],
And bifǭr þē time hē was bitrayd
Untō us all sāmyn þus hē sayd,
Hōw hē suld for mans syns bē sāld[5],
And suffer paynes ful manȳfālde[6]
And dȳ on þē cros right als þōu tels,
For hę̄le of mans sauls and for noght[7] els,
And on þē thrid day ful right uprīse.
Þīr wurdes hē tǭlde us on þis wīse;
Þārfǭre Ī tell þē in þis stę̄de,
Þat with his will hē sufferd dę̄de.'
Ēgēas þan thoght grę̄te dispīte,
And tō Saint Andrew said hē tīte:
'Þōu hāves lę̄rd[8] of a symple skōle,
Þī prę̄ching prōves þīself a fōle;
For, whethir it wār his will or nǭne,
Þōu grauntes þat hē on cros was dōne,

[1] Iews. [2] ordand [3] one. [4] tone. [5] sold. [6] manyfolde. [7] nght. [8] lerid.

And hāngid hē was als Ī said āre;
And þārfo̱re lę̄ve þat lūrdans lāre
And untō mȳ goddes offrand māke,
Or els Ī sall for þī God sāke
Ger hāng þē right on swilk a trē
Als þōū sais suld so̱ honōrde bē.
For fōūler dę̄de may no̱ man hāve,
Þārfo̱re on þē Ī vōūche it sāve.'
Saint Andrew þan, withōūten īre,
Said, 'Sertis þat es mȳ mo̱ste desīre.
Ī wold bē wurthī for his sāke
Opon a cros mȳ dę̄de tō tāke;
Þārtō ever sal Ī rę̄dī bē
For anȳ payn þōū may dō mē.'
Ēgēas þan, with grę̄te envȳ,
Sent efter al his turmentrȳ,
And bad þām smertlȳ þām omāng
Ordān a cros him for tō hāng,
And fest þārtō bo̱th hēnd and fēte
Þat no̱ne of þām with ōþer mēte.
'Festes him with no̱ne nayles, Ī rēde,
Tō ger him hāstilī bē so̱ dę̄de,
Bot bīndes him tō with rāpes strāng
So̱ þat hē may bē pȳned lāng.'
Tō dō his biding wār þai bayne;
A cros þai māde with al þaire maine,
And hāndes on him þan fast þai fest,
Tō dō him payne þai wār ful prest.
Þai led him thurgh þat cetē
Tō þē stę̄de whāre hē suld[1] hānget bē.
And al þē folk þat dweld obōūt[2]
Gedird tōgyder in ful grę̄te rōūt,

[1] he, not in MS. [2] þare obout.

And al þus said þai þām omāng:
'Allas, þis wirking es al wrāng;
What has þis rightwīs man dōne ill
Þat ȝē on þis wīse will him spill?
Þis nǭbill man þat never did mis
Ful saklēs suffers hē all þis;
Ful saklēs bēse hē dōne on rōde,
And saklēs sall men spill his blōde,
For hē has ever bēne blīth and glad Tō mēnd al men þat mistēr had.'
Saint Andrew þan þē puple praid,
And al þus untō þām hē sayd:
'Wēndis ogayn, all Ī ȝōw pray,
And lettes mē noght of joy[1] þis day;
Desturbes noght nōw mī passiōūn,
For untō blis it mākes mē bōūn.'
And sōne when Saint Andrew bihēlde
Þē cros bifǭr him in þē fēlde,
Untō God māde hē his prayēre,
And untō þē cros on þis manēre
Hē crīed and sayd with ful high voice:
'Hayl bē þōū, hālȳ and blisced croyce,
Þat haloud es and glǭrifīde[2]
With Crīstes membris on ilk a sīde;
And honōūrd es þōū with his bānes
Wēle better þan with precius stānes.
With joyful[3] hert Ī cum tō þē,
Sǭ þat þōū gladlī resayve mē,
Discīple of him withōūten pēre
Þat hānged on þē, mī mayster dēre.
Nōw es þōū rędī mē on tō hāng,
Þat Ī in hert hāve covayt lāng;

[1] ioy. [2] ever glorifide. [3] ioyful.

Ī hāve þē lufde with hert and will,
And covayted ever tō cum þē till.'
Bifōr þē cros þan knēlid hē dōūne,
And þus hē māde his orisōūne:
'Ā, nōbil cros of grętе bōūntē,
Frō ērthlī men resayve nōw mē,
And ȝēlde mē tō mȳ maister gōde[1]
Sō þat hē may, with mīlde[1a] mōde,
Bȳ þē resayve mē, þat hē wroght,
Als hē thurgh þē frō bāle mē boght;
Nō better bętе Ī hāve tō byd.'
His ōvermāst clōthes þan of hē did;
Tō þē turmentōūrs hē gun þām bēde,
And bad þai suld dō furth þaire dēde.
Þē turmentōūrs, when þis was sayde,
Tōke his bodī with bitter brayde;
Untō þē cros þai gun it bēnd,
And festid ful fast bōthe fēte and hēnd;
And all his bodī ful fast þai bānd
Als Ēgēas had þām comānd.
When hē was būnden sō on brēde,
Þai lēte him hing and hōme þai ȝēde.
Folk gederd ful faste[2] him obōūt,
Of al þat cuntrē in grętе rōūt;
Hē hēld his ēghen up untō hevin,
And þus hē sayd with joyful stevin:
'Ī sē mī Lōrd God Alwēldand[3],
And in his sight nōw hēre Ī stand.'
Opon þē cros þōre quik hē hāng
Twō days, prętchand þē puple omāng;
Þat was ful lāng swilk payn tō fēle,
Bot with Crīst was hē confort wēle.

[1] gude. [1a] mild. [2] fast. [3] god and alweldand.

Twentī thōūsand folk wār þāre[1]
Tō hēre him prȩche, with hertes sāre[2].
When þē first day till ēnd was went,
Al þat puple by ǭne assent
Til Ēgēas hōūs[3] fast þai ryn,
And said al quik þai suld him brin,
Bot if hē tīte gert tāk him dōūne
Þat hānged was ogayns rȩsōūne.
'Hē es a rightwīs man,' þai say,
'And wēle has dōne bǭth night and day;
A gude tȩcher ever has hē bēne,
And mǭre suthfast was never sēne,
And swilk a man, sir, for sertayne
Suld noght suffer sǭ hard payne;
Þārfǭre, bot hē bē tāne dōūn sōne,
In ȩvil tȳme þat dēde was dōne.'
Ēgēas drēd þē puple wrāke,
And dōūn hē hight him for tō tāke;
And furth hē went with þām in hī,
Bǭth hē and al hys turmentrī.
Þē folk thrāng efter al on a thrum;
And when Saint Andrew saw þām cum,
Of þaire cumyng hē was noght paid,
And untō Ēgēas þus hē sayd:
'Whārtō cums þōū untō mē,
Bot þōū wald trow in Jēsu frē,
And lȩve þī maumetes mǭre and les
And pray tō Jēsu of forgifnes?
If þōū will noght on þis wīse dō,
Ryn fast ǭr vengeance cum þē tō.
Þōū gettes nǭ force ne nǭ fuysōūne
Tō negh my bodī ne tāk it dōūne;

[1] þore. [2] sore. [3] hows.

Mī Lǭrd will lēn tō mē þat lāne
Þat quik sall Ī noght dōūn bē tāne.'
Þan turmentūrs, with ę̄gir mōde
Went tō him, als þai wār wōde.
Þai rugget at him with ful grę̄te bir,
Bot nǭthing might þai of him stir[1];
Þaire armes and hāndes sōne in hī
Als þai wār hērdes, wēx þai drī;
Als þai kest up þaire armes him till,
Als drȳ stykkes þan stōde þai still.
Saint Andrew þan māde his prayēre
Tō mightȳ God on þis manēre.
Hē said, 'Lǭrd, if it bē þī will,
In þis stę̄de lēt mē hing still,
Þat nǭne hāve pōwer mē tō fell
Dōūn of þis cros þat Ī on dwell,
Untō þat tȳme þīself vōūche sāve
Tō þē blis of hevin mē for tō hāve;
Bot lat mē hing still als Ī dō,
Til tȳme þōū tāk mī saul þē tō.'
When þis was said, þār cōme a light
Dōūn frǭ þe hevyn with bę̄mis bright,
And umbilappid his bodī abōūt.
Þē folk þārfǭre had mekil dōūt;
Þai might noght luke for mekil light
Untō his bodī, sǭ was it bright.
And als þē light was alþirmāste,
Tō God in hevyn hē gaf þē gāste.
Ēgēas was ful drēdand þan,
And for fērde fast hǭme hē ran;
Bot in þē way, ǭr hē cōme hāme,
Hē sufferd dę̄d with mekel[2] schāme.

[1] of stir. [2] mykel.

Sǭ sudan sorous wār tō him sent,
Als wurthī was, tō wǭ hē went.
Saint Andrew saul with āngell stevyn,
And with þat light was lift[1] to hevyn
Whǭre hē lēndes in ay lastand blis;
Alwēldand God þeder us wis.

Ēgēas had a wurthlī wīfe
Þat lufed Saint Andrew in his life;
For him scho ordānd a monument,
And berid his bodī with trew entent.
And of his grāve, als men might sē,
Sprāng up oyle ful fayre plentē
Þat medcyn was tō mǭre and les,
Þat þeder soght for sēre sēkenes.
And bȳ þat oyl, als says þē bōke[2],
Al þat cuntrē ensaumple tōke;
For, when it sprāng on sīdes sēre,
Þan hǭpid þai for tō hāve gude ȝēre
Of cōrn and fruyt and ōþer thing;
And when þai saw it skarslī spring,
Þan hǭpid þai tō hāve skant of cōrn,
And of fruyt, als Ī sayd biforn.

III. TREATISES OF RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE

I. On the Nature of the Bee.

Thē bee has thrē kȳndis. Āne es þat[3] scho es never ȳdill, and scho es noghte with thaym þat will noghte wyrke, bot castys thaym ōwte and puttes thaym awaye. Anōthire es þat, when scho flȳes, scho tākes ērthe in hyr fēte[4] þat scho bē noghte lyghtlȳ ǫverheghede in the ayere of wȳnde. Thē thyrde es that scho

kēpes clēn and bryghte hire wynges. Thus, ryghtwȳse men þat lufes God āre never in ȳdillnes: for[1] owthire þay ere in travayle, prayand or thynkande or rēdande or ōthere gude dōande, or withtākand[2] ȳdill mene, and schewand thaym worthȳ tō bē put frā þē ryste of hevene for thay will noghte travayle hēre. Þay tāke ērthe, þat es þay hālde þāmselfe vīle and ērthelȳ that thay bē noghte blawene with þē wȳnde of vanytē and of prȳde. Thay kēpe thaire wynges clēne; that es, þē twā commandementes of charytē þay fulfill in gud concyens, and thay hāfe ōthyr vertus unblēndyde with þē fylthe of syne and unclēne luste. Aristotill sais þat þē bees āre feghtande agaynes hym þat will drawe þaire honȳ frā thaym; swā sulde wē dō agaynes dēvells þat afforces tham tō rēve frā us þē honȳ of pōvre lȳfe and of grāce. For many āre þat never kane hālde in[3] þē ordyre of lufe ynesche þaire frēndys, sybbe or fremede, bot outhire þay lufe þaym ōvermekill or thay lufe þām ōverlyttill, settand thaire thoghte unryghtwȳselȳ on thaym, or þay lufe thaym ōverlyttill yf þay doo noghte all as þey wolde till þāme. Swylke kane noghte fyghte for thaire honȳ, forthȳ þē dēvelle turnes it tō wormes, and mākes þeire saules oftesȳthes full bitter in angwys and tēne, and besȳnes of vayne thoghtes and ōþer wrechidnes; for thay āre sō hevȳ in ērthelȳ frenchype þat þay may noghte flee intill þē lufe of Jēsu[4] Crīste, in þē wylke þay moghte well forgaa þē lufe of all crēatūrs lyfande in ērthe. Whārefōre, accordandlȳ, Arystotill sais þat some fowheles āre of gude flyghyng, þat passes frā ā lānd tō anōthire. Some āre of ill flyghynge for hevȳnes of bodȳ and for þaire neste es noghte ferre frā þē ērthe. Thus es it of thaym þat turnes þām tō Godes servȳs. Some āre of gude flyghynge for thay flȳe frā ērthe tō hevene, and rystes thaym thāre in thoghte, and āre fedde in delīte of Goddes lufe and has thoghte of nā lufe of þē worlde. Some āre þat kan noghte flȳe frā þis lānde, bot in þē waye late theyre herte ryste, and delȳtes[5] þaym in sēre lufes of mene and womene, als þay come and gaa, nōwe āne and nōwe anōthire. And in Jēsu Crīste þay kan fȳnde nā swettnes; or if þay ānȳ tȳme fēle oghte it es swā lyttill and swā schorte, for ōthire thoghtes þat āre in thaym, þat it brynges thaym till nā stābylnes. Or þay āre lȳke till a fōwle þat es callede strucyo, or storke, þat has wenges and it may noghte flȳe for charge of bodȳ. Swā þay hāfe undirstāndynge, and fastes and wākes and sēmes hālȳ tō mens syghte, bot thay may noghte flȳe tō luſe and contemplācyōne of God, þay are sǭ chargede wyth ōthyre affeccyōns and ōthire vanytēs.

II. A Notabill Tretys off the Ten Comandementys Drawene by Richerde the Hermyte off Hampull.

Thē fyrste comandement es, 'Thȳ Lǭrde God þōū[1] sall lōūte and til hym ānelȳ þōū sall serve.' In this comandement es forbǭden all mawmetrȳse, all wychecrafte and charemynge, thē wylke may dō nā remedȳ till ānȳ sēknes of mane, woman, or bę̄ste, for þay erre þē snarrys of þē dēvelle bȳ þē whilke hē afforces hym tō dyssayve manekȳnde. Alswā in þis comandement es forbǭdyn tō gyffe trouthe till sorcerȳe or till dyvȳnynges[2] bȳ stērnys, or bȳ drę̄mys, or bȳ ānȳ swylke thynges. Astronomȳenes byhāldes þē daye and þē houre and þē poynte þat man es borne in, and undir whylke sȳgne[3] hē es borne, and þē poynte þat hē begynnes tō bē in, and bȳ þīre sȳgnes[4] and ōþer þay saye þat that[5] sall befall þē man aftyrwarde; bot theyre errowre es reprōffede of hālȳ doctōurs. Hālȳ crosses men sall lowte for thay āre in sȳgne[3] of Crȳste crucyfīede. Tō ymāges[6 6a] es þē lovynge þat es till thaym of whaym þai[6] are þē ymages; for þat entent ānelȳ þai[6] are for tō lowte. Thē tōthire comandement es, 'Þōū sall noghte tāke þē nāme of God in vayne.' Hēre es forbǭdene āthe withōwttene chę̄sōn. Hē þat nevenes God and swę̄ris fals, dispȳses[7] God. In thrē manērs mane may syne in swę̄rynge; that es, if hē swę̄re agayne

Alsō, if hē com agaynes his āthe, noght fulfillande þat hē has sworne. Thē nām of God es tākyn in vayne one manȳ manērs,—with herte, with mōuthe, with werke. With herte tākes false crystyn mene it in vayne, þat rescheyves þē sacrement withōwttene grāce in sawle. With mōuthe es it tāne in vayne with all āthes bre̊kynge; of new pre̊chynge þat es vanytē and undevo̊cyōne; prayēre when wē honōur God with ōure lippes and ōure hertys erre ferre frā hym. IV. A METRICAL HOMILY—THE SIGNS OF THE DOOM

Tōday Sain Lōūk telles us,
In ōūr godspel, þat Jēsus
Spac of þing þat es tō com,
And nāmelīc of þē dai of dōm.
Tākning hē saide[1] sal bē dōn
Bāthe in þē son and in þē mōn,
And in þē stērnes al bidēn;
And folc sal þǭl wandrēþ and tēn,
For folc sal dwīn[2] for din of sē
And for bāret þat þan sal bē.
Ǭver al þis werd bēs rędnes,

For mihtī gāstes of þē hevin
Sal bē afrayed of þat stevin;

V. THE SONGS OF LAWRENCE MINOT

I.

Līthes and ī sall tell ȝōw tyll
Þē bataile of Halidon Hyll.

Trew king þat sittes in trōne,
Untō þē ī tell my tāle,
And untō þē ī bid a bōne,
For þōū ert būte of all my bāle.
Als þōū māde midelērd and þē mōne,
And bēstes and fowles grēte and smāle,
Unto mē sēnd þī socōre sōne
And dresce mȳ dēdes in þis dāle.

In þis dāle ī drōūpe and dāre
For dērne[2] dēdes þat dōne mē dēre;
Of Ingland had mȳ hert grēte cāre
When Edward fōūnded first tō wēre.
Þē Franche men wār frek tō fāre
Ogaines him with schēld and spēre;
Þai turned ogayn with sīdes sāre,
And al þaire pomp noght worth a rēre.

[1] penanz. [2] dern.

A pęre of prīse es mǫre sumtȳde
Þan all Þē bǫste of Normandȳe[1].
Þai sent Þaire schippes on ilk a sīde
With flesch and wīne and whęte and rȳe;
With hert and hānd, es noght at hīde,
For tō help Scotland gan Þai hȳe;
Þai fled and durst nǫ dēde abīde[2],
And all Þaire fāre noght wurth a flȳe.

For[3] all Þaire fāre Þai durst noght fight,
For dędes dint had Þai slīke dōūt;
Of Scotland had Þai never sight
Ay whīls Þai wār of wōrdes stōūt.
Þai wald hāve męnd Þām at Þaire might
And besȳ wār Þai Þāre obōūt;

II. ARTHUR'S LAST BATTLE—FROM LAYAMON'S BRUT

Þā cōm þēr in āre tīden ān oht mon rīden,
And brohte tīdinge Arthūre þān kīnge

For hē wēnde þat hē brohte boden swīðe gōde.

[1] Moddrede, as often, but less commonly than the form with one d.
[2] Moddred. [3] hondeden.

V. ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER'S CHRONICLE—HOW THE NORMANS CAME TO ENGLAND

Mūche haþ[5] þē sorwe ibē ofte in Engelǭnde,
As ȝē mōwe hēr and ę̄r ihūre and[6] understǭnde,
Of monī bataile þat haþ[5] ibē, and þat men þat lǭnd nōme.
Verst, as ȝē habbeþ[7] ihūrd, þē emperōurs of Rōme,
Sūþþe Saxons and Englisse mid batayles strǭnge,
And sūþþe hii of Denemarch þat hūlde it al sǭ lǭnge;
Atte laste hii of Normandī, þat maisters bēþ ȝūt hēre,
Wonne hit and hǭldeþ ȝūt, ich olle[8] telle in wūch manēre.
Þǭ Willam bastard hūrde telle of Haraldes swikelhē̆de,
Hou hē hadde[9] ymad him king and mid sūch falshē̆de,—
Vor þat lǭnd him was bitāke, as hē wēl wūste,

Tō süch ōþ as was idō mid strengþe, as hē wēl wüste;
Vor ȝif a maide treuþe ipliȝt tō dō an fōle dēde
Al ǫne privelīche, wiþōūte hire frēndes rēde,

Wiþōūte cōnseil of al þē lǫnd, of þing þat mīn noȝt nas;

And ȝif þōū mē wolt sēche in Engelǫnd ne bē þōū noȝt sǫ stūrne;

Þǫ Willam hürde þat hē wolde susteinī his[1] tricherīe,

Tō cōnseilī him in þis cas, and tō helpe him in süch nēde;
And hē gan of hor porchas largelīche hom bēde,

Alsǭ Englysch men, þeyȝ hȳ hadde fram þē bygynnyng þrē manēr spę̄che, sōū̅þeron, norþeron, and myddel spę̄che, in þē myddel of þē lǭnd, as hȳ cōme of þrē manēr pēople of Germānia, nǭþelę̄s, bȳ commyxstiōn and mellyng fürst wiþ Dānes and afterward wiþ Normans, in menȳe þē contray lǭngāge ys apeyred, and som useþ strānge wlaffyng, chyteryng, harryng and garryng, grisbittyng. II. ADAM DAVY'S DREAMS ABOUT EDWARD II

Tō ōūre Lǫrde Jēsu [8b] Crīst in hevene
Ich tōday shewe mȳne swevene,
Þat ich mette in ǫne niȝht [9]
Of a kniȝht of mychel miȝht;
His nāme is ihǭte Sir Edward þē Kyng,
Prince of Wāles, Engelǫnde þē faire þing.
Mē mette þat hē was armed wēl
Bǫþe wiþ ȳrne and [10] wiþ stēl,
And on his helme þat was of stēl
A corōūne of gōld bicōm hym wēl.
Biforę þē shrȳne of Seint Edward hē stood,
Myd glad chēre and mȳlde of mood,
Mid twǫ kniȝttes armed on eiþer sīde
Þat hē ne miȝht þennes gǫǫ ne rīde.
Hetilīch hii leiden hym upon
Als hii miȝtten myd swērde [11] dōn.

Hē stood þēre wēl swīþe stille,
And þōled al tōgedres her wille;
Ne strǫǫk ne ȝaf hē aȝeinward
Tō þilk þat hym wēren wiþerward.
Wōūnde ne was þēre blōdȳ nǭn,
Of al þat hym þēre was dōn.
After þat me þouȝht onǭn,
As þē tweie kniȝttes wēren gǭn,
In eiþer ēre of ōūre kyng,
Þēre sprǭnge ōūt a wēl fāre þing.
Hii wēxen ōūt sǭ briȝht sǭ glēm
Þat shȳneð of þē sonnebēm.
Of dīvers colōūres hii wēren
Þat cōmen ōūt of bǭþe his ēren;
Foure[1] bēndes alle bȳ rewe on eiþer ēre
Of dīvers colōūrs, rēd and whīte als hii wēre;
Als fer as mē þouȝht[2] ich miȝht see
Hii spredden fer and wȳde in þē cuntrē.
Forsōþe mē mette þis ilke[3] swevene—
Ich tāke tō witnesse God of hevene—
Þē Wedenysday bifǭre þē decollāciōūn of Seint Jǭn,
It is mǭre þan twelve mōneþ gǭn.
God mē graunte sǭ heveneblis,
As mē mette þis swevene as it is.
Nōw̄ God þat is Hevenekyng,
Tō mychel joye tōūrne þis mētyng.

Anōþer swevene mē mette on a Tiwesniȝht,
Bifǭre þē fēst of alle halewen, of þat ilk kniȝht,
His nāme is nempned hēre bifǭre;—
Blissed bē þē tȳme þat hē was bǭre;
For wē shullen þē day see,
Emperōūr ychǭsen hē worþe of cristientē.
God us graunte þat ilke[3] bōne,

[1] ffoure; ff = F, as occasionally. [2] þou. [3] ilk.

Þat þilke[1] tȳdyng hēre wē sōne
Of Sir Edward ōūre dērworþ kyng.
Ich mette of hym anōþere fair mę̄tyng:
Tō ōūre Lǭrde of hevene ich telle þis,
Þat mȳ swevene tōūrne tō mychel blis.
Mē þouȝht hē rǫǫd upon an asse,
And þat ich tāke God tō witnesse;
Ywonden hē was in a mantel gray;
Tōward Rōme hē nōm his way.
Upon his hevede sat an gray hure,
It sēmed hym wēl amę̄sure.
Hē rǫǫd wiþūten hǭse and shō,
His wone was nouȝht sǭ for tō dō;
His shankes sēmeden al bloodrę̄de;
Mȳne herte wēp for grę̄te drę̄de.
Als a pilgryme hē rǫǫd tō Rōme,
And þider hē cōm wēl swīþe sōne.
Þē þride[2] swevene mē mette ā niȝht
Riȝht of þat dērworþe kniȝht;
Þē Wedenysday ā niȝht it was Next þē day of Seint Lucīe bifǭre Cristenmesse.
Ich shewe þis, God of hevene,
Tō mychel joye hē tōūrne my swevene.
Mē þouȝht þat ich was at Rōme,
And þider ich cōm swīþe sōne;
Þē Pǭpe and Sir Edward, ōūre kyng,
Bǭþe hii hadden a newe dubbyng.
Hure gray was hēr clǭþing;
Of ōþere clǭþes seiȝ ich nǭþing.
Þē Pǭpe ȝēde bifǭre, mȳtred wēl faire iwys,
Þē Kyng Edward cōm corōūned myd grę̄t blis;
Þat bitǭkneþ hē shal bē
Emperōūr in cristianetē.

[1] þilk. [2] þrid.

Jēsus Crīst, ful of grāce,
Graunte ōūre kyng in everȳ plāce
Maistrīe of his wiþerwynes,
And of alle wicked Sarasynes.
Mē met a swevene on worþingniȝht,
Of þat ilche dērworþe kniȝht;
God ich it shewe, and tō witnesse tāke,
And sǭ shīlde mē frǭ synne and sāke.
Intō an chapēl ich cōm of ōūr Lēfdȳ;
Jēsus Crīst, hire lēve son, stood bȳ;
On rōde hē was, an lovelīch man
Als þilke[1] þat on rōde was dōn.
Hē unneiled his hǭnden twǭ,
And seide wiþ þē kniȝht hē wolde gǭ:
'Maiden and mōder and mȳlde quēne,
Ich mōte mȳ kniȝht tōday sēne.
Lēve mōder, ȝive mē lēve,
For ich ne may nǭ lenger bilēve;
Ich mōte conveye þat ilke kniȝht
Þat us haþ served day and niȝht;
In pilerināge hē wil gǭn,
Tō bēn[2] awrēke of ōūre fǭn.'
'Lēve son, ȝōūre wille sǭ mōte it bē,
For þē kniȝht bǭþe day and niȝht haþ served mē,
Bǭþe at ōūre wille wēl faire iwys,
Þērfǭre hē haþ served hevenerīche blis.'
God þat is in hevene sǭ briȝht,
Bē wiþ ōūre kyng bǭþe day and niȝht.
Amēn, amēn, sǭ mōte it bē;
Þērtō biddeþ a paternoster and an āvē.
Adam þē marchal of Stretford-atte-Bowe,
Wēl swīþe wīde his nāme is yknowe,
Hē hymself mette þis mētyng,

[1] þilk. [2] bien.

Tō witnesse hē tākeþ Jēsu, hevenekyng;
On Wedenysday in clęne leinte,
A voice mē będe Ī ne shulde nouȝht feinte;
Of þē swevenes þat hēr bēn write,
Ī shulde swīþe dōn mȳ lǫrde kyng tō wite.
Ich answerde þat Ī ne miȝht for derk gǫn.
Þē vois mē bad gǫǫ, for liȝht ne shuld ich faile nǫn,
And þat Ī ne shulde lette for nǫþing,
Þat ich shulde shewe þē kyng mȳ mętyng.
Forþ ich went swīþe onǫn,
Ęstward as mē þouȝht ich miȝht gǫn;
Þē liȝht of hevene mē cōm tō,
As ich in mȳ waye shulde gǫ.
Lǫrd, mȳ bodȳ ich ȝēlde þee tō,
What ȝōūre wille is wiþ mē tō dō.
Ich tāke tō witnesse God of hevene,
Þat sōþlīch ich mette þis ilche swevene;
Ī ne reiche what ȝee myd mȳ bodȳ dō,
Als wisselīch Jēsus of hevene mȳ soule undergǫ.
Þē Þursday next þē bęryng of ōūre Lęfdȳ,
Mē þouȝht an aungel cōm Sir Edward bȳ:
Þē aungel bitook Sir Edward on hǫnde,
Al blēdyng þē foure forþer clawes sǫ węre of þē Lǫmbe.
At Caunterbirȳ, bifǫre þē heiȝe autere, þē kyng stood,
Yclǫþed al in rędе murrē[1]; hē was of þat blee rędе as blood.
God, þat was on gōde Frīday dōn on þē rōde,
Sō turne my swevene niȝht and day tō mychel gōde.
Tweye poynts[2] þęre bēn þat bēn unshewed
For mē ne worþe tō clerk ne lewed;
Bot tō Sir Edward ōūre kyng,
Hym wil ich shewe þilk mętyng.
Ich telle ȝōū, forsōþe wiþōūten lęs,
Als God of hevene maide Mārīe tō mōder chęs,

[1] m're. [2] poyntz.

Þē aungel cōm tō mē, Adam Dāvȳ, and sę̄de,
'Bot þōū, Adam, shewe þis, þee worþe wēl yvel mēde.'
Ī shewe ȝōū þis ilk mę̄tyng,
As þē aungel it shewed mē in a visiōūn;
Bot þis tǭkenyng bifalle, sǭ dooþ mē intō prisōūn.
Lǭrde, mȳ bodȳ is tō ȝōūre wille[1];
Þeiȝ ȝee willeþ mē þę̄rfǭre spille,
Ich it wil tāke in þǭlemōdenesse,
Als God graunte us heveneblisse;
And lę̄te us nevere þę̄rof mysse,
Þat wē ne mōten þider wēnde in clennesse.
Amēn, Amēn, sǭ mōte it bē,
And lę̄te us nevere tō ōþere waye tee.
Whǭsǭ wil spę̄ke myd mē, Adam þē marchal,
In Stretforþe-Bowe hē is yknowe and ǭvere al;
Ich ne shewe nouȝht þis for tō hāve mēde,
Bot for God Almiȝttīes drēde,
For it is sooþ.

III. THE FIRST PETITION TO PARLIAMENT IN ENGLISH

Tō[2] thē mǭost nǭble and[3] worthīest lǭrdes, mǭost ryghtful and wȳsest Cōnseille tō ōwre līge Lǭrde thē Kyng, compleynen, if it lȳke tō yōū, thē folk of thē Mercerȳe of London as[4] a membre of thē sāme citee, of manȳ wrǭnges subtiles and alsǭ ǭpen oppressiōns ydō tō hem bȳ lǭnge tȳme hēre bifǭre passed. Of which ǫǫn was, whę̄re thē elecciōn of mairaltee is tō bē tō thē frēmen of thē citee bī gōde and paisible avȳs of thē wȳsest and trewest, at ǭ day in thē yę̄re frēlīch,—thę̄re, noughtwithstǭndyng thē sāme frēdam or fraunchīse,

[1] willelle. [2] T. [3] ȝ, as usual. [4] as not in MS.

Nicholus[1] Brembre wyth his upbēr̄s propō̄sed hym, thē yēre next after Jō̄hn[2] Northampton mair of thē sāme citee with strō̄nge hō̄nde as it is ful knowen, and thourgh debāte and strenger partȳe ayeins thē pe̊es bifō̄re purveyde was chō̄sen mair, in destrucciō̄n of manȳ ryght. For in thē sāme yēre thē forsaid Nicholus, withoūten nēde, ayein the pe̊es māde dȳverse enarmynges bī day and e̊ke bī nyght, and destruyd thē Kynges trewe lȳges, som with ō̄pen slaughtre, somme[3] bī false emprisōnementz; and some fledde thē citee for fe̊ere, as it is ō̄penlīch knowen.

And sō̄ ferthermō̄re for tō̄ susteyne thise wrō̄nges and manȳ ōthere, thē next yēre after thē sāme Nicholus, ayeins thē forsaide frēdam and trewe commūnes[4], did crȳe ō̄penlīch that nō̄ man sholde come tō̄ chēse her mair but such as wē̄re sompned, and thō̄ that wē̄re sompned wē̄re of his ordynaunce and after his avȳs. And in thē nyght next after folwynge hē did carȳe grē̄te quantitee of armūre tō̄ thē guyldehalle, with which as wēl straungērs of thē contree as ōthere of withinne wē̄re armed on thē morwe ayeins his owne proclamāciō̄n, that was such that nō̄ man shulde bē armed; and certein busshmentz wē̄re laide that, when freemen of thē citee cōme tō̄ chēse her mair, brē̄ken up armed crȳinge with lōūde voice 'Slē̄, slē̄,' folwyng hem; whē̄rthourgh thē pēple for fe̊ere fledde tō̄ hoūses and ōther hīdynges[5], as in lō̄nde of werre adradde tō̄ bē dē̄d in commūne[6].

And thus yet hiderward hath thē mairaltee bēn hō̄lden as it wē̄re of conquest or maistrȳe, and manȳ ōthere offices als, sō̄ that what man, pryvē or apert in special that hē myghte wyte grocchyng, pleyned or hēlde ayeins anȳ of his wrō̄nges or bī puttyng forth of whō̄msō̄ it wē̄re, wē̄re it never sō̄ unprēnāble, wē̄re apē̄ched and it wē̄re displē̄syng tō̄ hym Nicholus, anō̄n was emprisōned and, though it wē̄re ayeins falshē̄de of thē le̊est officēr that hym lüst meynteigne, was l.ō̄lden untrewe līgeman tō̄ ōw̄re Kyng; for whō̄ reprōved such an officēr, maynteigned bȳ hym, of wrǭnge or elles, hē forfaited ayeins hym Nicholus and hē, unworthȳ as hē saide, represented thē Kynges estāt. Alsǭ if anȳ man bicause of servȳce or ǭther lǭveful comaundement apprǭched a lǭrde, tō which lǭrde hē, Nicholus[1], dradde his falshē̦de tō bē knowe tō, anǭn was apē̦ched that hē was false tō thē cōnseille of thē citee and sǭ tō thē Kyng.

And yif in general his falsenesse wēre ayeinsaide, as of us tōgydre of thē Mercerȳe or ōthere crafles, or ǭnȳ cōnseille wolde hāve tāken tō ayeinstande it, or,—as tȳme[2] ōut of mȳnde hath bē used,—wolden companȳe tōgydre, how̄ lawful sǭ it wē̦re for ōwre nēde or profite, we[3] wē̦re anǭn apē̦ched for arrȳsē̦rs ayeins thē pē̦es, and falslȳ manȳ of us of[4] that yēt stǭnden endīted. And wē bēn ǭpenlīch disclaundred, hǭlden untrewe and traitōurs tō ōwre Kyng; for thē sāme Nicholus sayd bifǭr mair, aldermen, and ōwre craft bifǭr hem gadred in plāce of recorde, that twentȳ or thirtȳ[5] of us wē̦re worthȳ tō bē drawen and hanged, thē which thyng lȳke tō yowre worthȳ lǭrdship bȳ an ē̦ven juge tō bē prōved or disprōved thē whether that trowthe may shewe; for trouthe amǭnges us of fewe or elles nǭ man manȳ day dorst bē shewed; and nought ǭpenlīch unshewed or hidde it hath bē bȳ man nōw̄, but alsǭ of bifǭre tȳme thē mǭost profitāble poyntes of trewe governaunce of thē citee, compīled tōgidre bī lǭnge lābōūr of discrēte and wȳse men, wythōūt cōnseille of trewe men,—for thei sholde nought bē knowen ne contynued,—in thē tȳme of Nicholus Exton, mair, ōūterlīche wē̦re brent.

And sǭ fer forth falsehē̦de hath bē used that oft tȳme hē, Nicholus Brembre, saide, in sustenaunce of his falshē̦de, ōwre līge lǭrdes wille was such that never was such, as wē suppǭse. Hē saide alsǭ, whan hē hadde disclaundred us, which of us wolde yēlde hym false tō his Kyng, thē Kyng sholde dō hym grāce, cherise hym, and bē good Lǭrde tō hym: and if anȳ of us alle, Alsō̄, wē hāve bē comaunded ofttȳme, up ōwͤre līgeaunce, tō̄ unnēdeful and unlę̄veful dīverse dōynges, and alsō̄ tō wythdrawe us bī thē sāme comaundement frō̄ thynges nę̄deful and lę̄fful, as was shewed whan a companȳe of gōde women, thę̄re men dorst nought, travailleden bārfōte tō ōwͤre līge Lō̄rde tō sēche grāce of hym for trewe men as they suppō̄sed; for thanne wę̄re such proclamācioūns māde that nō̄ man ne woman sholde apprō̄che ōwͤre līge Lō̄rde for sēchyng of grāce, and ō̄vermanȳ ōthere comaundementz alsō̄, bifō̄re and sithen, bī suggestiōn and informāciōn of suche that wolde nought her falsnesse had bē knowen tō ōwͤre līge Lō̄rde. And, lō̄rdes, bȳ yōwͤre lę̄ve, ōwͤre lȳge Lō̄rdes comaundement tō symple and unkonning men is a grę̄t thyng tō bēn used sō̄ familerlīch withōūten nēde; for they, unwȳse tō sāve it, mōwͤe lyghtlȳ thę̄r ayeins forfait.

Forthȳ, grāciōūse lō̄rdes, lȳke it tō yowͤ tō tāke hēde in what manēre and whę̄re owͤre līge Lō̄rdes powër hath bēn mysused bȳ thē forsaid Nicholus[1] and his upbę̄rę̄rs, for sithen thise wrō̄nges bifō̄resaide hān bēn used as accidental or comūne[2] braunches outward, it sheweth wēl thē rōte of hem is a ragged subject or stok inward, that is thē forsaid brēre or Brembre, thē whiche comūne[2] wrō̄nge uses, and manȳ ōther if it lȳke tō yow, mōwͤe bē shewed and wēl knowen bī an indifferent juge and mair of ōwͤre citee; thē which wyth yōwͤre ryghtful Lō̄rdeship ygraunted formǭst pryncipal remedȳe, as Goddes lawe and al rę̄soun wole, that nō̄ dōmesman stō̄nde tōgidre juge and partȳe, wrō̄nges sholle mǭre ō̄penlīch bē knowe and trouth dor apę̄re. And ellis as amō̄nge us, wē konne nought wyte in what manēre without a moch gretter disę̄se, sith thē governaunce of this citee stāndeth, as

IV. CHAUCER'S CANTERBURY TALES

The Tale of the Pardoner

In Flaundres whīlom was a compaignȳe
Of yonge folk that haunteden folȳe,
As rīot, hasard, stywes and tavernes,
Whēreas with harpes, lutes and gyternes
They daunce and pleyen at dees bōthe day and nyght,
And ētен alsō, and drynken ōver hir myght;
Thurgh which they doon thē devel sacrifīse
Withinne that develes temple in cursed wīse
Bȳ superfluytee abhomynāble.
Hir ōthes been sō grēte and sō dampnāble
That it is grislȳ for tō heere hem swēre,
Oure blissed Lōrdes bodȳ they tōtēre;
Hem thoughte þat Jewes rente hym noght ynough,
And ēch of hem at ōtheres synne lough.
And right anōn thanne cōmen tombestēres
Fētȳs[1] and smale, and yonge frutestēres,
Syngēres with harpes, baudes, wāferēres,
Whiche been thē verray develes officēres,
Tō kyndle and blowe thē fȳr of lecherȳe,
That is annexed untō glotonȳe.

[1] ffetys; ff for F, as often.

Thē hǫǫlȳ writ tāke Ī tō mȳ witnesse,
That luxurīe is in wȳn and dronkenesse.
Lǭ, hōw þat dronken Looth unkȳndelȳ
Lay bȳ hise doghtres twǭ unwitynglȳ.
Sǭ dronke hē was hē nyste what hē wroghte.
Herōdes, whǭ sǭ wēl thē stǭrīes soghte,
Whan hē of wȳn was repleet at hise fęęste,
Right at his owene tāble hē yaf his hęęste
Tō slęęn thē Baptist Jǭhn, ful giltelęęs.
Senek seith ęęk[1] a good wōrd, dōūtelęęs;
Hē seith hē kan nǭ difference fȳnde
Bitwix a man that is ōūt of his mȳnde
And a man which that is dronkelewe,
Bot that woodnesse, fallen in a shrewe,

Ǭ glotonȳe, ful of cursednesse;
Ǭ cause first of ōūre confusiōn,
Ǭ original of ōūre dampnāciōn,
Til Crīst hadde boght us with his blood agayn!
Lǭ, hōw deere, shortlȳ for tō sayn,
Aboght was thilke cursed vileynȳe;
Corrupt was al this world for glotonȳe.
Adam ōūre fader, and his wȳf alsǭ,
Frǭ Paradȳs tō lābōūr and tō wǭ
Węre dryven for that vīce, it is nǭ drędę:
For whīl þat Adam fasted, as Ī rędę,
Hē was in Paradȳs, and whan þat hē

Anǭn hē was ōūtcast tō wǭ and peyne.
Ǭ glotonȳe, on thee wēl oghte us pleyne!

Thise rīotōūres[2] thrē, of which Ī telle,
Lǭnge ęrst ęr prīme rǭng of anȳ belle,

[1] eek, not in MS.; Corp. MS. eek good wordes. [2] riotours.

Wȩ̄re set hem in a taverne tō drynke;
And as they sat they herde a belle clynke
Biforn a cors was carīed tō his grāve,
That ǫǫn of hem gan callen tō his knāve,
'Gō̄ bet,' quod hē, 'and axe rȩ̄dīlȳ
What cors is this þat passeth heer forbȳ,
And looke þat thōū report his nāme weel.'
'Sire,' quod this boy, 'it nēdeth never a dȩ̨ȩ̨l,
It was mē tǫǫld ē̄r yē cam heer twō̄ hōūres;
Hē was, pardee, an ō̄ld felawe of yōūres,
And sodeynlȳ hē was yslayn tōnyght,
Fordronke, as hē sat on his bench upryght.
Thē̄r cam a privee theef men clē̄peth dȩ̨ȩ̨th,
That in this contree al the pēple slȩ̨ȩ̨th,
And with his spē̄re hē smǫǫt his herte atwō̄
And wente his wey withōūten wōrdes mō̄.
Hē hath a thōūsand slayn this pestilence,
And maister, ē̄r yē come in his presence,
Mē thynketh that it wē̄re necessarīe
For tō bē war of swich an adversarīe;
Bēth rȩ̄dȳ for tō meete hym everemǫǫre,—
Thus taughte mē mȳ dāme, Ī sey namǫǫre.'
'Bȳ Seinte Mārīe,' seyde this tavernēr,
Thē chīld seith sooth, for hē hath slayn this yȩ̨ȩ̨r,
Henne ō̄ver a mīle withinne a grȩ̨ȩ̨t villāge,
Bǭthe man and womman, chīld and hȳne and pāge;
Ī trowe his habitāciōn bē thē̄re.
Tō been avȳsed grȩ̨ȩ̨t wysdōm it wē̄re,
Ē̄r that hē dide a man a dishonōūr.'
'Yē̄, Goddes armes,' quod this rīotōūr,
'Is it swich peril with hym for tō meete?
Ī shal hym sēke bȳ wey and ȩ̨ȩ̨k bȳ strēte,
Ī māke avōūw tō Goddes digne bō̄nes!
Herkneth, felawes, wē thrē been al ō̄nes,

Lat ȩch of us hȭlde up his hande til oother
And ȩch of us bicomen ōtheres brōther,
And wē wol slęȩn this false traytōūr dęȩth.
Hē shal bē slayn which þat sȭ manȳe slęȩth,
Bȳ Goddes dignitee, ȩr it bē nyght.'
Tōgidres hān thise thrē hir trouthes plight
Tō lyve and dȳen ȩch of hem for oother,
As though hē wȩre his owene ybȭren[1] brōther.
And up they stirte, al[2] dronken in this rāge,
And forth they gǫǫn tōwardes that villāge
Of which thē tavernēr hadde spȭke biforn;
And manȳ a grislȳ ǫǫth thanne hān they sworn,
And Crīstes blessed bodȳ they tōrente,—
Dęȩth shal bē dęȩd, if that they may hym hente.
Whan they hān gǫǫn nat fullȳ half a mīle,
Right as they wolde hān troden ȭver a stīle,
An ǫǫld man and a pōvre with hem mette.
This ȭlde man ful mēkęlȳ hem grette
And seyde thus, 'Nōw, lȭrdes, God yōw see.'
Thē prōūdeste of thise rīotōūres[3] three Answerde agayn, 'What, carl, with sȭrȳ grāce
Whȳ art ōw al forwrapped sāve thȳ fāce?
Whȳ lyvest ōw sȭ lȭnge in sȭ grȩȩt āge?'
This ȭlde man gan looke in his visāge
And seyde thus: 'For Ī ne kan nat fȳnde
A man, though þat Ī walked intō Ȳnde,
Neither in citee nor in nȭ villāge,
That wolde chaunge his youthe for mȳn āge;
And thȩrfȭre moot Ī hān mȳn āge stille
As lȭnge tȳme as it is Goddes wille.
Ne dęȩth, allas, ne wol nat hān mȳ lȳf;
Thus walke Ī lȳk a resteleęs kaitȳf,
And on thē grōūnd, which is mȳ moodres gāte,

[1] yborn. [2] and. [3] riotours.

Ī knokke with mȳ staf bo̧the e̦rlȳ and lāte,
And seye, "Leeve mooder, le̦e̦t mē in!
Lo̧, hōw Ī vanysshe, flessh and blood and skyn;
Allas, whan shul mȳ bo̧nes been at reste?
Mooder, with yōw wolde Ī chaunge mȳ cheste
That in mȳ chāmbre lo̧nge tȳme hath bē,
Ye̦, for an heyre clōwt tō wrappe mē."
But yet tō mē shē wol nat dō that grāce;
For which ful pāle and welked is mȳ fāce.
But, sīres, tō yōw it is no̧ curteisȳe
Tō spe̦ken tō an o̧ld man vileynȳe,
But hē trespasse in wōrd or elles in de̦de.
In ho̧lȳ writ yē may yourself wēl re̦de,
Agayns an o̧old man, ho̧or upon his he̦e̦d,
Yē sholde arīse; whērfo̧re Ī yeve yōw re̦e̦d,
Ne dooth untō an o̧old man no̧on harm nōw,
Namo̧ore than þat yē wolde men did tō yōw
In āge, if that yē so̧ lo̧nge abȳde;
And God bē with yōw whe̦re yē go̧ or rȳde,—
Ī moote go̧ thider as Ī hāve tō go̧.'
'Nay, o̧lde cherl, bȳ God thōū shalt nat so̧,' Seyde this oother hasardōūr ano̧n;
'Thōū partest nat so̧ lightlȳ, bȳ Seint Jo̧hn!
Thōū spak right nōw of thilke traytōūr de̦e̦th,
That in this contree alle ōūre freendes sle̦e̦th;
Hāve heer mȳ trouthe, as thōū art his espȳe,
Telle whe̦re hē is or thōū shalt it abȳe,
Bȳ God and bȳ thē ho̧lȳ sacrement.
For soothlȳ thōū art o̧on of his assent
Tō sle̦en us yonge folk, thōū false theef.'
'Nōw, sīres,' quod hē, 'if þat yē bē so̧ leef
Tō fȳnde de̦e̦th, turne up this crōked wey,
For in that gro̧ve Ī lafte hym, bȳ mȳ fey,
Under a tree and the̦re hē wole abȳde;

Noght for yōure bǫǫst hē wole him nǭthyng hȳde.
Sē yē that ǫǫk? Right thēre yē shal hym fȳnde;
God sāve yōw̄, þat boghte agayn mankȳnde,
And yōw̄ amende.' Thus seyde this ǭlde man;
And everīch of thise rīotōures[1] ran
Til hē cam tō that tree, and thēr they fōunde
Of flǭryns fyne of gōld, ycoyned rōunde,
Wēl nȳ an eighte[2] busshels, as hem thoughte.
Nǭ lenger thanne after dǫǫth they soughte,
But ēch of hem sǭ glad was of that sighte,
For þat thē flǭryns been sǭ faire and brighte,
That dōun they sette hem bȳ this preciōus hoord.
Thē worste of hem hē spak thē firste wōrd.
'Bretheren,' quod hē, 'taak kēpe what Ī seye,
My wit is grǫǫt though þat Ī bōurde and pleye.
This trēsōr hath fortune untō us yeven

And lightlȳ as it comth sǭ wol wē spēnde.
Ey, Goddes preciōus dignitee, whǭ wēnde
Tōday that wē sholde hān sǭ fair a grāce?
But myghte this gōld bē carīed frǭ this plāce
Hǫǫm tō mȳn hōus, or elles untō yōures,—
For wēl yē wǫǫt þat al this gōld is ōures,— Thanne wēre wē in heigh felicitee.
But trewelȳ bȳ daye it may nat bee;

Whēr fǭre Ī rēde þat cut among us alle

And brynge us brę̄d and wȳn ful privelȳ.
And twǭ of us shul kēpen subtillȳ

Bȳ ǫǫn assent, whę̄reas us thynketh best.'
That ǫǫn of hem thē cut broghte in his fest,
And bad hem drawe and looke whę̄re it wol falle;
And it fil on thē yongeste of hem alle,
And forth tōward thē tōūn hē wente anǭn.
And al sǭ soone as that hē was gǭn,
That ǫǫn of hem[1] spak thus untō that oother:
'Thōw̄ knowest wēl thōū art mȳ sworne[2] brōther;
Thȳ profit wol Ī telle thee anǭn.
Thōū wǫǫst wēl that ōūre felawe is agǭn,
And heere is gōld and that ful grę̄t plentee,
That shal departed been amǭng us thrē;
But natheleę̄s, if Ī kan shāpe it sǭ
That it departed wę̄re amǭng us twǭ,
Hadde Ī nat doon a freendes torn tō thee?'
That oother answerde, 'Ī nǫǫt hōū that may bē;
Hē wǫǫt hōw̄ that thē gōld is with us tweye;
What shal[3] wē doon, what shal wē tō hym seye?'
'Shal it bē cōnseil?' seyde thē firste shrewe,
'And Ī shal tellen in a wōrdes fewe
What wē shal doon and bryngen it wēl abōūte.'
'Ī graunte,' quod that oother, 'ōūte of dōūte,
That bȳ mȳ trouthe Ī shal thee nat biwreye.'
'Nōw̄,' quod thē firste, 'thōū wǫǫst wēl wē bē tweye,
And twǭ of us shul strenger bē than ǫǫn.
Looke, whan þat hē is set, thōū[4] right anǫǫn

And with thȳ daggere looke thōū dō thē sāme;
And thanne shal al this gōld departed bē,
Mȳ deere freend, bitwixen mē and thee.
Thanne may wē bǭthe ōūre lustes all fulfille,
And pleye at dees right at ōūre owene wille.'
And thus acorded been thise shrewes tweye
Tō slęęn thē thridde, as yē hān herd mē seye.
This yongeste, which þat wente untō thē tōūn,
Ful ofte in herte hē rolleth up and dōūn
Thē beautee of thise flǭryns newe and brighte.
'Ǭ Lǭrd,' quod hē, 'if sǭ węre þat Ī myghte
Hāve al this trę̄sōr tō myself allǭne,

And atte laste thē feend, ōūre enemȳ,
Putte in his thought þat hē sholde poysōn beye,
With which hē myghte slęęn hise felawes tweye;
Forwhȳ thē feend fǫǫnd hym in swich lyvynge,
That hē hadde lę̄ve hym[1] tō sorwe brynge,
For this was ōūtrelȳ his fulle entente
Tō slęęn hem bǭthe and nevere tǭ repente.
And forth hē gǫǫth, nǭ lenger wolde hē tarīe,
Intō thē tōūn untō a pothecarīe,
And preyde hym þat hē hym wolde selle
Som poysōn þat hē myghte hise rattes quelle;
And ęęk thęr was a polcat in his hawe
That, as hē seyde, hise cāpōns hadde yslawe;
And fayn hē wolde wrę̄ke hym, if hē myghte,
On vermyn þat destroyed hym bȳ nyghte.
Thē pothecarīe answerde, 'And thōū shalt hāve
A thyng that, al sǭ God mȳ soule sāve,
In al this world thęr is nǭ crę̄ature,

That ȩten or dronken hath of this confiture
Noght but thē mōntance of a cōrn of whȩte,
That hē ne shal his līf anǭn forlȩte;
Yȩ, sterve hē shal, and that in lasse whīle
Than thōū wolt gǫǫn apaas nat but a mīle,
This poysōn is sǭ strǭng and vīolent.'
This cursed man hath in his hōnd yhent
This poysōn in a box, and sith hē ran
Intō the nexte strēte untō a man,
And borwed of[1] hym large botels thrē,
And in thē twǭ his poysōn pōūred hē;
The thridde hē kepte clȩne for his drynke[2],
For al thē nyght hē shoope hym for tō swynke,
In cariynge of thē gōld ōūt of that plāce.
And whan this rīotōūr with sǭrȳ grāce
Hadde filled with wȳn hise grȩte botels thrē,
Tō hise felawes agayn repaireth hē.
What nēdeth it tō sermōne of it mǫǫre?
For right as[3] they hadde cast his dȩȩth bifǫǫre,
Right sǭ they hān hym slayn, and that anǭn.
And whan þat this was doon, thus spak that ǫǫn:
'Nōw lat us sitte and drynke and māke us merīe,
And afterward wē wol his bodȳ berīe.'
And with that wōrd it happed hym, par cas,
Tō tāke thē botel thȩr thē poysōn was,
And drank and yaf his felawe drynke alsǭ;
For which anǭn they storven bǭthe twǭ.
But certes Ī suppǭse that Avycen
Wrǫǫt nevere in nǭ canōn, ne in nǭ fen,
Mǭ wonder signes of empoisōnyng
Than hadde thise wrecches twǭ ȩr hir ēndyng.
Thus ended been thise homycīdes twǭ.

NOTES[1]

PART I

THE MIDLAND DIALECT

This part contains specimens of the several varieties of this dialectal division, but especially of East Midland, as that upon which later English is especially based. Only two selections represent West Midland, the 'Prose Psalter' (p. 100) and the 'Instructions to Parish Priests' (p. 119), as that dialect in its purity does not materially differ from East Midland. More important is the distinction of Early East Midland from that of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, which may be regarded as normal Middle English in this dialect. Early East Midland, represented by the first two selections, shows the language in a transition state. For example, OE. ā still remains ā, the characteristic lengthening of OE. e, a, o in open syllables had not taken place, and other less significant changes already mentioned in the Grammatical Introduction.

A. EARLY EAST MIDLAND

I. THE PETERBOROUGH CHRONICLE

The last part of the 'Chronicle,' from 1080 to its close, occurs only in Laud MS. 636 of the Bodleian Library, Oxford. The whole has been frequently edited, as by Thorpe and Earle, before the latter's edition was re-edited by Plummer, 'Two of the Saxon Chronicles Parallel' (1892–9). Selections are found in Morris ('Specimens,' I, 9) and Zupitza ('Übungsbuch,' p. 57, Schipper 75).

[1] These Notes are intended to give, in methodical manner, some account of MSS. and editions; time and place of composition, as well as author if known; character of the work, relation of the extract to the whole, and metrical relations, if poetry; source of derived material, when known; bibliography of more important monographs; explanations of words, phrases, allusions, and other difficulties. General works of reference are not mentioned in connexion with each selection, for teachers will naturally refer to Ten Brink's 'History of English Literature,' Morley's 'English Writers,' Brandl's 'Mittelenglische Litteratur' in Paul's 'Grundriss der Germanischen Philologie,' and Körting's 'Grundriss der Geschichte der Englischen Litteratur.' Cross-references to the texts are by page and line, the Notes to each page of text being arranged in a single paragraph.

Written at Peterborough, Northampton, the part chosen includes all that is written in the hand of the last continuator, who gives a summary of Stephen's reign immediately after his death in 1154. The selection therefore represents Northeast Midland (NEMl.) of the middle of the twelfth century. See Behm, 'The Language of the Latter Part of the Peterborough Chronicle' (1884); H. Meyer, 'Zur Sprache der jüngeren Teile der Chronik von Peterborough' (1889).

The 'Chronicle,' as the most important source for the history of the period, cannot be too highly regarded. Especially valuable is this contemporaneous account of Stephen's reign, since it is more detailed than most of the other entries and more vividly narrated. On the other hand the order of events is not chronological, as shown by Plummer (as above), II, 307.

As to language, the orthography of this selection is less regular than most others of the book. It shows the unstable condition of the written form when English was less commonly used in literature, as well as some orthographic influences of older works. Special peculiarities of orthography are ē̆ for OM. ē̆, ēa, rarely ēo; e for OM. e (æ), especially in unstressed syllables; ēa for OM. ē, as in gēar; ēo for OM. ē, ēo, rarely ēu; ēo (ēō) for OM. ēo, rarely ēa. Among consonants the most important peculiarities are ch for the OE. medial spirant g in a few words; g(i) for the OE. initial palatal spirant g; t initially for OE. þ (ð) in pronominal words when immediately following a final d or t; w for OE. hw, as in warsæ. The vocabulary shows a larger French element than the selections immediately following, partly owing to the number of terms connected with government and the church. The inflexions, which have been thought quite irregular, will fall into fairly definite schemes. Noun plurals in es(s) prevail, though a few OE. neuters with long stems still remain without ending. Adjectives have almost wholly lost oblique case forms. Verbs show somewhat more irregularities, but are fast tending to the simplicity of normal Middle English. The syntax of the period is also comparatively simple. On the other hand, the inverted order of subject and predicate is common, and the construction according to sense with collective nouns occasional. The title king (l. 1) is still an appositive and follows the personal name, or the personal name is in apposition with king (l. 13). The most striking single construction, from the standpoint of Modern English, is the double genitive, as Stēphnes Kinges (4, 28), þē kinges sune Henries (5, 12); yet these are quite in accord with OE. usage and the appositive noted above. Subjunctive forms of the verb are naturally much more frequent than in English of to-day.

Page 1, l. 1. Henrī King. Henry I, who had come to the throne in 1100. Henrī abbot. Henry of Poitou, abbot of St. Jean d'Angely, from which he was expelled in 1131, to the great rejoicing of the monks who had been under him. He was related to Henry I and the Count of Poitiers, and had been a monk at Cluny or Clugni (1, 3) in Burgundy. This monastery was at the height of its prosperity in the twelfth century, some 2,000 religious houses throughout Europe acknowledging allegiance to it. 2. Burch. That is Borough of St. Peter, Peterborough, a name which supplanted the earlier Medeshamstede. A Benedictine abbey of St. Peter had been founded in 655 by Oswy, King of Northumbria, and Peada, the first Christian King of Mercia. Plundered by the Danes in 870, it was re-established in 966 by Athelwold, Bishop of Winchester, who also changed its name. 3. tē. For þē, after a word ending in t or d. 5. Biscop of Seresberī. Roger of Salisbury and Alexander of Lincoln, his nephew. 6. þe. Note the retention of the OE. relative particle in early Middle English, though soon to be replaced by þat. hē. The abbot Henry. As in Old English, pronouns are often lacking in explicit reference. So hē . . . hē . . . his of the next line refer to the same Henry. 10. iaf. This form, among others, shows how completely OE. palatal spirant g had assumed the quality of MnE. y. Cf. iāfen (2, 26), iēden (3, 28). 11. Sanct Nēod. St. Neot's in Huntingdonshire. The MS. abbreviation for St. gives us no hint as to whether the OE. noun form, sanct, or sant (cf. Orm's sannt) was actually used. It is doubtless too early for the OF. form saint with a diphthong. 12. Sanct Pētres messedai. June 29, the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul in commemoration of their martyrdom; really the date of reburial of their supposed remains in 358 A.D. 14. þā þēstrede. Henry I left England, never to return, on Aug. 1 (Lammas), 1133. The eclipse occurred on the next day, but Henry did not die until Dec. 1, 1135 (1, 18). Perhaps the traditional bringing together of these two dates accounts for the wrong dating of Henry's departure from England. 15. wāre. 'Might be'; subjunctive preterit singular. For other forms with ā in pret. pl. cf. nāmen (2, 1), drāpen (3, 18), wāren (3, 29), forbāren (3, 31), stālī (6, 8). 16. sterres abūten. The copulative verb omitted as often. 18. ðat ōþer dæi. 'The second, or next day,' ōþer being used with ordinal force as in Old English. St. Andrew's day is Nov. 30, and Henry died on Dec. 1. Andreas, a borrowed word ending in s, takes no ending in the genitive. 19. þā wes trȩsōn. The MS. reading was long a puzzle, and various emendations were suggested before the present editor pointed out the true reading in 'Mod. Lang. Notes,' VII, 254. This was adopted by Plummer in a note to this passage (II, 307). Incidentally this is the first example so far discovered of the French word treason in English.

Page 2, l. 2. Rȩdinge. Henry I had founded an abbey at this place, no doubt the reason for his burial there. 10. midewintre dæi. That is Christmas day, but authorities give the date variously, as Dec. 22, 24, 25, 26, the latter being St. Stephen's day. The name midwinter day is Teutonic, and antedates the Christianization of Britain. With the Conquest, Christmas (Crīstes mæsse) came to be used. 12. Baldwin de Redvērs. The rebellion really belongs to the year 1136, as also the compact with David, King of Scotland. This Baldwin, first Earl Redvers (Rivers), died in 1155. 18. fōr . . . tō Normandī. The journey was in March, the return (1, 23) in December. 20. gēt. Plummer says past participle of a weak verb geten 'get,' but this is not likely on several accounts. The word is the adverb gīt (OM. gēt, WS. gīet) 'yet,' as given in the glossary to Morris's 'Specimens,' I; cf. for the same word 16, 3; 29, 5. The treasure which Stephen yet had, and for which they received him so gladly, was about £100,000. 23. gadering æt Oxenefōrd. This was in June, 1139. Bishop Roger was justiciar, or chief justice, and regent in the king's absence. Roger, the chancellor, was nephew only by courtesy. 25. hise neves. The plural form of the pronoun shows that the OE. genitive his, from hē, had developed a possessive pronoun, with inflexion, as mīn and þīn had done in the older period.

Page 3, l. 3. be nihtes . . . be dæies. The force of the OE. adverbial genitive is apparently not felt, and the adverbial relation is more clearly indicated by a prepositional phrase. carlmen and wimmen. 'Men and women.' The word man was general in its meaning, and probably on this account the more distinctive carlmen was employed. 6. me henged. 'They hanged (them) up by the feet,' &c. The indefinite me, an old singular, implies a plural, as indicated by the verbs hēngen (l. 7) and wrythen (l. 8). 11. crūcethūs. The context sufficiently explains the meaning of this term. The first part is apparently Lat. cruciatus; for the quantity of ū cf. crūc in Pogatscher, 'Die griechischen, lateinischen und romanischen Lehnworte im Altenglischen.' 14. lof and grin. This must be regarded as still a crux. The MS. reads lof ⁊ grī, which suggested to Thorpe lǭþ and grim, 'loathsome and grim,' as the names of the instruments, lǭþ being for OE. lāð. The use of the two names then accounted for the plural verb. On the other hand, the use of two adjectives in this way for an instrument would presuppose a singular verb, besides being unsatisfactory in other ways. rachentēges. Really a compound of OE. racente 'chain' and OM. tēh(g), WS. tēah(g) 'fetter,' but the relation of the parts of the compound had probably been lost. ōþer. To be carefully distinguished from ōþer, OE. ōþer. Ǭþer, OE. āghwæðer, soon became ME. ǭr, or, and MnE. or. 15. bæron. This form for the infinitive beren is paralleled by æten = eten (5, 14), begæten = begeten (7, 2). While not marked long here they probably represent sporadic cases of lengthening of e in an open syllable, a change which was not regularly carried out until the thirteenth century. 21. ðat lastede. This proves conclusively that the account was not written until the close of Stephen's reign. Cf. also the reference to Martin's abbacy (4, 10 f.) lasting to Jan., 1155. 23. ǣvre um wīle. 'Ever from time to time,' OE. āfre ymbe hwīle. The form um is Old Norse, cognate with OE. ymbe; cf. umstund in 'Cursor Mundi.' 24. tenserie. First explained by Mr. Round and Mr. Toynbee in the 'Academy,' July 11, 1892. It is a NF. form based on LL. tensarium, 'a generic term for certain irregular taxations'; the latter is from tensare, 'to protect, exact tribute for protection.' 31. ōwer sithon. 'Everywhere thereafter, or afterwards.' The first word is OM. āhwēr, WS. āhwār.

Page 4, l. 3. tūnscipe flugen. Notice the construction according to sense; tūnscipe is a grammatical singular, a logical plural, and the verb agrees with the latter, as often. 6. warsæ, perhaps -sǣ. OM. hwēr (hwar?), WS. hwǣr, and sǣ from older swǣ. 8. Crīst slēp. In interpreting Christ's sleeping in the ship during the storm (Matt. viii. 24), the ME. 'Metrical Homilies' (ed. by Small, p. 135) explain that the ship is the church:

> 'And Crist þarin gasteli slepes,
> Quen he þoles god men and lele
> Wit wic(ce) men and fals(e) dele,
> Þat betes þaim wit dede and word
> Als se bare betes on schipbord.'

11. fānd. 'Provided for.' Still used in dialectal English in which a country labourer is engaged for 'so much and found,' that is, so much pay in addition to board and lodging. 14. lǣt it rēfen. 'Let roof it, caused it to be roofed.' 17. fōr tō Rōme. This event, though placed under the year 1137, could not have taken place until 1145, since Eugenius did not become pope until that year. Cf. note to 3, 21. 18. privilegies. The OF. form is privilege, so that ie is here not long, unless it shows influence of OF. words in ie. 20–21. circewīcan . . . hōrderwȳcan. That OE. wīce had acquired final n in the nominative is clear from Orm's use, so that these examples can hardly be assumed to be weak datives. 22. Rogingham þē castel. 'The castle of Rockingham.' 24. solidi. The MS. abbreviation is expanded as a Lat. plural, since the word was hardly English. The words ælc gær, inserted above the line by the writer of the MS., were bracketed by Morris as if not in the MS. ('Specimens,' I), and this led to the proposal of solidatas, 'a measure of land,' as the true reading ('Mod. Lang. Notes,' VII, 134). The correct reading of the MS. shows that a sum of money is intended. 25. wīniærd. Plummer notes, on Bede ('Hist. Eccles.,' Bk. I, ch. i), that vine-growing was formerly common in England, especially in some of the monasteries. 28. Stēphnes Kinges. Each word is made genitive in form as in Old English. The MnE. group genitive has not yet developed; cf. þē kinges sune Henries (5, 12), þē kinges dohter Henries (5, 30). 29. On his time. The death of William of Norwich, afterwards St. William, is placed in 1144 and 1146 by different chroniclers. Plummer says, 'The charge against the Jews of using the blood of murdered gentiles, especially Christian children, for ritual purposes is as old as the time of Josephus'; see his 'Contra Apionem,' II, 8. Cf. the similar story in Chaucer's 'Prioress's Tale.' 31. lāng Frīdæi. The term occurs occasionally in OE. langa Frigadæg (Frigedæg), and is common in Old Norse as langifrjādagr.

Page 5, l. 2. and tō munekes. 'And those monks.' Editors have seemed to think to an unusual form, but it is a natural development of OE. þā after a final d; cf. 5, 8. 8. ǣvest, MS. ǣvez. The MS. z is an OF. spelling, usually of ts, but here of st. 9. æt tē Standard. The battle was fought at Northallerton, Yorkshire. Its name comes from the fact that banners of St. Cuthbert of Durham, St. Peter of York, St. John of Beverley, and St. Wilfred of Ripon were fixed upon a pole in a four-wheeled cart and placed in the centre of the English army. 12. wart it war. 'Became aware of it.' 13. þēstrede þē sunne. This date of March 20, 1140 (l. 15), is shown to be correct by the table of eclipses. 16. Willelm, Ærcebiscop. The Willelm Curbuil mentioned at 2, 9. 24. Rodbert Ēorl of Gloucestre. Robert was a natural son of Henry I and hence half-brother of Matilda, whose claims to the throne he vigorously espoused. 26. heore lāverd. That is, King Stephen; so him of l. 27. Stephen was taken prisoner Feb. 2, 1141. 30. kinges dohter Henries. This was Æthelīc (Adelaide) of earlier references, the daughter of Henry I, who was given in marriage to Henry V of Germany. On her coronation, July 25, 1110, her name was changed to Matilda. At her husband's death, 1126, she returned to England, and her father caused homage to be done to her as his successor. This was reason enough for her enmity toward Stephen. Soon after she was given in marriage to Geoffrey of Anjou. She reached England in 1139 and was chosen Lady (the name Queen was not used for her) in 1141. In June of the same year she fled from London. 32. scǣ. This is especially noteworthy as the earliest use of the form which became MnE. she.

Page 6, l. 1. biscop of Wincestre. Henry of Blois, formerly abbot of Glastonbury. 8. stāli hī. Preterit plural with loss of final n when immediately followed by a subject pronoun. In Old English this occurred only in the case of the first and second persons, but it seems to have been extended to the third person in ME. times. Cf. 25, 11, 14. 14. swā diden. The exchange was made in 1141. The next year came the reconciliation with Randolph, earl of Chester. 26. brohten hire intō Oxenfōrd. This was in March or May, 1141, the chronicler doubling back in his narrative to tell of the divided state of England. Matilda was besieged in Oxford during October or November, 1142, and she escaped to Wallingford in December. She did not go over sea (l. 30) until the early part of 1147. 27. þā hērde ðat sægen. 'Then heard he that saying'; sægen is OE. segen (sægen), 'saying, assertion,' and not an infinitive (OE. secgan) as usually interpreted. Confusion has resulted from the form of the infinitive in 4, 28. 30. hī of Normandī. This happened between 1141 and 1144.

Page 7, l. 1. fērde Eustace. Stephen's son Eustace married Constance, sister of the French king, in February, 1140. He died (l. 8) in August, 1153, his mother May 3, 1152. 2. tō wīfe. The OE. dative remains longest in such expressions as this, though finally displaced by the invariable nom. dat. acc. form; cf. tō wīve (24, 19), tō wīf (40, 13). 9. his sune Henrī. Henry succeeded to the dukedom of Anjou on the death of his father, Sept. 7, 1151. In March, 1152, Eleanor was divorced from Louis VII, and she married Henry (l. 11) in May of the same year. tōc tō þē rīce. 'Succeeded to the kingdom.' The OE. idiom was fōn tō, and fōn had now been displaced by taken, from ON. taka. 12. þā fērde hē. This was in January, 1153, and in November peace was made (l. 15). 16. wāre. Pret. subj., 'should be.' Cf. l. 15. 27. þæt minster. Stephen and his queen had founded the religious house at Feversham, Kent, and the minster had been completed in 1148.

Page 8, l. 1. innen dæis. Some number is perhaps omitted before dæis. cusen. The OE. curon had already given way to a form with s, by analogy of the present and preterit singular. So with the past participle cosan = cosen in l. 4. 9. Ramesæie . . . Torneie . . . Spallding. These are Ramsey (Huntingdonshire), Thorney (Cambridgeshire), and Spalding (Lincolnshire), all in the neighbourhood of Peterborough. The other places named cannot be made out with certainty.

II. THE DEDICATION TO THE 'ORMULUM'

The 'Ormulum' is preserved in Junius MS. 1 of the Bodleian Library, not improbably the MS. of Orm himself. It has been edited by White (1852), and this revised by Holt (1878), though a more scholarly edition is still much needed. Selections occur in Morris ('Specimens,' I, 39), Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 3), Sweet ('First Middle English Primer,' 43), Zupitza ('Übungsbuch,' 7, Schipper, 99). An indispensable collation of the MS. was printed by Kölbing in 'Englische Studien,' I, 1. Of the author nothing is known beyond what is given in this Introduction (see various notes). The 'Ormulum' was composed in the neighbourhood of Lincoln about 1200, and the language therefore represents the Northeast Midland of that period. Orm's language, in relation to orthography and vowel quantity, is discussed in the Grammatical Introduction (§ 71, note). Besides may be noted Callenberg, 'Layamon u. Orm nach ihren Lautverhältnissen verglichen' (1876); Sachse, 'Das unorganische e im Ormulum' (1881); Brate, 'Nordische Lehnwörter im Ormulum' in Paul u. Braune's 'Beiträge,' X, 1; Kluge, 'Englische Studien,' XXII, 179.

The name of the work is given by the author (Preface, l. 1): þiss boc is nemmnedd Orrmulum, forrþi þatt Orrm itt wrohhte. Ormulum is clearly a diminutive, after the Latin, of the author's name. The book consists of an introduction, called dedication and preface, paraphrases intended to cover the gospels read in the church during the year, and homilies upon them. Of these paraphrases and homilies only about one-eighth were completed, or at least remain in MS., but these extend to nearly ten thousand long lines. The work has little literary value, as it is prosaic in the extreme, but is especially valuable for the light which it throws on the language of the time. The metrical form is that of the long line of fifteen syllables with cæsura after the eighth, but without rime or regular alliteration. The metrical flow is iambic, and the metre is clearly based on the Latin septenarius. With the addition of rime this metre became the MnE. quatrain of alternate eight and seven syllables, the long line being broken at the cæsural pause. On the other hand, Menthel, following Trautmann, tries to connect Orm's verse with that of Otfried, 'Zur Geschichte des Otfriedischen Verses in England' (Anglia, VIII, Anzeiger, 49). The sources of the 'Ormulum' have been shown to be principally Bede and Gregory the Great; cf. Sarrazin, 'Über die Quellen des Ormulum' ('Englische Studien,' VI, 1).

As to language, the peculiarities of Orm's orthography have been discussed in the Grammatical Introduction. Here may be added Orm's ē for OE. ē, sometimes OM. ē, the exact limits of the use not having been accurately made out; the use of ȝ or w for the second element of a true diphthong (cf. þeȝȝ 'they,' Awwstīn for OF. Austin), as well as for OE. ȝ or w; f for OE. medial f = v; g in gōd 'good' distinguished from g in strānge, though no example occurs in our selection; sh (ssh) for OE. sc, beside sk for ON., OF. sk (sc = sk). The poetical form naturally gives special assistance in regard to language, as in accent of words, and elision of final e (occasionally other vowels) before a vowel or weak h. Orm's vocabulary is characterized by a large Norse element and a smaller OF. element than in the 'Chronicle.' His inflexions are exceedingly simple, and the syntax, at least of this selection, requires no special explanation other than an occasional note.

Page 8, l. 13. brōþerr mīn. Probably not blood-relationship in the restricted sense, but rather that in which Philemon is desired to receive Onesimus as 'a brother in the flesh,' Philem. 16. Cf. Henrici, 'Otfrid's Mutter und Orm's Bruder' ('Zeitschrift f. Deutsches Alterthum,' XXII, 231). 14. Annd. The MS. sign (ꝛ) is thus expanded in accordance with occasional forms of the word in the 'Ormulum.' Of course there can be no question of the shortness of the vowel in this unstressed word. 15. ī Godess hūs. In the religious house of which they were both canons, it would seem from l. 17. 16. witt. The dual forms of the pronouns are rare except in the earliest period. 17. Unnderr. While the rhythm of Orm's lines is prevailingly iambic, a trochee instead of an iamb often occurs at the beginning of the line, or immediately after the cæsura; cf. Affterr (l. 20), eȝȝwhār (9, 13), and following the cæsura affterr (l. 13), goddspelless (l. 19). Those who suppose that these words are given iambic stress assume that Orm did violence to the natural accent of words, instead of following a frequent custom in all English iambic rhythm. swā summ Sannt Awwstīn sette. That is, St. Augustine, the great patron of the monastic life. The more explicit rule actually followed by Augustine monks was that of St. Benedict

(Benet), based on the brief directions in the writings of St. Augustine. 19. Enngliss̄h. The substantive English seems already to have become established, since it never occurs with final e in Orm, while the adjective appears with or without e, as in l. 22, where Enngliss̄h ffolc is practically a compound, and at 10, 20. hallȝhe lāre. The adjective is in the weak form after a genitive, as shown by Sachse (mentioned above). 20. Drihhtīn. According to Orm's manner of indicating vowel quantity the i of the last syllable is long, though the word represents OE. drihten; cf. Morsbach, § 67, Anm. 4. 21. þohhtesst tatt. The rule that initial þ of pronominal words becomes t after t or d is followed absolutely in Orm, as shown by Blackburn ('Amer. Journal of Philology,' III, 46). See also note on 9, 11. 22. lufe off. Elision of weak e occurs regularly before a vowel or weak h; see Gram. Introd. 26. unnc birrþ. 'It becomes (behooves) us both.'

Page 9, l. 1. þā goddspelless nēh alle. The Latin texts given by Orm after the 'Dedication' show that he followed, in general, some gospel harmony of his time. 2. sinndenn. This form is less common in Midland, except in the early period. It is displaced by are(n), found in the Anglian district in OE. times; cf. 'Vespasian Psalter' earon, Nth. eron (un), and Sievers, 'Angelsächsische Grammatik,' § 427. 4. sāwle nēde. This might almost be written as a compound. Such examples scarcely prove retention of the OE. feminine genitive, with gender signification, at least for Midland and Northern. 7. amāng. Orm's orthography gives no clue to the length of the first a, but the constant appearance of a instead of o (= ǭ) in later texts seems conclusive proof of shortness; cf. amǭng, 18, 10. 10. t'unnderrstanndenn. Occasional elision of other vowels than weak e occurs in the 'Ormulum'; cf. he't, 10, 4. 11. þess tē bettre. The change of initial þ to t in pronominal words occurs after s in only a few such expressions as the above. þeȝȝm. This form, with the nominative þeȝȝ (l. 26) and genitive þeȝȝre (l. 4), shows that Orm's dialect had already begun to use the ON. forms of the pronoun, a change which had not been fully accomplished in Southeast Midland in Chaucer's time. 16. ferrs. OE. fers, from Lat. versus, soon to give way to OF. vers. 17. wēl . . . well. Both forms occur in Orm. Holthausen has shown ('Anglia Beiblatt,' XIII, 16) that wēl is the prevailing form in both stressed and unstressed positions, and is used in independent positions, while well is employed when modifying an adjective or adverb. There are some exceptions even to this rule. annd all forrþī. 'And therefore (all forrþī) I was compelled, full often of necessity, to put (dōn) my word among the words of the gospel, to fill my verse.' Nēde is an adverb, and sholldc has the old sense of 'was obliged, had to.' 19. wīkenn. This OE. n-stem has acquired final n in the nominative singular, contrary to the usual rule. Cf. the compounds circewīkan, hōrderwīfcan (4, 21–22). 26. lēȝtenn. 'Think, judge,' less common meanings of OM. lētan, WS. lǣtan, but common in Old Norse.

Page 10, l. 6. fele wōrdess. Note the early use of fele (OE. sb. feola) as an adjective, and cf. German viel. 24. att Godd. 'From God'; cf. 'at the hands of,' a relic of this use in modern English. 30. ȝiff þeȝȝ all forrwerrþenn itt. The same thought is to be found in Ælfric's 'Homilies,' II, 528: Gif we for synfullum mannum gebiddaþ, and hi ðære ðingunge unwurðe synd, ne beo we swaðeah bedælede edleanes þæs godan willan, ðeah þe we ðam forscyldegodan geðingian ne magon. 'If we pray for sinful men and they are unworthy of the intercession, yet we shall not be deprived of the reward of good intention, though we may not be able to mediate for the guilty.'

Page 11, l. 7. all mannkinne nēde. Mannkinne is an OE. genitive plural, which has not yet taken the invariable plural ending es, perhaps because it was felt to be part of a compound. The form mannkinness is also found in such expressions. 21. flumm Jorrdān. Owing to the regular appearance of the two words in this order Kluge assumes that both are of OF. origin. While I have followed Kluge here, the whole subject of Scripture proper names in English needs fuller investigation. In Middle English the lack of certainty with regard to Latin or French origin of such names particularly affects names beginning with MnE. J, since they are written with I or J indiscriminately. 26. dǣþþ. The doubling of þ would indicate shortness of the vowel, but the latter is marked long in accordance with the more common writing dæþ; cf. l. 8. wiþþūtenn wrihhte. 'Without merit or desert,' so 'undeservedly.'

Page 12, l. 6. wiss tō fulle sōþ. 'Certainly, in full truth.' Wiss is OE. gewiss, strengthened by tō fulle sōþ. 18. seffnde. The OE. seofeðe has already been displaced by the analogical form on the basis of the cardinal, as in MnE. seventh. 25. þatt hē sahh. Cf. Rev. v. 1 f. 32. nāness kiness shaffte. Note the genitive inflexion of both adjective and noun. The uninflected adjective is more common, but the inflected form remains in certain expressions.

Page 13, l. 4. all all swā se. The doubling of all for emphasis is not uncommon in Orm. 26. Orrmīn. Mätzner regarded the name as formed on the Latin model, but Zupitza ('Guy of Warwick,' note to l. 9529, EETS., Extra Series, 25–26) makes it a diminutive of Orm on the French model; cf. Awwstin, 8, 17. Orm's name is believed to be from ON. ormr, cognate with OE. wyrm 'worm, serpent.' 30. allre ǣresst. The MS. gives clear evidence, as in some other cases, of elision.

B. MIDLAND OF THE THIRTEENTH AND FOURTEENTH CENTURIES

I. THE 'BESTIARY'

The 'Bestiary,' from which these selections are taken, is found in Arundel MS. 292 of the British Museum. It has been edited by Wright ('Altdeutsche Blätter,' II), by Wright and Halliwell ('Reliquiae Antiquae,' I, 208), by Morris ('An Old English Miscellany,' EETS. 49, 1), by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 55), and a selection by Morris ('Specimens,' I, 133). The language of the 'Bestiary' is that of the Southeast Midland (SEMI.) during the first half of the thirteenth century.

The poem consists of more or less fanciful descriptions of thirteen animals, with allegorical interpretations of their supposed characteristics. The first twelve sections are based on the Latin 'Physiologus' of Theobaldus, an Italian monk of the eleventh century, the thirteenth upon Alexander Neckam's 'De Naturis Rerum.' The 'Physiologus' of Theobaldus is printed by Morris as an appendix to 'An Old English Miscellany.' Fragments of an older 'Physiologus' occur in Old English poetry. The metrical forms of the 'Bestiary' are various. The first and third selections are in long unrimed lines with some attempt at alliteration. The second, with exception of the first line, breaks up into rimed couplets of four (occasionally three) stresses. The 'Signification' of the Eagle, however, shows long rimed lines with the first half-lines frequently riming together also. If the latter feature were perfectly carried out we should have a four-line stanza riming abab. The metre of the fourth is similar to the first part of the second, but all show many irregularities in detail. These metrical forms are especially interesting in relation not only to the alliterative line of Old English, but also to the rimed couplet of four stresses which was soon to be so common in England.

As to language, all Old English diphthongs have become simple vowels, and the new diphthongs are appearing; OE. æ is no longer used; the change of OE. ā to ǭ, and the lengthening of vowels in open syllables, have taken place; in other words typical East Midland is before us. Special peculiarities in orthography are OF. c = s initially; g for g in gōd, 'good,' and for ȝ in ligt, 'light,' or ȝ = y in gē, 'ye'; s (ss) = sh; ð always for OE. ð or þ.

Page 14, l. 1. lēūn stant. Both lēūn and līūn occur in Middle English as in Old French, the latter finally prevailing. Contractions like stant = standeþ are more common in SEMl. than in NEMl., and still more common in Southern. hille. No doubt dative of hil (l. 14), though possibly from the OE. hylle f., beside hyll m. and. 'If'; it translates Lat. si of Theobaldus, introducing the subjunctive hēre. The Latin also shows that the first half-line is a separate sentence, not immediately connected with the next as usually punctuated. 4. fētsteppes. Note that the plural in MnE. compounds of mutation nouns, except man, loses all trace of mutation. 5. dūn. The addition of this word, though not corresponding exactly to anything in the Latin, seems justified by the context and especially by l. 18. It was first added by Morris. 6. hĕ. Refers to 'hunter,' implied in hunten (l. 1). 9. līð. With this contracted form compare līeð in l. 12. 16. Hū. Both hū and wū are found in the selections, and represent OE. hū and hwū respectively, the latter commonly becoming wū in Sth. English. For convenience they have been regularized throughout the selection on the basis of the first form, the more common Midland variety. 17. divel. This form shows conclusively that shortening of OE. dēofol had taken place, since only dĕvel could have become divel. The latter is still common in dialectal English. 18. dennede him. 'Made a resting-place for himself.' The Latin is:

'Viscera Marie tibi, Christe, fuisse cubile,' and OE. denn is glossed 'cubile.' 19. defte. 'Mild, gentle, meek.' OE. gedæft, whence MnE. daft by a change of meaning similar to that of 'simple,' 'innocent.' MnE. deft, from the same root if not the same word, has acquired the sense 'skilful' through 'easy,' a natural development from 'mild.' 20. tō manne frāme. 'To the profit of men.' Manne is a relic of the OE. gen. pl. manna. Such a genitive plural is preserved only in certain expressions, and probably the folk-mind regarded combinations like manne frame as essentially compounds.

Page 15, l. 3. dēde = dēþe, with d from voiced þ. Ded for death still exists in English dialects. Cf. 122, 6 for the word in rime. 5. hīrde. The strict Ml. form is hērde, MnE. (shep)herd. Hirde doubtless comes from WS. hīerde; cf. sīlden = shīlden (l. 6) for Ml. shēlden, MnE. shield. 15–16. dimme . . . him. The rimes of the 'Bestiary' are sufficiently irregular so that the extra syllable of the first line does not seem remarkable. As dimme is pl. we assume the word was disyllabic, though compare 20, 26. 21. skīes sexe and sevene. Referring to the traditional view of the heavens, based on the Ptolemaic system. 25. Đē sunne swīðeð. The Lat. reads Tunc sibi sol ambas accendit fervidus alas.

Page 16, l. 2. Ne wēre. 'If his beak were not'; wēre pt. subj. 15 kirke. A distinctly Nth. or NEMl. form, perhaps used for rime. 16. Ōr. Distinguish from or, 'or'; this is ON. ār cognate with OE. ēr, 'ere.' 21. tō Gode ward. This is a not uncommon order of words in OE., though tōweard (tōward) also occurs. Cf. tō ðē water ward (17, 9). lēteð. 'Thinks'; this makes a perfect rime with bēteð and gives a good meaning. The MS. reading lēreð = lǣreð is an imperfect rime in both vowel and consonant. 22. tē sunne sikerlīke. The allegory here may be illustrated by an OE. 'Treatise on Astronomy' attributed to Ælfric ('Popular Treatises on Science,' Wright, p. 3), in which this passage occurs: 'Seo sunne getacneð urne Hælend Crist, se ðe ys rihtwisnesse sunne, swa swa se witega cwæð, Timentibus autem nomen Domini orietur sol iustitiae, et sanitas in pennis eius: —ðam mannum þe him ondrædaþ Godes naman þam arist rihtwisnysse sunne, and hælþe is on hyre fiðerum.' The sun betokens our Saviour Christ, who is the sun of righteousness, as the prophet said: 'Upon the men who fear God's name shall arise the sun of righteousness, and health is in his wings.' The prophecy is in Mal. iv. 2.

Page 17, l. 3. forbrōken. Note the MS. reading in footnote. Some emendation is clearly necessary, and I suggest that in the text as better preserving the alliteration. 7. narwe būten. The Latin original makes the passage clear:

'Querit angustum lapidis foramen;
Vix movens sese veniensque tandem
Inde pertransit spoliatque carnem
Pelle vetusta.'

Thus narwe refers to ðirl. 'He seeks a stone in which (ðat . . . on) is a hole, narrow, but he forces himself (moves through with difficulty) for,' &c. 24. lītel him is. 'Little (advantage) will be to him from his limbs'; 'he shall have little advantage,' &c. 25. higtest. Note the shorter form higtes in the next line.

Page 18, l. 5. It is tē nēd. A half-line is lost as shown by the alliteration. 6. ful of ðewes. It seems best to regard ful as imperative of OE. fullian, 'become full.' Otherwise, we must supply the imperative of the verb to be, or take ful as an adjective and omit and at beginning of the next line. The Latin gives no assistance. 31. Dat is ūre hēved gēvelīc. 'That is like our head.' The full sense is shown by the Latin, where our head refers to Christ:

'Vis novus vitam sine fine dignam,
Semper illesum caput est habendum,
Hoc caput, dico, quod habes in ipso
Principe Christo.'

hēlde wē. 'Incline we to,' 'if we incline to.' But hēlde might be a Sth. form for Ml. hȳlden, WS. healdan (hēaldan), OM. haldan (hāldan).

Page 19, l. 3. seien. Note the early development of a Midland infinitive based on the present indicative 3rd singular. Sth. seggen, OE. secgan, still remains for some time. 4. sǭge. Pret. subj. 3rd sing., early ME. sāge; cf. note on l, 15, and Siev. § 391, anm. 7. 9. it smīt. 'It thrusts out.' Smīt = smīteð. 23. sumer and winter winnen. 'Fair weather and storm strive together.' The Lat. has Si sit tempestas cum vadit, vel venit estas. 28. ðat, MS. ðar. The emendation was suggested by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 69).

Page 20, l. 10. dōð hem sinken. 'Maketh them to sink.' 13. Ðis devel. The whale was so commonly used as a figure for the devil that the English writer begins at once with 'This devil,' not following the Latin assertion of similarity: Viribus est zabulus quasi cetus corpore magnus. This was common interpretation of such Scripture passages as Ezek. xxxiii. 2; Isa. xxvii. 1; Job xli. 1. 18. wōsǭ him folegeð. Note how the indefinite wōsǭ approaches relative force by the repetition of the subject (at first the clause) in hē. The next step was to place hē before wōsǭ or whō, when wōsǭ becomes wholly relative to hē as an antecedent. 22. gast. A short secondary form of OE. gāst occasionally occurring.

II. THE STORY OF JOSEPH

The 'Genesis and Exodus,' from which this selection is taken, is found in MS. 444 of the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. It was edited by Morris in EETS. 7 (1865) and reprinted with corrections in 1874. Specimens are found in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 75), Morris ('Specimens,' I, 153), Zupitza ('Übungsbuch,' 81), Wülker ('Lesebuch,' I, 1). As in the case of the preceding selection, with which this has much in common, the language of the 'Genesis and Exodus' is of the southern portion of the East Midland, and the poem was composed in the first half of the thirteenth century. A single author, otherwise unknown, is believed to have composed the whole poem; cf. Fritzsche, 'Ist das altenglische Story of Genesis and Exodus das Werk eines Verfassers,' 'Anglia,' V, 43. Notes are to be found in 'Anglia,' VI, Anz. 1; XV, 191; XXII, 141; 'Englische Studien,' II, 120; III, 273; XVI, 429; XXII, 292; 'Archiv für neuere Sprachen,' XC, 143; 'Mod. Lang. Notes,' I, 65.

The poem consists of a paraphrase of the Scripture story, mainly based on the 'Historia Scholastica,' composed by Petrus Comestor between 1169 and 1175. As usual in such cases the treatment is free, many parts of the Bible story being omitted and many additions of mediæval legend and interpretation being added. The metre is the rimed couplet of four stresses with iambic movement, but with the syllabic irregularity so common in the period. Thus the line often ends with an unstressed syllable after the principal stress, and as often lacks an unstressed syllable at the beginning. In the latter case the first stressed syllable forms a monosyllabic foot. Alliteration of the stressed syllables is sometimes found, though without the regularity of alliterative verse. Our selection includes lines 2037–2490, covering Genesis xxxix. 19 to l. 14, though with large omissions. Another version of the story of Joseph may be read in 'Cursor Mundi' (EETS. 57, 59), beginning at l. 4037, and the part corresponding to our selection at l. 4417. The latter is much fuller and more dramatic, while also showing some interesting variations upon the story.

The language of the poem is similar to that of the 'Bestiary,' with which its orthography agrees so thoroughly that in general no further remarks are necessary. A few cases of OE. diphthongs occur, as at 22, 14–15, but similar words are so frequently written with simple vowels as to prove that the older forms did not represent true diphthongs. Otherwise the most noticeable orthographic peculiarity is qu for OE. hw, as in quīle (21, 5), perhaps through Nth. influence. The language of the poem is treated by Morris in the Preface to his edition, by Hülmer in 'Die Sprache von Genesis und Exodus' (1876), and by Fritzsche as above.

Page 21, l. 1. Putifar trewiđ. The form of Potiphar's name is that of the Latin original, as are most of the other Scripture names in Genesis. 2. Iōsēp. The form here and the rimes at 22, 21–22 and 30, 7–8 prove conclusively that the Latin, not OF. form of the word is meant. 3. sperd. Orm's sperrd (12, 26) shows the shortness of the vowel. Metrically the word is disyllabic, and might be written sperred; though compare 22, 29–30. 6. prisunēr. Note that this is not the MnE. word 'prisoner.' 13. hem drempte. Impersonal uses of the verb were still common, as in OE., though soon to disappear; see Kellner, 'Hist. Outlines of Eng. Syntax,' § 151. 15. on sēl. Lines 15–16 paraphrase Ioseph . . . ministrabat eis of the Vulgate and Petrus Comestor, but the above words were added to imply regularity of the service. 17. hē freinde. MS. hē hem freinde. The MS. reading is impossible metrically, unless hē hem are to be read as he'm. The text follows Kölbing, 'Eng. St.,' III, 305. 18. Harde drēmes. 'Unpleasant (harde) dreams have that power,' that is, to make people mourn. 27–28. hǭnd . . . wrǭng. Note the assonance instead of rime. 28. mē đugte. Morris says đugte = đogte, corrected by Egge in 'Mod. Lang. Notes,' I, 66. ME. dugte, 'seemed,' and dogte, 'thought,' later fell together under bought, MnE. thought.

Page 22, ll. 3–4. wīn . . . đerin. Many imperfect rimes in the poem show differences in vowel quantity. With rimes of long and short i cf. those at 28, 25–26; 29, 7–8; 30, 15–16; 31, 17–18; 34, 4–5; see also 35, 21–22. 10. Đat, MS. đā. Morris suggested the emendation. 21. quad quađ, 'quoth.' For the change cf. Gram. Introd., §§ 100, 116. 25. fleis, fleish. For the diphthong see Gram. Introd. Cf. weis (29, 1). 26. agte. 'Possessions, wealth,' not 'care' as Morris. The line means 'that no wealth may protect thee.' Cf. đǭ agtes (26, 32). This addition to the Scripture narrative is not found in Petrus Comestor, but occurs in 'Cursor Mundi,' l. 4493.

Page 23, ll. 7–8. bifǭren . . . cōrn, MS. coren. The MS. reading makes a good eye-rime, but it is doubtful whether cōrn was disyllabic in pronunciation. Better assume biforn (bifōrn) for biforen. 12. Đē rance, MS. đe ranc he. The emendation makes rance the correct plural, and leaves sevene lẹ̄ne as the more direct subject of hāven ǭvercumen. 13. it smiten. 'They smote.' Morris regards it as a neuter plural form, but perhaps this use is derived from that of it as introducing plural verbs in OE. 14. đristen tō ẹ̄e, MS. đrist hem to đo. The emendation seems justified by the syntax. The plural đrīsten is required and đē fette must be object of it. Cf. the Latin: Septem spicae plenae pullulabant in culmo uno, aliaeque totidem iuxta oriebantur tenues, et percussae uredine, et devorabant priores. 29–30. ǭn . . . Phāraōn. The NF. form of Pharaoh should rime with long close ō, as it does at 22, 1–2, 9–10. Cf. 32, 15–16, and the OF. Phāraūn at 23, 21–22. 30. tawnen. See the explanation of the form in the Glossary, and cf. MnE. twit for a similar initial t from OE. æt in a compound word.

Page 24, l. 8. gēre. The noun gēr = ȝēr, 'year,' appears with the plural gēr at 23, 31, gēre here, and gēres in l. 25. So most OE. neuters gradually assumed the es ending of masculines. 17. ðanne Putifar. Confusion in the names Potiphar and Potiphera of our Bible is easy from the Lat. forms Putiphar and Putiphara. It was then easy to make Asenath the daughter of Joseph's old master, as here. Hebrew tradition explained Joseph's marriage of a foreign woman by saying that Job's second wife was Dinah, daughter of Jacob (Gen. xxxiv), from whom a daughter was born and became the mother of Asenath (Petrus Comestor). Moslem tradition gave a romantic turn to the story by making Joseph marry Zuleekha, wife of Potiphar, after the latter's death (Weil's 'Biblical Legends,' 97 f.). 20. Ōðer is nū. 'Another (condition) is now than had happened before.' 24. Hē luveden God. 'They (the sons of Joseph) loved God, he (God) repaid it to them.' 29. Hunger wēx. The 'Cursor Mundi' shows an interesting addition, probably from Hebrew tradition. Joseph, after threshing, casts the chaff upon the Nile, where Jacob, who casually walked by that river (geography did not trouble many mediæval writers), found it, and sent his sons along the Nile to Egypt to buy corn. 29 30. Chānaan . . . forðan. Another qualitative rime, as Chanaan seems to be disyllabic in 'Genesis,' though trisyllabic in 'Cursor Mundi,' as in Latin. Cf. 32, 7–8.

Page 25, l. 1. for nēdo sogt. Morris defined sogt as 'reconciled,' associating it with OE. sōht, but it is the past participle of sēken in the less common sense of 'attacked, driven.' 8. als. A connective of knew (l. 7) and lēt (l. 8), als must mean 'yet' or 'though,' not 'also' as Morris. Cf. Egge, 'Mod. Lang. Notes,' I, 66, and Kock, 'Anglia,' XXV, 321. 11. cume gē. Note the form without ending before gē, as in OE. Cf. l. 28, and with wē in similar position, l. 14. Morris and Mätzner change cume to came, but this is surely unnecessary, since the action is regarded as present in time. 16. dōð us, MS. doðes. Mätzner suggested doð us, though retaining the MS. reading. The change is simple and satisfactory. Kock ('Anglia,' XXV) interprets doðes as equivalent to doð'e's = dōð hē (Jacob) us, but Mätzner's suggestion seems better. 19. Hū sulde. This addition to the Scripture is in Petrus Comestor: Impossibile est enim viro idiotae tales filios esse, cum etiam regibus talis filiorum copia valde est difficilis. The first part of the line was emended by Morris 'ani man,' but MS. oninan = ōn man. 32. Ðat hē wǭre. Kölbing shows ('Eng. St.,' III, 305) that hē refers to Joseph, not to Benjamin as Morris had assumed. He compares Petrus Comestor: Timebat enim ne forte et in illum aliquid deliquissent. This is added to explain Joseph's imprisonment of his brothers.

Page 26, l. 4. ðē tǭn. The t, originally a part of ðet (ðat), seems to have become an integral part of the following word, and is so printed. Cf. tōþere (30, 20), which still remains in dialectal English. 6. Tō wedde. 'For security,' 'as a pledge.' The frequent occurrence of OE. wed n. in this dative phrase no doubt accounts for the retention of the OE. dative form. Cf. tō wīve (24, 19). 12. Wrigtful wē. 'Deservedly we are,' translating Merito haec patimur, quia peccavimus in fratrem nostrum. 19. deden . . . beden.

The rime assumes that both dēden and deden must have occurred in speech. This seems better than assuming dēden . . . beden. 24. ðǭr bifǭren. Cf. Egge ('Mod. Lang. Notes,' I, 66): 'I take in a local sense, "there before, at the top," referring to the mouth of the sacks.' 27. ǭverðogt. Morris suggests 'over-anxious,' but the word corresponds to obstupefacti turbatique of the Vulgate: Et obstupefacti turbatique mutuo (Gen. xlii. 28). 'Amazed, stupefied' are better. 31. Quan men, MS. and quan men. And is omitted, as it seems to have been copied from the preceding line by mistake.

Page 27, l. 5. Of Iōsēp. 'Of Joseph I do not know the end,' paraphrasing the Vulgate, Ioseph non est super. 7–8. dōn . . . on. Cf. rimes of long and short i in note to 22, 3–4. Perhaps the adverb on had long ǭ; see rimes at 28, 5–6; 29, 27–28. 8. sǣgeð. Note the plural subject with singular verb; probably dǣað predominated in the mind of the writer. 16. But gē. Note the abrupt transition from indirect to direct discourse; also the use of the plural pronoun in addressing one person, the earliest instance in English. 17. Quan it is nēd. Kölbing points out ('Eng. St.,' III, 306) that quan = 'if' here, the clause translating Si sic necesse est. 18. And ic ne. Mätzner adds ic here as rightly. 25. ǣðemōded. Mätzner's emendation of MS. eðimodes, making the word agree with its form in l. 1584 of the poem. 28. bēn intō Ēgypte ligt. Mätzner's reading of the line. He suggests that cumen of the MS. was originally a gloss of bēn ligt. 30. lag, MS. was, making no rime. Morris's ðag = OE. ðā is impossible, and Mätzner suggests assonance. Koch's late suggestion of stāg = OE. stāg is equally impossible, as OE. ā has regularly become ǭ in 'Genesis.'

Page 28, l. 2. Her nǭn. 'None of them.' The objective use of the genitive plural; cf. ūre nǭn (l. 6) and gūre ǭn (29, 30). 7. ðē stiward. Mätzner's suggestion for stiward of the MS. Otherwise the pause after stille must do duty for the omitted unstressed syllable. 8. For ic. This part of the steward's answer does not very well agree with the Latin of the Vulgate, though the probable meaning is 'I have my instructions.' 11–12. cōme . . . nǭme. Such seems to be the rime. The first word is Orm's cōme, 'coming,' and the second OE. nām f. There may have been, however, an OM. nōm showing the root of the pret. pl. of niman. 24. Wǭt ic. 'I think none there did not tremble.' The line corresponds to the Vulgate, Et incurvati adoraverunt eum (Gen. xliii. 28). Incurvati was apparently understood in its metaphorical sense 'disturbed in mind, trembling,' rather than the literal 'bowing.' 32. wurð tǭres wēt. 'Was wet with tears.' The expression occurs with and without a preposition; cf. 30, 22, and 31, 4.

Page 29, l. 4. Sette hem, MS. and sette hem. The reading of the text seems simpler than retaining and at the beginning of this line and omitting it before him in the preceding. 12. And hem. There is nothing in the Scripture or Petrus Comestor for these lines, as Kölbing pointed out. In 'Cursor Mundi' the same 'sarmun' occurs, and the brothers are especially warned against theft. 18. Ǭr ǭr. 'Before.' The doubling of the particle is not uncommon. 29. For is it nogt. All reference to divination (Gen. xliv. 5, 15) is omitted by the English writer here and at 30, 10. Petrus Comestor adds, after paraphrasing Joseph's words about divining, Forte ioco dictum est, nec est imputandum. 30. Dat, MS. ða. Morris's emendation, which seems necessary. 32. Up quām. A very early use of quām, 'whom,' as a relative pronoun. Such use appears first in the oblique cases, but is not established until Late Middle and Early Modern English.

Page 30, l. 1. Hē bē slagen. Mätzner's emendation from MS. reading he slagen. agēn. 'Back,' not 'again,' as Morris. 'There is no reference to an earlier state of slavery' (Egge).

Page 31, l. 1. lewse. This seems to be the only form of the MS., occurring also at l. 1576. No doubt the form should be lēswe, OM. lēs (acc. lēswe), WS lās, connected with OE. lesan-læs, 'to glean.' Gersen. The Lat. form is Gessen, which a copyist seems to have transformed by mistaking s for r. With this rime with long e cf. 31, 12–13; 32, 12–13, where the vowel is clearly short. 9. For luve of Iōsēp migte hē tīmen. The him of l. 8 and the hē here seem to refer to the father (30, 31), and the line means 'For (on account of) love of Joseph might he prosper.' The rime of tīmen here and in other places may indicate shortening. 19. Alsǭ ſę̄le. Kölbing suggested connecting with following rather than preceding line. It translates Petrus Comestor, Et totidem (referring to Benjamin's gift) misit patri.

Page 32, l. 3. Wēl mē. No verb is necessary in the exclamation. Cf. wumme (195, 33). 6. And sēn. Mätzner adds him, but it is unnecessary and adds an extra syllable to the line. 8. manīe a man. Note the early introduction of a to make the singular number clear, indefinites tending to lose their singular uses and forms. 15. Fader dēre, MS. derer. Mätzner's change. 20. ðǭ, MS. ðog. The copyist was influenced by the preceding ðōg just above; cf. Gen. xlvii. 9. 23. Sǭ ðinkeð. Kölbing ('Eng. St.,' III, 307) pointed out that the speech of Jacob ends with the preceding line, these words paraphrasing a comment of Petrus Comestor: Peregrinationis dixit, quia sancti vitam hanc pro incolatu habent. 29. Him and hise, MS. he. The change is Mätzner's.

Page 33, l. 2. fowrtēne gēr, MS. xiiij. The writer is in error, as the Vulgate reads decem et septem annos. That the error is not a copyist's is clear from the fact that ME. seventēne would be too long to replace fowrtēne. 6. off hē, MS. offe. Mätzner added hē after offe, and Schumann ('Anglia,' VI, Anz. 1) proposed the reading adopted. 7. Ðat quan it wurðe. Literally, 'that when it should be done with him,' an idiom easily understood to-day though not a literary form. 16. hem. Kölbing ('Eng. St.,' III, 307) would change hem to him, referring to Crīst (l. 14) only. He quotes the comment of Petrus Comestor: Cura fuit sanctis sepeliri in terra, qua sciebant Christum resurrecturum, ut cum eo resurgerent. But surely the wish of Jacob twice repeated (Gen. xlvii. 30; xlix. 29) was to be buried with his fathers, and it is more likely that hem is correct. It would include Christ with hise eldere (l. 13). 27. smāken. Mätzner alters to māken, but the sense of smāken is clear; cf. 14, 2. 28. biwāken. The whole passage upon the burial customs occurs in Petrus, though with several slight differences. 29–30. daiges . . . laiges. For forms see Gram. Introd.

Page 34, l. 5. delven it wið ȳre. 'Bury it with iron (instrument).' The last two words add nothing of value, but no doubt the whole was a common expression in rime. 12–13. mide . . . wechdēde. Perhaps for mide we should read mede (mēde?) with the vowel of ON. með, Dan. med. Cf. 34, 30–31. 21. wēl him. 'Well may it be with him (tō him) that has done well.' 30–31. dede ... mide. Another rime which shows the short form of ME. dede, if not indeed that which Orm regularly uses, dide.

III. 'FLORIS AND BLAUNCHEFLUR'

The story of 'Floris and Blauncheflur,' of which this selection forms a part, is found in four MSS.: Gg. 4, 27, 2 of Cambridge University Library; Cotton Vetellius D. III of the British Museum; Auchinleck MS. of the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; Trentham MS. of the Duke of Sutherland's Library. Of these the first and best, so far as complete, was edited by Lumby, EETS. 14 (1866), and re-edited by Dr. G. McKnight in 1901. Other editions of the poem are those by Hartshorne ('Ancient Metrical Tales' (1829)), Laing (Abbotsford Club Publ. (1857)). A critical edition, with valuable introduction from a comparative standpoint, was made by Emil Hausknecht for the 'Sammlung englischer Denkmäler' of Zupitza in 1885. The Cambridge MS. belongs to the middle, possibly the second quarter, of the thirteenth century. The language is that of the Southeast Midland, with a considerable number of strictly Southern forms, as shown by the footnotes. This direct Southern influence points to a district farther south than that of the 'Bestiary' or 'Genesis and Exodus.' Owing to the mixture of Southern with Midland forms this selection does not represent the East Midland in its purity, but is added largely because of its greater literary interest. The metre of the poem is the rimed couplet of four, sometimes three, stresses.

'Floris and Blauncheflur' is a romantic tale, probably of Eastern origin, and brought to the West in the twelfth century, perhaps by crusaders. The English poem was freely translated and condensed from a French version, and is one of the earliest of a long series of French romances in Middle English literature. The main current of the story to the beginning of our selection (l. 433 of Camb. MS., 847 of the Hausknecht text) is as follows. Floris and Blauncheflur had become passionately attached as children. The father of Floris, the king of Spain, disapproves of the union, and suggests killing the maiden. In the original French version Blauncheflur is the daughter of a Christian captive, and the father of Floris a Saracen. The queen, mother of Floris, proposes sending him away, and this was done. Blauncheflur is then sold to the 'Admiral' of Babylon for a marvellous cup, a tomb is erected, and Floris, on his return, is told that she is dead. He is so heart-broken that he attempts his life, and the king and queen reveal to him the truth. Floris proposes to seek Blauncheflur, and the king gives him the marvellous cup, the queen a magic ring. He has various adventures in his search, and finally reaches Babylon. Here, by giving him the marvellous cup and promising great wealth, Floris at last persuades the porter of the tower in which Blauncheflur is confined to assist him. Then follows our selection.

The Southern forms in the original text have been largely replaced by those of the Midland. This applies especially to those with u, OE. y, and inflexional forms, while some with ēo (hēo, 36, 16), which would probably not be found as late as this text but for Southern influence, have been retained. Besides these peculiarities, among vowels may be mentioned the rare use of o for u (jongling, 44, 3), a usage to become much more common in the following selections. Among consonants, the regular use of ȝ for y initially and for a palatal and guttural spirant medially separates these sounds from the stop g (as in go), though the latter character is still used for g = dȝ (as in jugement, 42, 2). For the latter sound initially, OF. j also appears. OF. c — s is found as in certes (38, 11), Clārīce (38, 3), and sch for sh. Contrary to the practice of the last two texts wh represents OE. hw, as in Orm. Among inflexional forms, a few with the prefix i – OE. ge have been left, as perhaps properly belonging to SEMl., at least longer than to Ml. and Nth. English. A special treatment of the language occurs in Hausknecht's edition, with which cf. 'Eng. St.,' IX, 92, 'Anglia,' Anz., VIII, 150. For notes see 'Anglia,' I, 473; 'Eng. St.,' III, 99, 272, IX, 389.

Page 35, l. 15. cūpen. Hausknecht takes this as OF. cupe, not Sth. cūpe = OE. cȳpe, because of the form in the Auchinleck MS., coupe (couppe) = cūpe. The meaning is the same in either case. 19. gegges. The Trenth. MS. has maydens. 20. for hēvīe. A substantive use of the adjective, as in the colloquial 'for cold,' 'for hot.' 28. lēte hire stūnde. Hire refers to the basket (cūpe), the SEMl. apparently agreeing with Sth. in preserving grammatical gender later than in Ml. and Nth.; cf. hē referring to ring (43, 16). The adverb stūnde, MS. stonde, completes the rime and sense: 'and go forth and leave it (hire) at once.' It is easy to see how stūnde was misunderstood for stǫnde.

Page 36, ll. 1–2. wōlde . . . bihōlde. Long ō in wōlde is proved by occasional rimes like these, though the short form is equally clear from Orm's wollde; cf. 23–24. Otherwise we must assume qualitative rimes only, in such cases. 7–8. rẹde . . . hadde. These two lines, with imperfect rime, are found only in Camb. MS. and are rejected by Hausknecht from his critical text. Perhaps we are to read hēde (OE. hēde < hæfde). 9. agē, MS. agen. The MS. rime agen . . . him is of course impossible. Agē, from Auch. MS., and a slight change in the following line, makes all right. Trenth. MS. reads:

'When he saw3 it was not shee,
Into þe lepe a3en stert he.'

15–16. itǭld . . . isǭld. The retention of the OE. prefix ge- as i-, occasionally found in Ml., is characteristic of Sth. English; cf. iferr (37, 22). 16. hēo. Note the Sth. feminine of the pronoun, as well as the OE. diphthong ēo. 17. lẹ̄pe. An infinitive dependent upon cōmen, as Zupitza pointed out in 'Anglia,' I, 473: 'Now maidens came running (leaping) in to her.' 19. what hire wēre. 'What might be to her,' that is, 'what was the matter with her?' a common idiom. 21. Wēl hēo was biþo3t. 'She was very (well) considerate and (considered) where to find them answer'; or could whare be for ware, 'wary'? Trenth. MS. has:

'Clarys byþou3t hur anoon ry3t
Þat hit was Blaunchefluf þe white,
And gave þe maydens answere anoon.'

23. ich, MS. ihc always. This can hardly indicate the true Sth. form ich = itſ (ch in church), but rather a SEMl. ic in which c (k) is shading out into a spirant like German ch in ich.

Page 37, l. 2. Wilt ū. Usually printed as one word, but in this book the identity of each word has been consistently preserved by separating even the reduced forms, as here. 8. libbe. Another form at least more common in the South. In Ml. and Nth. bb of the OE. infin. and ind. pres. 1st sing. has been replaced by v, by analogy of the 3rd sing. and the other forms of the verb. Cf. MnE. have, tive, and for a similar loss of gg, lie ('recline'), buy, say, lay.

Page 33, l. 3. þō. This addition to the MS. line seems to be required by the metre, though not added by Hausknecht. 6. o = of. Theoretically we must assume a long ō as in ō from on, but partly to differentiate the two words I have used short o in this word, even in these early instances. 22. Ōwer bəire. An objective genitive, 'of you two.' 25–26. adūn . . . fram. An impossible rime. All other MSS. read aroum (aroom, rown), i. e. arūm, OE. on(an), gerūm, 'apart,' and no doubt this is the correct form, though giving assonance only with adūn.

Page 39, ll. 13–14. wite . . . underȝete. Correct rime form here requires undergite, not uncommon in Sth., or possible wete < wite. 'But they might not long guard them, that they should not be perceived,' or as we should say, 'They could not long prevent them from being perceived.'

Page 40, l. 4. lōke. So MSS., but syntax requires lōked, in which final d is rarely dropped. 15–16. arīst . . . atwīst. Mätzner explains the first as a contracted form of arīseð (Sievers, 'Angelsächsische Gram.,' § 359, 8), and the second as an analogical preterit like OE. wiste. We should expect preterits in both cases from the form of the narrative, but no such preterit as arīst seems to be known. 23. pilēr. The pillar in which the water-pipes were concealed. 28. Hē axede. The pronoun refers to Admiral, which the other MSS. repeat here as in 40, 2.

Page 41, ll. 9–10. mūþ . . . cūþ. Perhaps we should read mūþe ds., cūþe pl. of the adjective. 11. teȝ. The short form belongs here, or the rime is qualitative only, as in ll. 21–22. 19–20. caste . . . breste. With keste for caste, a not uncommon ME. form, the rime would be correct; cf. 42, 3–4. Breste is an OE. neuter which has not yet acquired the es plural. 30. ligge. A characteristic Sth. form, the prevailing Ml. being līe(n). Cf. note on 37, 8.

Page 42, l. 30. hōndhabbing. A legal expression handed down from OE. times, the original word being a participle handhæbbende; cf. 'Anc. Laws and Inst. of England,' I, Index, hæbbendæ handa.

Page 44, l. 32. ȝēt. This word has not been satisfactorily explained, but the best assumption seems to be that it is for ȝēd e), with wiþdraȝe as an infinitive depending upon it: 'And Blaunchefluir went (endeavoured) to withdraw him.'

Page 45, l. 2. þat ōþer. The line is too short metrically, and probably we should read þat eiþer ōþer deide bifōre; cf. 37, 29 and 45, 5.

Page 46, l. 1. of Spaygne. It looks as if this were originally a gloss which had been thrust into the line, perhaps because the beginning of the story is incomplete in all the English texts, and the connexion of Floris's father with the Saracens was lost sight of.

IV. 'DEBATE OF THE BODY AND THE SOUL'

The 'Debate of the Body and the Soul' is found in six MSS.: Auch. MS., Edinburgh; Laud MS. 108, and Vernon MS., both of the Bodleian; Digby MS. 102, Royal MS. 18 AX, and Additional MS. 22, 283 of the British Museum. Our text is from Laud MS. 108, which was edited by Th. Wright in 'Latin Poems commonly attributed to Walter Mapes,' by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 92), and by Linow in 'Erlanger Beiträge zur englischen Philologie,' in which the Laud MS. is accompanied by three others and an important introduction, together with appendices. The 'Debate' was written in the second half of the thirteenth century, and the Laud MS. represents East Midland in the main, of northern rather than southern variety, but with a considerable number of Sth. forms. The interest of the poem rather than the purity of the text has led to its inclusion here.

The 'Debate' is based on a motive common in Western Europe in the middle ages. It finds expression in Old and Early Middle English in an 'Address of the Soul to the Body.' The 'Debate' or 'Dialogue' between the two belongs to Middle English only; cf. Bruce, 'A Contribution to the Study of the Body and the Soul Poems in English' ('Mod. Lang. Notes,' V, 197). To the 'Debate' two poems bear close relation, the Latin 'Visio Fulberti (Philberti)' printed by Wright in the above-mentioned work, as by Méril in 'Poésies populaires latines antérieures au douzième siècle,' and an OF. poem 'Un Samedi par Nuit,' Anhang I, to Linow above. A modern version of the 'Debate' was made by Sir Theodore Martin in the 'Monk's Dream,' and one was printed by Prof. F. J. Child of Harvard for private circulation. The metre of the poem is an eight-line stanza made up of lines with four stresses and iambic movement, riming ababaḃab, with the ḃ rimes more exact than the others. The poem has been treated in relation to sources, language, metre, by Kleinert, 'Über den Streit zwischen Leib u. Seele' (1880), Heesch. 'Über Sprache u. Versbau' (1884), Linow as above, Kunze, 'Þe Disputisoun bitwen Þe Bodi and Þe Soule' (1892), Bruce as above.

Special peculiarities of language which appear for the first time are the new diphthongs ei (ɛi) and au (ɑu) before palatal and guttural ȝ (g) respectively, as eiȝene (51, 25), sauȝ (47, 2). The former occur rarely in 'Genesis and Exodus,' as already noted. Here also o = u commonly, and ōu = ū almost invariably. Among consonants ȝw represents OE. hw, as in ȝwīlene (48, 12), and ȝth of the MS. = ȝt (ȝht). Owing to lateness of the MS. copy, rather than the poem, final ȝ is often omitted, or added to words to which it does not belong. These peculiarities, as scribal, have been placed in the footnotes. Strictly Sth. forms have also been placed in the footnotes, and attention will be called to some of Nth. origin. The much more frequent loss of final n in inflexional forms should be noted in this and the following selection.

Page 47, l. 26. dróupening. The MS. reading droukening can hardly be correct, as it must be connected with ON. droukna, 'to drown,' an inappropriate meaning. Auch. and Vern. MSS. have droupening (droupynge), while Digby MS. has derkyng, as if the scribe had not understood the form before him.

Page 48, l. 2. tō pay. 'For pleasure, satisfaction.' The MS. payȝ seems to indicate that, at the time of the copy, ȝ had already shaded out into i, since it is here added to an OF. word to which it could not have belonged. Cf. similar forms in the footnotes. 5. gōst it. Such repetition of the subject in pronoun form, originally used for emphasis, came to be employed by the metrist to complete his line. Cf. Kellner, 'Hist. Eng. Syntax,' § 284, 286. 6. It, MS. yt. Initial y for i has usually been replaced by the latter in these early selections, to reduce the number of variants, especially in initials. 18. lēde. The changes of meaning and use in this word are especially interesting. First, 'Latin (tongue),' a borrowed adjective; next, 'discourse, speech, in Latin'; then, 'any tongue, language, speech'; here, 'speech in sense of voice,' perhaps 'boasting speech'; the word may also mean 'song of a bird.' 21. ȝwēre bēn. In Laud MS. this and the next stanza change places, all other MSS. giving the order of the text. The Auch. MS. also has another stanza between the two. 26. fedde, MS. ledde. The other MSS. have fed (feddes). Feddes would agree in use with leddes, but would not rime with fledde (l. 28).

Page 49, l. 10. gǭn tō greiþe. So Auch. MS., which seems better metrically than gǭn greiþe, though the latter is the older syntax. Two forms have developed, that of Auch. MS., and gō and greiþe of Digby, a well known form in colloquial and dialectal English. 16. mē bigete. At this point the Laud MS. lacks seventeen stanzas as compared with the Auch. text. Eleven of these continue the speech of the 'Soul' (see Linow, or a modernization), after which the 'Body' (Auch. MS.),

> 'Lift up his heved opon þe swere;
> As it were sike it gan to gron,
> And seyd, "Wheþer þou art mi fere,
> Mi gost þat is fro me gon?"'

The 'Body' admits that it must decay, and then turns upon the 'Soul' with a countercharge:

> 'Soule, ȝif þou it me wilt atwite,
> Þat we schul be boþe yspilt, > ȝif þou hast schame and gret despite,
> Al it is þine owhen gilt.
> Y þe say at wordes lite,
> Wiþ riȝt resoun ȝif þat ow wilt,
> Þou berst þe blame and y go quite;
> Þou scholdest fram schame ous have yschilt.'

Then follow the stanzas at 49, 17. 14. swelle. Note the new vowel which has developed in the MS. suwelle, and cf. kowcynte (48, 15). 17. þē schōp, MS. schop þe. The text is the reading of all the MSS. except Laud. If the poet intended to mark the contrast between þē (the 'Soul') and the 'Body,' the Laud MS. is correct. 22. gōd, MS. guod. The MS. form is of Nth. origin, unless perhaps Kentish can be assumed to have influenced the Laud MS. 23. dumb and daft. An example of the alliterative phrases, once so common, and still often preserved in poetry. Cf. lime and lyþ (50, 15), tēme and tēche (50, 27), linde and līf (51, 22), feld and fenne (51, 23). Under the influence of these phrases of OE. origin new ones have often been made, as pile and pīþ (50, 13), where the first is OF., and preye and prēche (51, 1), where both words are of OF. origin. In rest and rō (51, 19) the second is ON., and in briven and þrō (51, 17) both are of Norse origin. 24. mō þērtil. Mē, omitted in Laud, occurs in all other MSS. and is necessary to the metre.

Page 50, l. 3. gast. Both gȝst and gast occur in the poem, the latter riming with short a, as at 58, 13. so that it probably represents not Nth. gāst, but a secondary form from OE. gāst. Cf. Morsbach, 'Mitteleng. Gram.,' § 62, anm. 22. dīst. A somewhat unusual shortening of dīdest. Cf. the form in rime at 54, 4. 28. ȝwat was yvel. Linow has the impossible reading ȝwat was wel from a misunderstanding of Sth. üvel of the MS. ȝwat at the beginning of the line was suggested by Mätzner; cf. 58, 22.

Page 51, l. 9. ēdest. The shorter and earlier ēdes would make the rime perfect. Cf. leddes (48, 24). 13. Hō may. This stanza, found at this place in Auch. and Digby MSS., occurs in Laud after 56, 16. As to sense it fits either place. 18. Miȝtis did, MS. mittis ded. Mätzner proposed the reading of the text. Pluralizing an abstract noun for emphasis was common in OE., and remained in the ME. period sometimes; cf. Kellner, 'Hist. Eng. Syntax,' § 21. 19. rō. Though from ON. rór), and so having close ō, it is possible the ō has become open under the influence of preceding r. 20. mē in pīne. Mätzner added mē, which occurs in all the other MSS.

Page 52, l. 3. niȝt, niȝth. This is the beginning in our texts of the spelling ȝth = ȝt (ght). Cf. he = ch in 'Floris and Blauncheflur.' 8. Come þou. 'If thou shouldst come.' Subjunctive in transposed clause, as in MnE. 'had I.' 14. Sat or stōd. That is, '(Where) sat (I) or stod,' in ellipsis with the preceding line. 21. Þat tōu ne wēre. 'That thou were not (present) and advised course (counsel),' that is, 'Unless thou wert present,' &c., 'I never did,' &c. 23. mowen. The shortened form mōwn is necessary for the rime; cf. 78, 31. 29. chaunged, MS. chaunched. Mätzner suggested the change, which is obviously necessary.

Page 53, l. 7. Nevere of catēl. 'I should have' from the first line is to be supplied. Then nome (= nume) is a past participle depending upon 'should have.' 10. Ne wēre þē wit. 'Were it not for the wit that was wholly thine.' 18. Sō dōth. 'As doth that (one) who dares no other (thing).' 26. gete, MS. getin. The change seems necessary for metre, and is proper owing to the many infinitives which have lost final n. 30. bētin and birst. Mätzner connects the last word with berstcn, 'burst, broken,' but the pp. in Ml. would be berstcd regularly, while both form and meaning point to OE. gebrȳsed with syncopation of e and shortening of the vowel after metathesis.

Page 54, l. 4. dīst. So MS., although breaking the rime sequence. Perhaps dirst, 'durst,' connected with OE. dȳ(r)ste, found once in the Rushworth 'Matthew,' a Mercian text. 13. gloterīe. Altered by Linow and Mätzner to glotonīe, but a substantive of this form, with the same meaning as glotonie, occurs in OF. works. 22. wē. Mätzner added to the text as necessary. So also dide in l. 27, though Mätzner uses the Sth. form dūde. 24. þōu sauȝ. It has been customary to add þōȝ, 'though,' at the beginning of this line, and Vern. and Digby MSS. so read. Auch. MS. reads:

'Litel hede tok þou of þat
When þou seiȝe ded men in grave.'

This seems to indicate that the third line of the stanza refers to the fourth and not to the second, and I therefore keep the MS. reading. The 'Body' took no heed of the many dead seen in the grave, and thought no such fate could come to it.

Page 55, l. 6. Abȳ . . . abȳȝe. Note the double forms of the same verb, one without the spirant ȝ. 11. Ǭn untiȝht. Mätzner says, 'only orthographically different from an untiht of Vern. MS.,' but ǭn implies greater emphasis on the word than would be implied by the article. 25. lein ǭn hǭnd. Mätzner interpreted lein as 'conceal, hide,' and Linow regards ǭn as an adverb modifying lein, taking hǭnd as a direct object. I assume that MS. on is 'one,' and that the expression means 'lay a (one) hand,' i.e. 'initiate one hand that hath turned to shame and sin.'

Page 56, l. 7. ȝwanne þē blīnde. Cf. Matt. xv. 14. 12. las. Mätzner assumes this is pret. of lēsen = lęs (OE. lēosan = lēas), 'lose,' when it must be accounted a shortened form, certainly not common. I propose the pret. of lęsen = las (OE. lesan = læs), 'gather, collect'; 'for all my love on thee I collected or centered.' The usual, but special sense of 'glean,' is not the only one, as shown by 'Elene' 1238, where ic læs is used intransitively. 23. þey. Note the double forms of the pronoun þey, hē (l. 8) in this poem. 29. þus sōne. The Auch. MS. reads so ȝong, 'so young,' and Vern. and Digby þus ȝong. There seems no sufficient reason for departing from the Laud reading.

Page 57, l. 4. mes. Note the plural without ending in an OF. word ending in s. With its meaning of 'messes, courses at table,' cf. OE. sand (sǭnd), ME. sande (sǭnde) from send. 12. Nim of mē. Laud MS. reads on, all others of. þī soule is appositive, of course. 18. bochēre. Both Laud and Vern. MSS. read boþelere, Auch. bucher, Digby, bell-wether. The Auch. reading is to be preferred. 21. trotevāle. The origin of the word is obscure. Perhaps from OF. trotevale*, with some such meaning as 'a trifling thing.' Halliwell quotes:

'Yn games and festys and at the ale
Love men to lestene trotevale.'

Page 58, l. 20. in a lāke. 'In a lake.' The MSS. vary greatly, as if the passage were misunderstood. Auch. reads:

'And seþþen into a pit ycast
Unto a nadder and a snake.'

Page 59, l. 1. þē wayn. Mätzner thinks the reference is to the wagon used for carrying the dead body, and cites Turner's 'Hist. of the Anglo-Saxons,' III, 84. 2. leid þē spęche. 'Laid (aside) the speech.' Auch. MS. reads:

'And þe tong haþ lorn his speche,' giving the sense clearly. The other MSS. agree with Laud. 9. þǫ. Mätzner would change to þōū, 'thou.' The Auch. MS. gives the sense:

'When þou feldest þe sike and sere.'

Our line may be read, 'When that (the life) was so sick and sere.' 19. And miȝte. 'And might five (times) such as there are in the world of all things,' that is 'five times as many things as there are in the world.'

Page 60, l. 4. A þousand develene. The plural develene = Ml. devels is another indication of Sth. influence in this poem. 10. With brǭde bulches. In the middle ages devils were often pictured as having the most hideous deformities. 20. shenke abǫuten. Mätzner proposed the emendation.

Page 61, l. 12. a cō̃te. Mätzner alters to colte, 'colt,' on the ground that the devil was often represented as a horse. I have preserved the MS. reading, assuming that if the word is for colte the l has already been lost, thus preserving the rime. 18. ilke a grō̃te. Note the addition of a after ilke, to make the singular clear. Cf. note on 32, 8. 30. tō him wēre let, MS. led. Surely led is impossible in both rime and meaning; let, 'permitted,' fits both exactly.

Page 62, l. 6. Bauston (MS. Hauston) and Bewis. All but Laud MS. agree in using alliterative names: Auch. Bausan and Bewevīs, Vern. Bauson and Beufys, Digby Bauȝan and Beaufitz. Can the original names in Laud be connected with those in the OF. romance 'Beuves d'Hanstone'? 30. tō wrō̃þer hē̃le. Wrō̃þer seems to be an old fem. dat. sing. which has become fossilized in this stereotyped expression.

Page 64, l. 5. þō̃ alle sinful. The Laud line is too long metrically, and Vern., Digby agree in alle synful.

V. 'ADAM AND EVE'

The metrical 'Adam and Eve,' or 'Canticum de Creatione' as it has been called, occurs in Auchinleck MS. at Edinburgh, and Trinity College MS. 57 at Oxford. The former, from which our selection is taken, was edited by Laing for the Abbotsford Club (1857), and by Horstmann, 'Altenglische Legenden' (1878), p. 139. Prose versions of the story are found in Vern. MS. (Horstmann's 'Legenden,' 1878, p. 120), Egerton MS. 876, Harl. MS. 4775, Bodl. MS. 596, both the latter having been edited by Horstmann for the 'Archiv für neuere Sprachen,' LXXIV, 345. The language of the poem is that of the SEMl. dialect, as shown by Bachmann in his excellent monograph 'Die beiden Versionen des ME. Canticum de Creatione,' and the time of writing about 1300.

The poem contains an apocryphal story of the fall of man, the repentance and penance of Adam and Eve, and their death. It is based on the 'Vitae Adae et Evae' (see edition of W. Meyer, 1878). Just before the beginning of the selection Adam, in his last illness, has commanded Eve to go with Seth to Paradise, where they are to receive a message from God. They are met in the way by the devil, who bites Seth in the face before the latter commands him to be gone. Then they proceed on their journey as in the passage chosen. To the latter version, represented by the Trinity MS., was added the story of the cross tree, said to have grown from the seeds brought by Seth from Paradise and placed under Adam's tongue on his deathbed. Both stories also appear in 'Cursor Mundi,' l. 1237 f. The metre is the rimed couplet of four stresses, with occasional lines of three stresses and other irregularities.

The language shows fewer peculiarities than any selection so far. The MS. omits final e in a number of forms to which it must be restored on metrical grounds, probably indicating that the copyist's speech had lost this sound, though perhaps owing only to scribal carelessness. On the other hand, the metre proves that final e was beginning to disappear in many classes of words, as pronouns and other unstressed words. Bachmann also thinks that final e at the end of the line was wholly lost, but his position seems not to be demonstrated by the examples cited. See his monograph for a fuller treatment of language.

Page 64, l. 12. ne, MS. no. The MS. form can hardly be regarded as the emphatic negative nō, OE. nā, and must be an orthographic variant of unstressed ne; cf. oȝain of MS. at 65, 23. 13. Sehē ne durst nouȝt. Earlier in the poem Adam had told Eve to take Seth:

'For he haþ nouȝt trespast so miche
As have we, sikerliche,
Þerfore he may þe balder be
To speke wiþ Jhesu Crist þan we.'

20. an ānġel briȝt. According to the Trinity version this is Miȝhel, 'Michael.' 21. manēre, MS. maner. The MS. shows lack of final e in a number of places in which it must have been originally written or pronounced; cf. term (l. 25 and 65, 1), mett (66, 5), &c. 26. Of fīve þoūsande. That is, as is not very clearly told, until Christ's death and the 'harrowing of hell' during his three days in the grave. Cf. the various versions of the 'harrowing of hell' story in Old and Middle English, and 67, 23.

Page 65, l. 12. hȳȝe, MS. heyȝe. The change is fully justified by the rimes crīe . . . dȳe (67, 3–4), dȳen . . . ȳȝen (68, 29–30), dȳe . . . progenīe (69, 9–10). Such rimes as heyȝe . . . seiȝe (67, 17–18), heyȝe . . . steiȝe (68, 7–8) probably represent older forms still preserved by the scribe. 23. aȝain, MS. oȝain. The MS. form may mean oȝain, but probably o is merely the weak vowel in unstressed syllable, and it is altered to reduce the number of variants, especially of initials.

Page 66, l. 9. Ō. This is the strong form of the OE. interjection ā, and accounts for MnE. O (oh). The weak form A, from which MnE. ah comes, occurs at 25, 23 and commonly. 11. ōūs. The regular spelling with ou indicates the preservation of long ū in this dialect, beside the short form, for which we have the authority of Orm's uss. On the other hand, rimes like þus . . . ōūs (ll. 27–28), ōūs . . . Jēsus (70, 7–8 and 74, 19–20) indicate the short form, though the written form is the same and has been retained. 13–14. liven . . . ēven. Such a rime cannot be wholly reconciled in its stressed vowels, but rime of unstressed syllables were often regarded as sufficient; cf. childer . . . elder (ll. 17 18). 32. alle þē liȝtnisse. In the 'Revelation of Moses' (above) the sun and moon fell down and prayed for Adam, and were 'black-looking, because they could not shine in the presence of the Light of the Universe, and for this reason their light was hidden'; Ante-Nicene Fathers, VIII, 565, 569.

Page 67, l. 7. bōk, MS. boke. Both forms appear in the poem, though the word is usually disyllabic. Here, however, a disyllable is impossible in perfect rime. 17. sit. The contract form for sitteþ, as occasionally. 18. Adam soule. A genitive without ending in proper names, especially Biblical names, is not uncommon, no doubt through the influence of the Latin Scriptures in which it so occurs; cf. David lond (72, 5).

Page 68, ll. 11–12. mōld . . . wōld. Perhaps mūlde . . . wūlde, the final e in each case being organic; but cf. mūld . . . scheld (71, 23–24). Such rimes seem to indicate long forms of wōld(e), chōld(e), beside the usual short ones; cf. note on 36, 1–2. 13. ȝēte lay Abēl. There is no reference to this in the Trinity MS. version, but it occurs in the apocryphal 'Revelation of Moses,' Ante-Nicene Fathers, VIII, 570.

Page 69, l. 23. fader liif bē write. Petrus Comestor, following another tradition, says that Enoch invented letters and wrote certain books from which the death of Adam is known.

Page 71, l. 22. In stǭn. In the Trinity version Eve is represented as having been more explicit in her directions. Seth was to make 'tables tweye':

'Tweye of erthe and tweye of ston,
. . . . . .
For long er domesday falle,
Þis worlde shal ben fordon alle
By water or by fere (fire).'

The stone pillars would thus resist water, and the earth the fire. This Hebrew tradition appears commonly. Petrus Comestor, following Josephus (ch. ii), says two such pillars of marble and tile were made by Tubalcain to preserve the knowledge of his arts; 'Hist. Schol.,' Gen. xxviii, also 'Genesis and Exodus,' 461, 'Cursor Mundi,' 1533.

Page 74, l. 13. com. So the MS., as if final e were not preserved in the infinitive. Probably, however, we should read come = cume, to rime with nome = nume, since final e must certainly be added within the line as shown by the metre.

VI. 'HAVELOK THE DANE'

The poetic romance from which this selection is taken is found in Laud MS. 108 of the Bodleian, Oxford. It was edited by Madden for the Roxburghe Club (1828); by Skeat for the Early English Text Society, Ex. Ser. 4 (1868), and re-edited for the Clarendon Press (1902); and by Holthausen in the Morsbach-Holthausen series of Old and Middle English texts (1901). A selection appears in Wülker ('Lesebuch,' I, 80), and Morris ('Specimens,' I, 222). The date of the poem is about 1300 (see Skeat's introduction for full discussion), and the dialect is probably that of Lincolnshire of that time, that is, NEMl. This original dialect, however, has been somewhat modified by different scribes, as so often in the case of popular poems. The metre is the rimed couplet, regularly of four stresses.

The complete poem consists of 3001 lines, and the story is as follows. An English king Athelwold had a daughter Goldborough, whom he entrusted at his death to the care of Earl Godrich of Cornwall, charging him to marry her to the fairest and strongest man he could find, and place the government of England in her hands. The Earl, resolving to seize England for his son, imprisoned Goldborough in the castle of Dover. Then our selection takes up the hero Havelok. To finish the tale, Havelok assisted Grim in his trade as a fisherman at Grimsby. When a famine came he left his foster-father, walked to Lincoln, and took service as a scullion to the Earl of Cornwall's cook. One day, at some games, Havelok showed his great strength, and Godrich determined to fulfil his oath by marrying Goldborough to the supposed menial. Havelok at first rebelled, but finally took Goldborough to wife and departed for Grimsby. At night, as Grim's wife had done before, Goldborough perceives the light from Havelok's mouth, and the royal cross on his shoulder. An angel also tells her of good fortune to come. At the same time Havelok has a dream that he possessed all Denmark and England.

They go to Denmark and, with many adventures, Havelok becomes king after Godard is defeated and hanged. He invades England, Godrich is made prisoner and burnt, and Havelok and Goldborough are crowned at London, reigning happily for sixty years. The source of the tale, though clearly Teutonic and English in characters and localities, is probably an OF. poem now lost, but the ancestor also of the OF. 'Lai d'Havelok,' as of the stories in Gaimar's 'Estorie des Angleis,' and in Manning's translation of Peter Langtoft's 'Chronicle.' For further particulars see the bibliography in Skeat's edition of 1902.

Peculiarities of orthography, it is believed, will no longer trouble the student. Some Nth. and some Sth. forms occur, as indicated in notes and footnotes. For the first time ȝ is used for initial ȝ (OE. ġ, as usually printed), while cht, ht (MS. cth, th) are employed for OE. ht, ME. ȝt. That this th does not mean OE. þ would be clear from the scribe's using it for t in such words as ūth = ūt, 'out.'

Page 75, l. 1. In þat tīme. The time of the earlier part of the story when Goldborough was placed in charge of Godrich. The line preceding reads:

'Sa(y) we nou forth in ure (hure) spelle.'

2. lǭnd, MS. lon. Note omission of final d here, in gōld (l. 19), and in and (l. 21). 6. fayer, MS. fayr. The word is disyllabic for metre. Morris and Skeat both add something to the line, but unnecessarily. 16–17. wilde ... filde, MS. wolde ... fulde. If the first MS. form is correct, fulde as a Ml. form must represent fullede (OE. fullode). It seems more probable that fulde = Sth. filde, Ml. filde, in which case the true Ml. rime must be wilde. This would either be for willede (OE. willode), or better a new form on the basis of wille(n), such as occurs in 'Cursor Mundi.' The latter seems to settle all difficulties. 23. rǭþe, MS. rede. The MS. form makes no rime, but the ON. form of Ml. rēde(n) is rāða, ME. rǭðe, and makes perfect rime. Cf. 86, 9–10. 26. hoslēd. Besides ME. hūsle(n), hōūsle(n), a shortened form occurs with o = u. 27. and for him gyven. For explanation cf. the statement at the death of Athelwold (l. 218):

'He made his quiste swiþe wel,
And sone gaf it evere ilk del.'

He not only made his bequest but gave over his property as well.

Page 76, l. 9. Was þē trewest. Zupitza, 'Anglia,' I, 468, proposes, quite unnecessarily, the change of þat to as. Wēnde here takes the accusative directly, as sometimes in OE. usage. 22. ēlde, MS. helde. The addition of h initially is common in words beginning with a vowel; cf. hęld for ęld (77, 20). 25–26. ringes ... singes. Both Nth. present indic. 3rd sing. Men is the weak indefinite form of man; cf. 84, 27.

Page 77, ll. 3–4. wāre ... sāre. An example of Nth. forms which have been allowed to remain. The Ml. forms appear in 17–18, as one of them exists in the MS. were ... sore. 6. Jēsu Crīst. Holthausen says a mistake for God, and he even proposes a new line, in spite of 78, 7 and frequent other references of the same sort, as at 149, 9. All these are based on John i. 3, and the usual interpretation of 'word' as Christ. Cf. the use of that passage in Tatian's 'Diatessaron,' and Milton's 'Paradise Lost,' VII, 139. Godes sone (l. 10) does not interfere with this interpretation, since the two lines express the ordinary prayer for the dead, and the inconsistency is only apparent. 13–14. heir . . . tōþer. Such a rime is certainly suspicious, and Holthausen assumes an omission of two lines. On the other hand, the sense is complete, and a form hēr from heir (cf. Behrens, 'Französische Sprache in England,' p. 141, for similar forms) may be assumed, though still riming with an unstressed syllable. 13. Havelok. The name has been traced to OE. Anlaf (ON. Oláf) through Irish Amlaib, Welsh Abloc, AN. Avelok (Havelok). This Anlaf was Olaf Sitricson, called Cuaran 'of the sandal.' 14. Swanborow . . . Helflēd. These names seem thoroughly English. The first may be OE. Swan, 'swan,' or swān, 'herdsman,' by shortening in the compound, and OE. burh, also found in Goldborough (l. 284). Helflēd is doubtless Ælflēd, WS. Ælflēd. 22. yaf a note. Cf. the expression at 79, 5. 25–26. sikerlike . . . swike. With the short form of the ending -like cf. the same rime at 84, 5–6.

Page 78, l. 3. þat God himselve. 'On which (þat . . . on) God himself ran (with) blood.' For the use of blōde without a preposition cf. the similar expression tēres wēt, 'wet with tears,' at 28, 32. 23. grette. Note the clear indication in the rime of the shortening of OE. grētte. 24. Wat is yū. Cf. the indirect form of the same question at 36, 19.

Page 79, l. 1. nis it nō cōrn. 'Is there no corn?' Note use of the expletive 'it,' as in OE. syntax. 29. wepne, MS. wepne bere. The latter is no doubt repeated from l. 27 above, but quite unnecessarily.

Page 80, l. 6. Of þē sēlī. Note the plural 'children' without distinctive genitive ending. 11. And þoucte. Napier proposed to read þouh, 'nevertheless,' instead of þoucte, and Holthausen accepts. It may be easily read as it stands, except that nouht (l. 13) must be assumed to have intruded from the preceding line: 'And thought, he would that he [Havelok] were dead, except that he would not kill him with his [own] hand, the foul fiend.' The MS. but on here and at l. 962 of the poem Skeat has properly explained as OE. būton.

Page 81, l. 10. þrinne, MS. þerinne. The shorter form is required for the rime here and perhaps at 85, 7. 21. And siþen. Holthausen assumes the loss of two lines to say that Grim put the gag in Havelok's mouth. This is not necessary, as in . . . wōunden with the next two lines are quite explicit enough as to what was done. If any emendation is to be made I suggest that mūth might be added after siþen in. 26. Hwan þē swike. Most editors have assumed that hwan was incorrect, perhaps repeated from the line above, and have altered it to þan (Morris) or as (Holthausen and Skeat). It is possible, however, to consider this as a second subordinate clause to Sone hē caste (l. 31). L. 25 merely emphasizes the action begun in l. 20, before taking up the next one. The last word of the line is also an emendation of the MS. heþede. Morris reads him gan bede, omitting havede entirely. Holthausen and Skeat change the line to As þē swike him had hē yēde, but this seems to anticipate the action in ll. 30–32. Zupitza's explanation of heþede as ēþede, based on OE. āð, is highly improbable if not quite impossible. The punctuation will make the passage clear.

Page 82, l. 2. Lēve. The word rimes with open ē words, but this does not especially assist in its etymology. 4. Al sǭ thoū. Holthausen, followed by Skeat, alters to

'Also thou wilt mi lif save (nou save),'

but it seems to me the slight emendation of mī to mē is sufficient. Grim commands his wife to watch Havelok as she values her own life, and then explains the rewards to follow. 11. sō harde adoun . . . crakedə hise croūne. The change, suggested by Morris, is unquestionably right, final e in crōūne not being pronounced. 16. þat him. Prof. Browne ('Mod. Lang. Notes,' VII, 134) makes the lament end with l. 18, at the same time suggesting the change of dēre, 'injure,' to nēre, 'save, deliver.' No emendation is necessary, however, as Havelok laments not only that he is a king's son, but that wild beasts do not have him rather than such inhuman people. Holthausen makes him refer to Grim, but surely this is impossible. The peculiarity seems to be that the last part is quoted indirectly rather than in the first person. 31. blawe. Another Nth. form, equivalent to Ml. blowe.

Page 83, l. 10. Rīs up, MS. sir up. Morris's change is obviously right and generally accepted. 17. kynemark. As Goldborough sees it, this is later described (l. 1262) as follows:

'On his shuldre, of gold red
She saw a swiþe noble croiz.

Page 85, l. 14. Denemarkes stiward, MS. denemark a stiward. It seems clear that Godard is not a stiward, but the stiward, appointed by the king above all others. Instead of inserting of before Denemark (Holthausen), I prefer to think the genitive s has been lost in the initial of stiward.

Page 86, l. 9. Wat shal mē. 'What shall (be) to me for counsel.' So in l. 118 of the poem. 16. shēp . . . nēt. The MS. shep, net, hors, swin, might all be plurals without ending, as they are all OE. neuters. But they are more likely general singulars, as are the descriptive words wolle, hōrn, bērd. For this reason the omitted word gēt, not gēt (gēte), the mutated plural (Skeat, Holthausen), is adopted. 21. And al hē. 'And he drew all to the penny,' i. e. obtained money instead of barter for his possessions.

Page 87, l. 4. sē. This word, with open ē in OE. dialects, invariably rimes close in Havelok; cf. Ten Brink, 'Chaucers Sprache,' § 24 a. 15. siþe, MS. þrie. The MS. reading is meaningless, and some change must be made. I repeat siþe from siþen (l. 11); Holthausen and Skeat read yete, 'yet.' 24–25. ērde . . . ērþe. The MS. erþe in both lines is impossible, and the change of the first to ērde is probably the best that can be made. 30. Grimesbī it calle, MS. calleth alle. The change is Zupitza's and is generally accepted.

VII. ROBERT MANNING'S 'HANDLYNGE SYNNE'

THE TALE OF PERS THE USURER

The 'Handlynge Synne,' or 'Manual of Sins,' is found in Harleian MS. 1701 of the British Museum, and Bodleian MS. 415. It was edited by Furnivall for the Roxburghe Club (1862) and has appeared in a new edition for the Early English Text Society. A selection occurs in Morris 'Specimens,' II, 50). Our selection is from the Harleian MS. as edited by Furnivall, and includes lines 5555 to 5946. The author, Robert Manning, was born at Brunne or Bourn near Market Deeping in Lincolnshire about 1260, and died about 1340. In 1303, while living at Brimwake in the hundred of Kesteven, he translated this work, as he tells us in the prologue. The language therefore represents NEMl. of the early fourteenth century.

Manning's work is translated from the French 'Manuel des Pechiez' of William of Waddington. It treats the seven deadly sins and seven sacraments, the twelve requisites of a good confession, and the twelve graces resulting therefrom. In illustration of various points such tales as this of Pers are introduced. In this case, as usually, the translation follows the OF. tale with slight variations. The metre, as so commonly at this time, is the rimed couplet of four stresses.

Like the last selection, the language of this contains some Nth. forms. The use of y, long and short, for i is exceedingly common. An occasional Nth. ei (ey) represent Ml. Nth. ē, an orthographic peculiarity which also grows more frequent. Final e is more generally lost in pronunciation than in previous selections, but is often written where it must have been silent, and even added where it never belonged historically. It is probably silent at the end of the line in most cases. A medial e which is necessary for the metre has often been omitted. Among consonants gh appears for ȝ before t, as in MnE. spelling. Some of these are no doubt connected with the fact that the MS. is later than the time of Manning, that is about 1360.

Page 88, l. 1. kauersyns. Though used as a general name, as in OF., the word was originally more specific, since it is derived from the Provence town of Cahors, early noted for its usurers. Dante ('Inferno,' XI, 50) connects Cahors with Sodom, and Matthew of Paris has a chapter near the beginning of his 'History' on the extortions of these usurers. The word kauersin has been generally missed by the dictionaries, or wrongly glossed as 'hypocrite.' 2. wykked. Note how early ME. wikke has assumed excrescent d after the analogy of adjectives and participles ending in ed. 5. nat. This is probably a retention of OE. naht, rather than an early unrounding of o in noht. 18. Pērs. Here, and often elsewhere, to be read as a disyllable. Perhaps we should print Pēres (cf. pens, ōkerērs = penes, ōkerēres, ll. 25, 26), but I have preferred to leave the MS. forms with this note. 21. Seynt Jo̱ne. This St. John, the Almoner, was patriarch of Alexandria in the seventh century.

Page 89, l. 2. sāte. Evidently a Nth. form if the vowel is long, or possibly a new formation on the basis of the singular. 7-8. weyl . . . deyl. Examples of the Nth. use of ei (ey) for ē. 25. bo̱de þē quē̱de. 'Awaited the evil (man).'

Page 90, l. 1. Pērs stōde. Cf. 85, 27-28, thought by Skeat to have suggested this passage. It was probably a rather common expression in one form or another at the time. 5-6. lo̱fe . . . dro̱fe. A good example of the addition of final e where it could not have been pronounced, a practice increasingly common in later Middle English. 22. fyl. A shortened preterit of fallen–fēl, with e become i (y). 24. Hym þoghte. Note the confusion which has already taken place between ME. þuȝte and þoȝte. 30. abashed as amad, MS. as mad. Morris suggested a mad, 'a maid,' but the correct form is the shortened pp. of amæden, OE. gemādan.

Page 91, l. 28. nōw þōu lēres. 'Now thou shalt learn how this loaf shall help you at need, (and how) to improve thy soul with alms-deeds.' Note the present 3rd sing. in -es and -eþ side by side.

Page 92, ll. 29–30. herte . . . smert. Another indication of the loss of final e from the spoken language of this region; cf. also breyde . . . seyd (93, 31–32).

Page 93, l. 14. And a partȳ. 'And began in part, or in some measure, to leave off.'

Page 94, l. 31. Hys clerk was wǭ. In OE. syntax clerk would require a dat. after was, but the loss of distinctive ending for that case made a noun in such position seem the subject, and this syntax has prevailed in MnE. usage.

Page 95, l. 10. Tō whōm. Note the clear use of whom as a relative. 17. ȝōle. The etymology is uncertain, but I have assumed its connexion with ON. jōl, OE. gēol, 'yule,' still found in MnE. Yule.

Page 96, l. 7. Plenērlȳ alle þat. Cf. Havelok, ll. 819–20:

'Al þat he þerfore tok
Withheld he nouht (nouth) a ferþinges nok.'

From some such resemblances between the two poems it is believed that Manning may have known the Havelok, another Lincolnshire work.

Page 98, l. 19. stonte = stǭndeþ. The contracted form is less common in Ml. and Nth. than in Sth. English. 25. ȝone. The OM. demonstrative gon, WS. geon, which is only dialectal in MnE., though the root occurs in yonder, OM. gonre*.

Page 99, l. 13. squylēr. Though OF. in immediate relation to English, it is based on a Teutonic root which appears in MnE. swill, OE. swilian, 'to wash,' as at 96, 24. 23. A flamme of fȳre. A frequent attendant of supernatural manifestations, and probably connected in the mediæval mind with the pentecostal fire, Acts ii. 3. Havelok is known to be of royal birth by a similar token (83, 1–7).

VIII. THE WEST MIDLAND PROSE PSALTER

The translation of the Psalms from which our selection is taken is found in Additional MS. 17,376 of the British Museum and in MS. A 4, 4 of Trinity College, Dublin. On the basis of the former it has been edited from both MSS. by Karl Bülbring (Part I, EETS., 97), and Bülbring has been followed here. The language is almost pure West Midland, and belongs to the first half of the fourteenth century. This 'Psalter' was formerly attributed to William of Shoreham, with whose poems it occurs in the MS., but such authorship is impossible, as Shoreham's poems are Kentish and there is no trace of Kentish in this version; cf. Konrath, 'Beiträge zur Erklärung u. Textkritik des William von Shoreham' (1879). A WMl. selection is added to show how closely that dialect agreed with EMl. in most particulars.

This 'Psalter' is a close, though sometimes mistaken rendering of the Latin text, presumably the Italic version of the Scriptures. Some interesting examples of mediæval rendering and interpretation are given in the notes. For these and other peculiarities it may be compared with Hampole's earlier Nth. version (ed. by Bramley, 1884), and with the Wiclifite version (ed. by Forshall and Madden). It will be seen that the verse division is not quite the same as in our modern Bible, but the original numbering of the Psalms has been made to correspond with our own.

As already stated in the Grammatical Introduction the West Midland does not differ materially from East Midland, and this is especially true of the present selection, in its phonology. As to orthography, we may note c (ce) for s in OF. words; ck = kk (wicked, 100, 23), sc for ss (blesced, 100, 15). The one striking peculiarity of inflexion is the use of -and(e) in the present participle. Rarely, too, is = es appears in the plural of nouns.

Page 100, l. 16. sinȝēres. The word is based on the root of OE. syngian, not the sb. synne; but note the variants, sinnīȝrs (l. 23), synnēȝrs (l. 25). 19. frut. The OF. diphthong ui is usually preserved in stressed syllables, but other cases of its appearance as simple u (= iu) are well known. 20. fallwen, MS. fallen with w in later hand. As the Lat. is defluit it is not impossible that the translator thought fallen, 'fall, fail, pass away,' a good rendering. 22. as a pōudre. The connective has been omitted; cf. the Lat. sed tamquam. 24. oure Lōrd knew. The translator has taken Lat. novit for a preterit, as in other places (103, 12; 104, 10). On the other hand, cognovit is translated knoweþ at 105, 2.

Page 101, l. 2. water of fyllyng. Lat. aquam refectionis, and Dub. MS. water of fulfillyng; MnE. Bible, still waters. No doubt fyllyng is used in the sense of 'fulfilling, restoring,' and is thus a good rendering of refectio. 3. hē turned . . . fram þā fēnde. The Lat. is animam meam convertit, and the addition is probably due to some commentator. 4. For ȝif þat ich hāve gōn. Lat. nam etsi ambulavero, and the translator has mistaken the fut. perf. for the perf., or had a different text before him. 8. þōū mākest fatt. A literal rendering of the Vulg. Impinguasti in oleo caput meum. 15. innocent in hōnde. Lat. innocens manibus; Dub. MS. clene of hondes and clene of hert. 19. þē sēchand hym. The translator uses the English participle exactly as the Latin: Haec est generatio quaerentium eum, quaerentium faciem Dei Iacob. 20. princes of helle. Of helle here and of hevene in verse 9 are additions to the original in accordance with mediæval interpretation, as referring to Christ when 'harrowing hell,' and later ascending to heaven. This is based on the apocryphal 'Gospel of Nicodemus,' which was closely followed in English versions of the 'harrowing of hell' story.

Page 102, l. 9. whȳte up snowe. The Lat. reads super nivem dealbabor, and the translator has not perceived that super means 'beyond, more than,' not 'up.' 29. fram þē world. A good example of the OE., ME. use of world in sense of time, as in world without end.

Page 103, l. 2. þē kēpyng ō nyȝt. 'And the watching (kēpyng) at night that avails not (for nouȝt bēn had) shall be their years'; Lat. Custodia in nocte, quae pro nihilo habentur, eorum anni erunt. Our modern version is based on a different text. 9. þenchen as þē lob. Lat. anni nostri sicut aranea meditahuntur, and the verb has been translated þenchen, 'think,' not þinchen, 'seem.' This is natural since meditor properly meant 'to think,' and only in mediæval times acquired the passive sense 'to seem.' in þē seventi ȝēre. The Lat. dies annorum nostrorum in ipsis, septuaginta anni evidently puzzled the translator. He has left in ipsis untranslated and the syntax of the phrase is not clear. 10. þē mōre ōver hem. 'The more (years) beyond, or in addition to them,' another slavish rendering; cf. Lat. amplius eorum. 14. bē þōū turned. Untō nōū perhaps translates usque of the Vulgate with possibly some other word. 'Be thou turned until now,' though not clear, seems to be the meaning. 19. dresce her sones. 'Direct their sons,' translating literally Lat. dirige filios eorum. So the first part of the verse translates Respice in servos tuos et in opera tua, where the modern version has a different reading. 25. trappes of þē fēndes. Lat. de laqueo venantium, the latter being interpreted as 'devils,' according to the commentary attributed to Jerome, 'Breviarium in Psalmos' (Migne's 'Jerome,' VII). See my article on 'Some of Chaucer's Lines on the Monk,' 'Modern Philology,' I, 105. asper word. Lat. verbo aspero, where our version has 'noisome pestilence,' a different reading. 29. temptāciōūn waxand. Lat. a sagitta volante, familiar in our 'arrow that flieth.' With the application of the whole passage to man's contest with the devil, sagitta has been understood in the figurative sense of 'temptation.' 30. fram þē cūrs. There are various readings of the original, as often. The Vulgate has ab incursu et daemonio meridiano, the last words being regarded as a reference to Lucifer. þousand temptāciōuns. Lat. merely cadent . . . mille, and the translator assumes a connexion with the preceding and adds temptāciōūns implied in þē cūrs.

Page 104, l. 1. þē devel. The translator refers the subject of the verb, unexpressed in Latin, back to fēnde in verse 6. 17. þē which. The earliest use in our selections of this compound relative; cf. 'Chaucers Sprache,' § 254. 21. is dōand. A translation of Lat. facions. 28. streinped. The MS. is not clear, but seems to have been corrected to read as in the text.

Page 105, l. 2. faintes. The Vulgate reads figmentum. 3. þat wē. The OE. Vespasian text reads quod pulvis sumus, not quoniam as the Vulgate, and the former was probably before our translator.

IX. 'THE EARL OF TOULOUSE'

This poetic romance is found in four MSS., Cambridge Ff II, 38; Ashmole 45 and 61 of the Bodleian Library; and Thornton MS. A 5 of Lincoln Cathedral Library. The first of these, represented in our selection also, was edited by Kitson, 'Ancient English Metrical Romances,' III, 93 (1802, revised by Goldsmid, 1885), and a so-called critical edition from all the MSS. was made by Lüdtke for Zupitza's 'Sammlung englischer Denkmäler' in 1881. The poem was composed in the NEMl. district about the middle of the fourteenth century, although the MS. belongs to the fifteenth century, and therefore shows a later orthography than the time of composition.

The poem consists of 1,224 verses arranged in twelve-line stanzas, riming aabccbddbeeb. The first two verses of each triplet have four stresses, the last three stresses. Our selection begins with l. 895 and continues to the end. The earlier part tells how Earl Barnard made war upon the Emperor Diocletian, because the latter had deprived him of territory. Earl Barnard was successful, and, among other captives, takes Sir Trylabas of Turkey, whom he agrees to free if he will obtain for the earl a sight of the beautiful Empress Beulybon (Beaulyoun, Beaulilion). Trylabas arranges the meeting in the presence of others, Barnard appears as a hermit, and, on leaving, is given by the empress some coin and a ring. About the same time two knights are enamoured of the empress and, on her refusal to comply with their base wishes, contrive to make her appear guilty of adultery, of which they accuse her to the emperor. He condemns her to be burned alive, unless, as suggested in 'parliament' just before the opening of our selection, some one shall be found to support her innocence in combat with her accusers. The favour which this proposition meets is shown by the first line of the passage chosen. The story is believed to have historical foundation in the life of the Empress Judith, wife of Louis I (778–840). A romance based on this historical foundation became widely reproduced in Spain, Italy, France and other countries; see Lüdtke's excellent Introduction, 61 f. The immediate source of the English poem, the 'Lay of Bretayne,' mentioned in the last stanza, is unknown.

As already noted the orthography is late. For example, ōū (ōw̄) is always used for long ū, th for earlier þ, ght often for ȝt, and wh for OE. hw. On the other hand, sch for sh still prevails. Besides, y is used with great frequency for i, both alone and in the diphthongs ai, ei, and occasionally for e in unstressed syllables. The doubling of long vowels is also common.

Page 105, l. 18. hē spake. The 'olde knyght' who had proposed the trial by combat to decide the guilt of the empress. 24. be sęę and be sōnde. An alliterative expression for the whole world, quite common in Middle English; cf. 161, 25.

Page 106, l. 14. can – gan. This weak form with voiceless initial is more common in Nth. English.

Page 107, l. 4. Sō mōte thōū thē. 'So may thou prosper,' that is, 'as you hope to prosper.' 27. māke a vowe. The last two words represent OF. avou, 'vow,' but they became separated so as to suggest 'a vow' as here. We still say make avowal, and an avowal.

Page 108, l. 24. mās. Another form which suggests the Nth. dialect or a district near it. 29. When thē abbot. The shortness of the verse suggests an omission, as of did after abbot; cf. Ashmole MS. 45.

Page 114, l. 9. Soche wōrdes. 'I advise [that] thou shouldest alter such words.' Wǫnde is subjunctive preterit of desire, from wīnde(n). Note the preterit in a clause of unreality; cf. Introd. § 207. 10. Anǭne in hāste. Note the absence of the verb in the clause as representing the abrupt manner of address.

Page 116, l. 4. chyldyr fyftēne. So Havelok and Goldborough have fifteen children, all kings and queens. 7–8. geste cronyclyd is . . . callyd ywis. Some change is necessary, as shown by footnote readings, and I have adopted that of Lüdtke.

X. GILD OF THE HOLY TRINITY AND OF SAINT WILLIAM OF NORWICH

This selection is from a MS. in the Public Record Office, London, Bundle CCCX 116, as edited by Lucy Toulmin Smith in 'English Gilds' (EETS., 40), p. 29. The 'Return' was made in January 1389, and the language is the East Midland of Norfolk, the descendant of East Anglian of Old English times. These 'Returns' concerning the gilds had been ordered by a Parliament held at Canterbury in 1388. The extract is an account of the formation of the gild and the statutes under which the brotherhood was constituted. It is preceded in the MS. by a recital, in Latin, of the king's writ to the sheriff of Norfolk, and followed by two Latin sentences saying that no other statute had been established, and that the property of the gild consisted of four pounds, four shillings, 'et non plus nec minus.' The whole is endorsed 'Fraternitas Sancte Trinitatis ac beati Willelmi Innocentis et martiris in Norwico.' It is similar to other 'Returns,' and is chosen as a prose piece of sufficient length to represent one part of the EMl. dialect.

Few peculiarities of language need be mentioned. Th now interchanges with þ, written with open top and resembling y. Qw = OE. hw occurs as in Ml. occasionally (cf. 'Genesis and Exodus'), in Nth. commonly. For a special treatment of the language see Schultz, 'Die Sprache der English Gilds' (1891).

Page 116, l. 13. In þē nāme. This is immediately preceded by the Latin word Constitutiones. 15. Seynt William. For the account of his martyrdom see the passage in the 'Chronicle' at 4, 28. Note the modern form of the name as compared with Willelm of the 'Chronicle.' 18. gylde. The form of this word with initial guttural stop is not English, since OM. gēld, WS. gield, became Ml. yēld, Sth. yild or yīld respectively, and the Ml. form would have become MnE. yield; cf. the corresponding verb, the sb. yield applied to crops, and Chaucer's yeldhalle (MSS. yeldehalle, yeldhalle, yeldehall, yildehalle). The ME. form with guttural stop must therefore show external influence, probably that of ON. gildi; cf. MDu. ghilde. 20. systeren. Note the extension of the OE. weak plural ending under the influence of constant association with bretheren. 21. upen here pōwēr. 'According to their power, or ability.' This meaning does not seem to belong to OE. uppan, but is easily derived from it. 23. þē fēst of Seynt Pēter and Powel. That is June 29. The Sunday after is then the gyldeday of 117, 21 f.

Page 117, l. 2. tō. This form of OE. twā, ME. twō, but with loss of w, is exactly parallel to sē from OE. swā, though I have assumed close ō in tō owing to a later disappearance of w. 14. þē aldermannes wyl. The alderman, a master or president of the gild, was regularly chosen each year on the gildday, as indicated at l. 30. Other 'Returns' speak of wardens who have charge of the property. 15. at þē cumpany. Note the genitive without ending, no doubt as the last word of the clause. 18. sāve þē kynge hys ryhte. 'Preserve (save) to the king his right,' probably not 'Preserve the king's right.' 27. anȳ. The MS. ony may indicate ǭnȳ, but the prevailing short a seems to show that this o is short also. leyn it doun. Dependent upon schal above, which would be repeated in MnE. usage.

Page 118, l. 7. But if it bē. The gild laid great stress upon character, and every member was in some sense responsible for every other. 24. at here comōun cost. 'At the cost of them all, or in common'; cf. Chaucer's well-known at our aller cost, Prol. to 'Cant. Tales,' I, 799.

XI. JOHN MYRC'S 'INSTRUCTIONS FOR PARISH PRIESTS'

These 'Instructions' are preserved in three MSS., Cotton Claudius A II in the British Museum, and Douce MSS. 60,103 in the Bodleian. The first and best was edited by Peacock for the Early English Text Society, 31 (1868), and from this have been selected ll. 1–76 and 234–371. The writer was a canon of Lilleshall, Shropshire, and is supposed to have written the work about 1400. The extract therefore represents WMl. of that time, though the MS. is of the early fifteenth century.

The title gives a good idea of the general character of the work. A note at the end tells us that it was translated from Latin, but its source is not definitely known. It is similar to many other mediæval treatises, the prior of Mirc's own house having written a more complete 'Manuale Sacerdotis.'

The language will present few difficulties after the previous selections have been read. We meet for the first time uy for OE. ȳ, Ml. ȳ (ī), Sth. ǖ.

Page 119, l. 10. dawe. Really a new singular based on the plural dawes, OE. dagas, and preserved in only a few phrases. 11. bōth. Note the Sth. plural of the verb, as occasionally; cf. the Ml. plurals fallen (l. 8), sēn (l. 9), fāren (l. 10).

Page 120, l. 14. serve God tō pay. 'Serve God to his pleasure.' 23. Cuttede clǭthes and pyked schōne. For the first we should say 'slashed,' that is, with long narrow openings to show the rich lining beneath. The shoes called pyked were long and pointed ones, used first in the reign of William Rufus, and often prohibited to the clergy by local councils. 27. honest clǭthes. Note the old meaning of honest, 'honourable, suitable, according to law and custom.' 28. Baselard. A short sword much worn in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, but not allowed to priests. They often failed to obey the prohibition, as shown by the following lines quoted by Peacock from the 'Plowman's Tale':

> 'Bucklers brode and swerdes long
> Daudrike with baselardes kene,
> Such toles about her necke they hong:
> With Antichrist soche priestes been.'

Cf. also 'Piers Plowman,' III B, 303. 30. thȳ ordere. Mirc's order was a branch of the canons regular of St. Austin, taking its name from the city of Arras, where they were first established. The branch had been transplanted to England by Richard de Belmeis about 1145.

Page 121, l. 25. Alsō thōw. The passage omitted relates to shriving of women, marriage and childbirth, and is of less general interest than that which follows. 30. ischryve. The retention of the OE. prefix ge as i is distinctly Sth., and is probably here indicative of Sth. influence, though it occasionally occurs in Ml., when it cannot certainly be attributed to Sth. influence. 32. asterday. A natural shortening of OE. ēasterdæg, but usually resisted by the influence of the uncompounded ēaster, 'Easter,' so that the two agree in MnE.

Page 122, l. 10. but wȳn and water. Peacock says: 'After communion it was the custom for the laity to drink unconsecrated wine, to assist them in swallowing the eucharistic wafer.' At this time it was not customary to give the cup to the laity. 32. Knēlynge dōun. Peacock notes this as evidence that there were no pews or benches in the churches.

Page 123, l. 11. thē belle. The so-called sanctus bell (sance-, sancebell) hung in mediæval churches, says Peacock, on the east gable of the nave outside the church. It was rung to permit those not present to join in the devotion. A hand-bell was also sometimes used, as to-day in Catholic churches. All these were ordered to 'be utterly defaced, rent and abolished' in 1576.

Page 124, l. 10. As Seynt Austyn. Peacock says not in St. Augustine's writings, though possibly in some work once attributed to him. 25. seyntwarȳ. The reading of Douce MSS. chirchhay, 'churchyard,' restores the rime, and is no doubt correct. In explanation of the MS. reading Peacock says: 'In mediæval documents belonging to this country (England) sanctuarium and its equivalents in English almost always mean churchyard.' As bearing this out cf. seyntwarȳ (125, 2), where the Douce MSS. have chyrchyerd, very likely the correct sense here also. 27. Sōnge and crȳ. Peacock mentions that the Douce MS. 103 has a note in a somewhat later hand, which reads: 'danseynge, cotteyng, bollyng, tenessyng, handball, football, stoilball, and all manner other games out cherchyerd.' 29. Castynge of axtrē. The axletree was sometimes used instead of the bar or the stone; cf. Strutt's 'Sports and Pastimes of the Middle Ages,' p. 140. 31. Bal and bāres. The former may be one of several games of ball. The latter is Base or Bars, or Prisoner's bars, the name being due to the practice of staking out the 'base.' Cf. for both Strutt, as above.

Page 125, l. 1. Courte hōldynge. Peacock notes that the use of churches and churchyards for secular purposes was not uncommon, citing local histories for particular instances. 14. Everȳ mon. No doubt ēche, occurring in one of the Douce MSS., is the correct reading. 23. Wychecrafte. In the service of excommunication, given in Douce MS. 60, reference is especially made to witchcraft. telynge. Cf. 'Ancren Riwle' (ed. Morton), p. 208: 'Sigaldren and false teolunges, levunge on ore and of swefnes, and alle wicchecreftes . . . nis hit þe spece of prude þet ich cleopede presumciun?' Telynge is connected with OE. tilian, 'to strive, labour,' and may be equivalent to ME. experiment, 'sorcery,' as in a passage in Douce MS. 60: 'All þat maken experimentes or wichecrafte or charmes.' Cf. also 145, 11.

PART II

THE DIALECTS OF THE NORTH, THE SOUTH, AND THE CITY OF LONDON

This Part is designed to illustrate the Northern and Southern dialects, and London English as it gradually changed from Southern to Midland. Northern is placed first, as most closely allied to Midland, and examples are here given of Northern English in the more distinctive sense, as well as of Middle Scotch which is based upon it. As there are few available selections until the end of the thirteenth century, no division of 'Early' Northern need be made.

I. PROLOGUE TO THE 'CURSOR MUNDI'

The 'Cursor Mundi' is preserved in various MSS., of which Hupe (EETS., 99, p. 62*; 101, p. 113*) describes no less than ten. Four of these, Cotton Vesp. A III of the British Museum, Fairfax 14 of the Bodleian, Göttingen MS. Theol. 107 r at the University of Göttingen, and Trinity College MS. R3, 8 at Cambridge, were edited by Morris for the 'Early English Text Society' (57, 59, 62, 66, 68, 99, 101). The purest of these completer texts is the Cotton above, of which our selection includes lines 1 to 270. The poem was written about 1300 (Hupe thinks as early as the last half of the thirteenth century) in a region placed by Murray as near Durham, and by Hupe in North Lancashire, owing to forms that suggest Ml. influence, as the words with $\bar{e}$ instead of Nth. $\bar{a}$, OE. $\bar{a}$. These indicate that the MS., if not the author, belongs to a region affected by the Ml. change. No author is known, but Hupe argues for a certain John of Lindberghe, whose name appears in the Göttingen MS., though usually assumed to be that of a scribe.

The 'Cursor Mundi' is a poetical history of the Hebrew and Christian world based on various sources, the Scriptures, the 'Historia Scholastica' of Petrus Comestor, the apocryphal books of the New Testament, and others; see Hœnsch's 'Inquiry into the Sources,' EETS., 99, p. 1*. Some notes to our selection from the ME. 'Genesis and Exodus' show the common basis of the two, but the 'Cursor Mundi' is much fuller in all respects. Especially are the legendary portions interesting, as reflecting the credulous character of the mediæval mind. The metre, as will be seen, is the common rimed couplet of four stresses.

As to language, the mixture of Ml. $\bar{e}$ with Nth. $\bar{a}$ from OE. $\bar{a}$ has been mentioned. Otherwise the vowel phonology is simple. Among the peculiarities of consonants are the use of s in unstressed syllables for OE sc, as Inglis, Ml. Englisch (127, 6); suld, Ml. schuld, schold (129, 3); sc = sh, as in scaw (130, 1); qu for OE. hw, as sometimes in Ml.; th beside þ; ght for ȝt regularly.

Page 126, l. 3. Alisaundur. The widespread romances relating to most of these heroes are well known, as those of Alexander, Brutus, Arthur, Charlemagne (Charles King, l. 15), Tristrem (l. 17), Amadas (127, 2). 6. lēsis. The form is clearly pres. pl., but perhaps we should read lęs, preterit with thousand as a collective sing. On the other hand, the only pret. form recorded by Kellner in his excellent glossary is lest, 'lost.' The pres. pl. could be explained as used in vivid narration. 9. sǭ. Note this among many examples of strict Ml. forms, beside those of the North. 13. Wawān, Cai. More commonly Gawain, Kay, as in Malory's 'Morte D'Arthur.' ōþer stābell. 'Other brave ones.' 17. Ysote. Hupe, in his critical text, changes to Ysoud, spoiling the rime in both vowel and consonant. With so many final d's becoming t's it is not strange that this name should have suffered the same alteration.

Page 127, l. 1. Ioneck . . . Ysambrāse. The first is one of the principal characters in the French romance 'Yonec.' The second is the subject of a romance in 'Thornton Romances,' p. 88. 2. Amadāse. The romance of Sir Amadace is found in Robson's 'Three Metrical Romances,' Camden Society (1842), based on the OF. romance of 'Idoine and Amadas.' 6. Inglis. The regular Nth. form of the adjective and substantive. Note change of e to i before the nasal as in the MnE. form, though we still write E. 10. draws. The MS. form draghus is common in the Lancashire dialect (cf. drayȝ in 'Sir Gawain and the Green Knight,' l. 1,031), but a monosyllabic form is necessary for the metre. 15. scilwīs sē. Hupe adopts ilk wiis for scilwīs, considering the latter a mistake for slīwis, but the change is wholly unnecessary. Scilwis is used substantively, and the line means 'but by the fruit may wise (men) see.' 25. tās. Both tās and mās for tākes and mākes are common in Nth.

Page 128, l. 7. chaunge of hert. The reading of Gött. and Trin. MSS., while Fairfax has a different expression, or elles of hert. 9. at bē. Note the Nth. use of at with the infinitive for Ml. and Sth. tō. Modern English has a contraction of the Nth. form in ado = to do. 10. Frǭ hir schalt þōu. The reference is to folȳ, vanitē of l. 3. 16. hē forwith bedd. The MS. has he hym forwit (= forwith), but no rime word. The other MSS. vary greatly. I take bedd as a shortened form of będ, 'offered, announced, threatened,' and the meaning of the passage to be, beginning with l. 13: 'Ere he shall be brought down so violently he knows not whither to turn, until his love has led him to such reward as he before announced.' 17–18. mere . . . were. The other texts have let (lett), 'hindrance,' and this, together with the rime, suggests a noun not recorded for OE. but connected with OAng. merran, WS. mierran, 'hinder, mar.' Mere would thus represent OAng. merre, which occurs in Trin. MS. 24,802. The rime with were = werre, 'worse,' would then be perfect. Kaluza, in his glossary, translates 'harm, trouble' without explanation. 23. þef. The OE. guttural spirant h (g) has become the labio-dental spirant f, as in MnE. laugh, cough, tough, and a few others. 32. þē love bēs never gān. 'The love (that shall) be never gone,' that is, 'shall never perish.'

Page 129, l. 3. matēr tāke. Matēr added by Morris from the other MSS. 7. Quat bōte is. Morris would insert hit, 'it,' after is, as in Trin. MS., but bōte may be disyllabic and the line complete. 9. werd, MS. warld. The MS. reading must be a scribal alteration, as shown by the rime and the reading of the other MSS. 19. lavedī . . . lḛvedīs. Double forms of the word appear in two of the four MSS.

Page 130, l. 1. scaw. Such a form beside schew (l. 5) indicates scribal alteration or that both forms were found in the dialect of the poet. 10. hāve in tāle. 'Have in tale,' that is, 'relate, be able to tell.' 21. Oxspring. The other MSS. have ospringe (hospring), indicating that x in the word probably represents s. 26. Ēsaū. The word is regularly trisyllabic in the poem, as in Lat. and OF. 29–30. Mōysēs . . . chḛs. The same rime occurs once in 'Genesis and Exodus,' though Mōysēs usually rimes with close ē.

Page 131, l. 7. redd yuu. Reddynn of Morris is impossible, and the MS. must have been misunderstood. 20. þat Jēsus did. The account is based upon the apocryphal 'Childhood of Jesus,' so literally accepted in the middle ages.

Page 132, l. 6. þat. 'To whom.' Without change of form þat is nom. dat. or accus., though when dat. or accus. a preposition-adverb often follows the verb. 12. Lōrde fēte. All the other MSS. have a genitive in es (is). On the other hand, the genitive without ending is common in Nth. English. Cf. lḛvedī (133, 7). 23. unschill. Morris notes as equivalent to unscill, that is, sch – sc. 26. onstad and sey. Hupe reads onstand and sey. But a preterit stad appears in rime with badd, 'bade,' at l. 5,541, as well as a past participle stad (staddi) in several places. These indicate that onstad is probably correct, based on ON. steȝa-staddi. The line means 'many a man was present and saw.' 31. Hōw ōur Lḛvedī ēndid. The 'assumption' of the Virgin, believed to have occurred on August 15, and still celebrated in some countries.

Page 133, l. 4. þē drērī days fivetēn. A full account of these days occurs in the selection from 'Metrical Homilies,' beginning on p. 148. 7. ōure Lḛvedī murnand mōde. This theme was often treated by mediæval poets, and frequently in English with such titles as 'Compassio Mariae,' 'Lament of Mary,' &c. In the 'Cursor Mundi' it is found at l. 23,945. 14. er. Cf. note on 9. 2. The form preserves the original vowel of the root, which has become a in later English under the influence of r. 23. Intō Inglis tong. The passage is interesting as showing the national spirit which produced a literature for Englishmen, notwithstanding the period of French influence following the Conquest, and the dominance of Latin as the language of learning.

Page 134, ll. 13 14. tent . . . amend. The rime was probably perfect with t in both words, as final d so often became t in Nth. Cf. the past participles in et (it) for ed (id) in Burns. 15. Ful il hā þai. Morris reads il-ha[yl], 'ill luck,' and Hupe follows him. But surely our text is complete and makes admirable sense, while with the reading of Morris another verb must be supplied. 17. sum wē til heild. 'As we incline to.' 18. acōuntes, MS. armites. The MS. reading seems impossible if the word means 'hermits.' Acōuntes is from Fairfax MS.

II. THE DEATH OF SAINT ANDREW

The story of Saint Andrew, of which this selection forms a part, belongs to the Northern collection of legends found in various MSS.; see Horstmann, 'Altenglische Legenden,' Neue Folge, p. lx. That from which this is taken is Harl. 4,196 of the British Museum. Horstmann believed the collection was made in the diocese of Durham in the last quarter of the thirteenth century, though the MS. is of the fourteenth. The prevalence of Midland forms, however, indicates a region nearer the border of the Midland district; cf. Retzlaff, 'Untersuchungen über den nordenglischen Legendencyclus' (1888). The collection bears the marks of having been written by a single author, but nothing is known of him.

The legend of St. Andrew first appears in Old English times in the poem 'Andreas' of the eighth century, and in a prose version of the tenth century. Both these relate the story of Andrew's rescue of Matthew, but give no account of his death. The latter is told in the 'Acts and Martyrdom of Andrew'; see the translation in 'Ante-Nicene Fathers,' VIII, 511.

Page 135, l. 1. Saint Andrew. The story of Andrew, the first in the collection, is preceded by four introductory couplets, one of which tells us:

'Out of Latyn þus er þai draune,
Omang laud men for to be knaune.'

3. in sēre cuntrē. Tradition assigns Andrew's labours to Scythia, Greece, and Thrace, his martyrdom as here related to Petrae in Achaia. 5. sō. Note the Ml. form as frequently. Only in rimes have these been replaced by those of strict Nth. English. 8. Ēgēas. Called proconsul of Achaia in 'Acts and Martyrdom of Andrew.' His wife (143, 7) is called Maximilla. 18. warlaus. Applied to the 'fals goddes' of l. 10, who were regarded as devils and often so called.

Page 136, l. 8. þīr. An ON. form of the plural demonstrative pronoun. 9. suth. OE. ō shows change to u = iu (iu) as in Scotch gude, 'good.' In this text the change is only partially indicated, and perhaps is due wholly to the scribe of the later MS. 23. cros. Kluge ('Eng. Etymol.,' 1898) explains this form beside crois, OF. crois, as borrowed from OIr. cross. 29. put, MS. putted. The dissyllabic form makes the line too long, and I assume the unchanged preterit, occurring in Tib. MS. E VII and often in 'Cursor Mundi.'

Page 137, ll. 15-16. āne . . . tāne. That ā is correct in both words is shown by the fact that tāne = taken by contraction, and so has a vowel which never became ME. ō. The MS. forms with ō must therefore be purely scribal in origin. 28. tīte. This adverb, of ON. origin, is still preserved in MnE. tight, with incorrect gh, which has been wrongly supposed to have come from OE. þiht; cf. 'run as tight as you can.'

Page 138, l. 8. vouche it sāve. From this phrase, with object after the adjective, has sprung our anomalous compound vouchsafe. 19. hēnd. Note this ON. plural, used beside the English plural handes. Probably hēnd was associated in the folk mind with mutation plurals like men. 30. hē suld hānget. The pronoun necessary to the sense is from Tib. MS. E VII. Hānget is the first in our selections of the common Nth. past participle in et (it) for Ml. Sth. ed (id).

Page 140, l. 13. Tō þē turmentoūrs. Evidently in imitation of the taking of Christ's clothes at the crucifixion. 29. hāng. This preterit form is common in Nth., as in 'Cursor Mundi' for example. It is probably a modification, by analogy of the present, of the old reduplicated preterit hēng. Beside this preterit, only the weak past participle hānged (hānget) seems to occur.

Page 141, l. 17. puple. The u of this word is one of the numerous forms of OF. ue. The AN. monophthong ē has become the standard modern form, but pople, puple and other forms occur in ME. Note also the genitive without ending.

III. TREATISES OF RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE

The selections from the writings of Richard Rolle are from Thornton MS. A I, 17, preserved in the Library of Lincoln Cathedral. They have been edited by Perry (EETS., 20), by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' II, 120), and by Horstmann ('Richard Rolle and his Followers,' I, 184). Hampole, where Rolle lived as a hermit, and from which he takes his name, is near Doncaster in South Yorkshire. As the Thornton MS. was written about 1330–40 (Rolle died in 1349), these treatises represent the Northern dialect of the first half of the fourteenth century.

Rolle was a prolific writer of both prose and verse, Latin and English. Some of his most important works in English are the 'Prick of Conscience' and the 'Mirror of Life' in verse, and a translation and exposition of the Psalms in prose. The extracts give a good example of the religious character of all his writings, most of which are tinctured by the asceticism he exemplified in his life.

As to language Rolle's Treatises are pure Northern, for example, in the appearance of ā for OE. ā with no mixture of Ml. ǭ.

Page 143, l. 23. thrē kȳndis. Cf. Pliny's 'Natural Hist.,' XI, 10, on which this is based. 26. fēte, MS. fette. The MS. form perhaps indicates shortening of the vowel; cf. fotte = fōt beside fette = fēt in 'Cursor Mundi.'

Page 144, l. 10. Aristotill sais. The reference is to the so-called 'Historia Animalium,' IX, 40. 14. kane hālde in þē ordyre of lufe ynesche. The MS. lacks in and Mätzner supplies of instead, placing it after ynesche, but without improving the sense of the passage. Perry in his edition solved the difficulty by translating ynesche as 'towards,' a wholly impossible rendering. The meaning seems to be, 'For there are many that can never hold in the condition (ordyre) of tender love their friends,' &c. For lufe ynesche cf. hnesce lufu in the Alfredian 'Past. Care,' 17, 11. 19. wormes. Horstmann alters to wormed = wermod, 'wormwood,' but the change is too violent and quite unnecessary. 'Worms' was often used figuratively for that corruption characteristic of the devil's working. Besides, though this is not conclusive, the alteration of OE. wermod toward wormwood does not appear until the fifteenth century. 24. Arystotill sais. Cf. 'Hist. Anim.,' IX, 7 and 8.

Page 145, l. 4. strucyo or stork. As Mätzner points out, Rolle has confused the ostrich and the stork, the Latin name being the same for both. 12. mawmetrȳse. Mätzner assumes this as a second form of maumetrīe, but the latter was used for 'idol' as well as 'idolatry,' and this seems merely a plural in the latter sense. Perhaps Rolle had in mind the deos alienos of the Vulgate. thē wylke. Note the voiced initial w, instead of the unvoiced hw (qu) of N.h.; cf. þē whilke (l. 14). 27. dispȳses, MS. dispyse. Mätzner's alteration is adopted on account of the syntax. Horstmann retains the MS. reading without explanation.

Page 146, l. 1. wondȝs. For o for u (older ū) in such words cf. Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Gram.,' § 125 b, and Heuser, 'Eng. St.,' XXVII, 353. 6. rescheyves. The writing with sch must be assumed to represent s, as in some other Nth. forms. 8. āthes brēkynge; of new prēchynge. The punctuation of this passage has met with curious treatment by different editors. Without illustrating these at length, I understand there are three ways of taking the name of God in vain, false swearing, vain preaching, and prayer without the spirit. The difficulty is that Rolle, forgetting the exact connexion, has introduced the three clauses in three different ways. 13. ill styrringes. 'Evil passions.' Even in Old English the word had acquired this metaphorical sense as applied to the mind, and it is so used several times by Rolle, as well as by other writers. 14. þī halȳdaye. Mätzner suggests that þī should be þē, 'the.' But the text of John Gaytryge's sermon, which quotes Rolle, shows that the commandment is given a direct and personal application, and the MS. is therefore correct. 15. sesse. This is OF. cesser in its exact form, while beside it is found ME. cēse(n), MnE. cease. 16. sithen, specialī. This second 'manner' is omitted in Thornton MS., but is supplied from Arundel MS. of John Gaytryge's sermon, quoting Rolle. 31. may wyne. Perry wholly misunderstood the passage, and altered it. It is complete as it stands: 'That they may win that (which) God promised to such children, that is land of light.'

Page 147, l. 2. slaa = slā. The usual Anglian form of original slahan, WS. slēan. 10. oys. A form peculiar to the Nth. dialect; cf. Jameson's 'Scottish Dict.' 24. neghtbōur. The common occurrence of this form with excrescent t proves that it is a natural development in Nth.; it is still found in Scotch.

IV. A METRICAL HOMILY—THE SIGNS OF THE DOOM

The 'Metrical Homily' here chosen is from a MS. preserved in the Library of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons at Edinburgh, though also found in at least five different MSS. in Cambridge, Oxford, and London. A portion of this MS. was edited by John Small in 1862, and short extracts are given by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 278) and Morris ('Specimens,' II, 83). The collection was made about 1330—where is not known—and thus represents the Northern dialect of the first half of the fourteenth century.

The Homilies, of which this is one, became an important feature of literature, especially in the North. They consist of a paraphrase of the Scripture for the day, a homily interpreting it, and a legend or tale illustrating the subject. Gradually there grew up a series of these poetical homilies connected with the gospel story, as in the 'Ormulum,' or with the Scripture lessons assigned by the church, as in the collection from which our extract is taken. These followed the ecclesiastical year, beginning with Advent, our selection being that for the second Sunday in Advent. The metre is the common rimed couplet of four stresses.

Page 148, l. 1. Tōday. The second Sunday in Advent, the gospel for which is Luke xxi. 25. The writing of Louk for Luk indicates a true long ū, as sometimes in Nth.; cf. Behrens, 'Franz. Sprache in England,' p. 118, 11. bēs rędnes. Based on Matt. xxiv. 29, probably associated with Joel ii. 10, 31; iii. 15, the second of which mentions that the sun shall be turned into blood. Cf. 150, 20–24. 13. For mihtī gāstes. The Vulgate has nam virtutes coelorum movebuntur, translated in our version 'the powers of the heaven shall be shaken.' The mediæval poet has taken virtutes to refer to one of the orders of angels, the 'virtues' of Milton's 'Par. Lost,' V, 772. 26. froit. An occasional form of OF. fruit; cf. Behrens, 'Franz. Sprache in England,' p. 159.

Page 149, l. 7. Als quā sai. 'As any one may say.' The two lines are the poet's explanation, Christ's words ending with l. 6. The next lines seem to be put in direct form, though not based on any words of Christ. 9. Quen þis werld. Cf. note on 77, 6. 12. For mī kinrīc. No doubt based on Luke i. 33. 15. þē maister. The reference is not clear, unless intended for Jerome, mentioned at 151, 13. 23. Kinrīc sal. See Luke xxi. 10; Matt. xxiv. 8. 27. sal bāld bāret. Probably the true reading should be bālde, the adv., 'quickly.'

Page 150, ll. 11–12. bāret . . . mętt. Perhaps met is short here, as indicated by such spellings as mett in other Nth. texts. 20. As sais Jōēl. In three passages Joel mentions such signs, ch. ii. 10, 31 and iii. 15.

Page 151, l. 13. Sain Jerōm telles. These 'signs of the doom,' attributed to Jerome, are not found in his works as printed, and probably belong to some work now lost. Jerome is said to have found them in a Hebrew MS., as in 'Cursor Mundi,' I, 22, 441:

'Als Jeromme that well man trowes
Telles he fand in the bok of Juwis.'

Page 152, l. 24. And cum. This line is followed by thirty-three Latin verses on the signs, with the rubric: Isti versus omittantur a lectore quando legit Anglicum coram laycis.

Page 154, l. 1. A blak munk. That is, one who wore a black habit, as a Benedictine; cf. reference to 'Rule of Saint Benet' (155, 24). A similar tale is told by Roger Wendover in his 'Chronicle' under the year 1072. 8. Faiþful frēndes. The MS. clearly needs emendation, and the Camb. MS. seems to suggest the proper correction. 13–14. felid . . . telld. The rime is no doubt monosyllabic, with shortening of the vowel of fēld (⟨ fēlde), as in weak preterits of the first class.

V. THE SONGS OF LAWRENCE MINOT

The 'Songs of Minot,' preserved in a single MS., Cotton Galba E IX of the British Museum, have been frequently edited. They are found in Ritson's 'Poems on Interesting Events in the Reign of Edward III' (1795, 1825), Wright's 'Political Poems' (1859), 'Quellen und Forschungen,' 52 (Scholle, 1884), and in Hall's 'Poems of Lawrence Minot' (1887). Extracts occur in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 320), Morris ('Specimens,' II, 126), Wülker ('Lesebuch,' I, 77). Nothing is known of the author but his name, and his probable connexion with the Minots of Yorkshire or Norfolk in the fourteenth century. The poems were clearly written at the time of the events they celebrate, so that they represent the Nth. dialect of about 1333 to 1352, somewhat modified by a Midland copyist; or possibly Minot lived on the border of the two districts and used a mixed dialect. Cf. Scholle, p. vii; Hall, p. xvii.

The 'Songs of Minot' represent the native political lyric which had been first written in England in the second half of the thirteenth century, beside Latin and Anglo-Norman poems of the same sort. The poet takes a religious-patriotic view of Edward's victories, with special emphasis of the attitude of Englishmen toward Scotchmen at this time. The poems chosen are the first three of the eleven preserved as a monument to Minot's genius. The metres of the poems are various, as indicated by the selections, and in this respect suggest the new metrical influences of the fourteenth century.

The language of Minot's poems, as already indicated, is a mixture of Northern and Midland, very likely due to a scribe. It has been especially investigated by Scholle and Hall, as by Bierbaum, 'Über Lawrence Minot und seine Lieder' (1876), and Dangel, 'Lawrence Minot's Gedichte' (1888).

Page 157, l. 9. Lithes. All but two of the poems are introduced by short couplets giving the general subject of the poem. A few of the main points of history leading up to the battle of Halidon Hill may be briefly given. Robert Bruce had gained the independence of Scotland by the treaty of Northampton (1328), but died the year after, leaving the throne to a son eight years old. Civil dissensions arising, Edward Balliol, claimant of the Scottish throne, headed an invading force of English barons who claimed estates in Scotland (1332). Edward III, who had opposed the expedition until its success in the crowning of Balliol at Scone, now obtained an acknowledgement of England's suzerainty and supported Balliol when driven from the realm. He personally appeared before Berwick, which had been garrisoned by Balliol's opponents, after Easter, 1333, and the battle chronicled resulted (July 19) from one of several unsuccessful attempts of the Scots to raise the siege. 11. trōne. The correct form of the word from OF. trone. Later, written throne in imitation of Lat. thronum, the th came to be pronounced like th from OE. þ. Cf. author, authority, apothecary. 18. dresce mȳ dēdes. Perhaps in allusion to Ps. xc. 19; cf. 103, 19. 19. In þis dāle. As in other of the 'Songs,' the first line of each stanza after the first repeats an emphatic word, sometimes a phrase, from the last line preceding. In the only departure from this (159, 9) þat forsaid toune takes the place of Berwick in l. 8. For such linking of stanzas cf. 'Pearl,' 'Aunters of Arthur,' and other poems of Northern or Northwest Midland. 20. dērne, MS. dern. Hall thinks MS. reading a mistake for derv (derve, 'terrible, injurious.' But OAng. dēorne, WS. dēorne, means 'deceitful, evil' as well as 'secret,' and I see no reason to change the word, except to add e for metrical reasons. 23. þē Franche men. This refers to a fleet of ten ships, armed and victualled by Philip VI of France (Philip Valays of 158, 29), which had been sent in aid of the Scotch besieged in Berwick, according to the French chronicler Nangis. These were defeated and the vessels destroyed by the English fleet at Dundee (1333). 26. noght worth a pēre. A great number of such expressions are common in Middle and Modern English; cf. Mätzner's 'Grammar,' II, 2, 128, and the expression at 158, 8.

Page 158, l. 2. þē bōste of Normandÿe. The French ships were armed with Norman sailors, between whom and those of the Cinque Ports there was long rivalry. This probably, rather than any traditional hatred of the Norman conquerors, accounts for the exultation over their defeat. 8. And all þaire fāre. Note development in meaning of fāre, 'journey, going,' into 'behavior, boasting,' and cf. the same change in the word gait. 26. On þē Ērle Morrē. A rising at Annan (Dec. 13, 1332), under John Randolph, Earl of Moray, and Archibald Douglas, Earl of Dunbar, had expelled Edward Balliol from the kingdom. 27. þai said. The Scotch who had been expelled from the kingdom by Balliol and his English followers. 29. Philip Valays. Note the form at 159, 21 and the MS. reading. See note to 157, 23.

Page 159, l. 7. all nāked. The stripping of the dead is illustrated by Barbour's 'Bruce,' XIII, 459 f, in describing the battle of Bannockburn:

> 'And quen þai nakit spulȝeit war
> Þat war slayne in þe battale þar,
> It wes, forsuth, a gret ferly
> Till se sammyn so fell dede ly.'

18. At Dondē. See note to 157, 23. 29. Sir Jō̄n þē Comyn. John Comyn of Badenoch, killed by Robert Bruce in the church of the Minorites at Dumfries, Feb. 10, 1306. Comyn was Balliol's nephew and heir, and at his death Bruce definitely began the struggle for independence which ended at Bannockburn. For the Scotch use of the before a surname see note in Boswell's 'Tour of the Hebrides,' Sept. 6.

Page 160, l. 1. þāre dwelled. That is, before Berwick. 3. Hē gaf gude confort. He encouraged them in a speech that lasted as long as it would take to go a mile. Examples in Mätzner ('Wörterbuch') show this to have been a common expression. On þat plaine, as Hall points out, is not appropriate to the hilly ground of the battle field, but as Minot was probably not present at the battle he uses the expression in a general sense. 13. Now for tō tell. Evidently this is not a title in the strict sense, since Minot gives no account of Bannockburn. He regarded Halidon Hill as avenging the former defeat of the English, and in this sense is to treat þē batayl of Banocburn. 17. manȳ saklēs. Hall quotes Barbour's 'Bruce,' XX, 173 f, where Bruce says:

> 'For þrou me and my warraying
> Of blud þar has beyne gret spilling
> Quhar many sakles men wes slayne.'

21. Saint Jō̄hnes toun. This is Perth, occupied and fortified by the English after defeating the Scotch at Gaskmoor, or Dupplin Moor. A church in Perth is dedicated to St. John, and this accounts for the name; cf. Froissart's use of St. Jehanstone. 27. Striflin. That is, Stirling, the Strevillyne of Barbour's 'Bruce.' Perhaps the allusion is to Wallace's most famous victory over the English, Sept. 11, 1297. The implication then is that Halidon Hill had wiped out the memory of that defeat also.

Page 161, l. 1. þē pilērs. Mätzner, Wülker, and Kölbing take this as meaning 'pillars,' either of state or boundaries of the country, but Hall is doubtless right in assuming connexion with OF. pilleur (AN. piler*?), 'robber, raider.' 6. Rughfute riveling. The riveling is a rough shoe made of raw hide tied round the ankle, and regarded as characteristic of the Scotch, who were thus called 'rough-footed.' So Skelton's 'Of the out yles the roughe foted Scottes,' I, 187. Bē̆rebag. So called because the Scotch soldier carried his own baggage and was thus enabled to move more rapidly. 8. Brughes. The MS. brig represents one pronunciation of the name; but Minot uses Bruge (Brughes, Burghes), all with u, and the last no doubt a scribal error for Brughes. The place was well known to Scotchmen in the fourteenth century. 11. bētes þē strētes. Hall thinks imitated from OF. batre les chemins, 'to riot or revel in the streets,' but the idea of revelling seems hardly appropriate, and the words may mean no more than 'go about the streets persistently.' 23. How Edward. Out of the war with Scotland came the great Hundred Years' War with France, Scotland's ally. At the beginning of 1338 Philip attacked Agen in Gascony, still claimed by England, and Edward was forced to declare war. He crossed to Antwerp (162, 30) in July, in order to negotiate with his allies the princes of the Low Countries, and Lewis of Bavaria (162, 9), the German emperor.

Page 162, l. 3. his right. The claim to France, more or less fully acknowledged by the French king himself. The war on the part of France was virtually a struggle to free all French territory from English rule, an end accomplished at the close of the Hundred Years' War in 1451. 9. þē Kaysēr Lowis of Bavēre. Louis IV, German king and Roman emperor from 1314 to 1347. Though he had been excommunicated by the pope, the electors, in the very month of Edward's departure for the continent, declared his power was derived from them and not from the church. The reception of Edward was by no means as flattering as Minot makes out. 31. māde his monē playne. Louis had made Edward vicar-general of the empire, and he was empowered to coin money to pay his German auxiliaries. Jehan le Bel says he 'coined money in great abundance at Antwerp.'

Page 163, l. 23. at Hamton. On Oct. 4, 1338, the French from fifty galleys landed at Southampton, plundered the country, and burned the town on hearing that the English were gathering to oppose them. So rapidly did the country rise that some three hundred of the French were cut off from their ships.

Page 164, l. 7. þan saw þai. The poet has reversed the order of events, for the Christopher was taken by the French before the attack on Southampton Froissart's 'Chronicle,' ch. 44). It was later recovered by Edward after the battle of the Swyn. 8. Aremouth. The word has gained an initial y in modern English, as also the river Yar, on which it is situated. 11. galays. These were long narrow boats used by the Genoese and sailors of the Mediterranean. In 1337 Philip had engaged twenty such galleys of two hundred oars from Ayton Doria of Genoa, who was present at the attack on Southampton. 12. tarettes. A large vessel like a galley, but commonly used for transport. 13. galiōtes. These were similar to the galleys, but about half the size, each carrying a crew of one hundred men. 17. Edward ōure King. Hall notes that no chronicler mentions the presence of Edward at the fight, and perhaps the poet has confused the ship Edward with the king, a suggestion of Sir Harris Nicolas in his 'History of the Navy,' II, 37. 27. put þām tō wȩ̄re. Surely Hall is wrong in suggesting that this may mean 'put the enemy in distress.' It is, as Skeat explains, 'prepared themselves for battle,' 'put themselves (in readiness) to war.' 32. withōwten hīre. Literally, 'without hire or recompense,' but idiomatically for a conquered and ignominious condition. Similarly in Minot's 'Poems,' VII, 65–66:

'Inglis men with site þam soght
And hastily quit þam þaire hire';

that is, vanquished them.

Page 165, l. 9. sen þē tīme þat God was born. Often used to emphasize a situation by referring to a long time in general. 26. with his hālȳ hand. The expression depends ultimately, doubtless, on the biblical use of the hand as a symbol of power and goodness.

VI. BARBOUR'S 'BRUCE'—THE PURSUIT OF KING ROBERT

The 'Bruce' occurs in two MSS., of which the better, so far as it is complete, is MS. G 23 in the Library of St. John's College, Cambridge. This was made the basis for the edition of Prof. Skeat for the Early English Text Society (Extra Series 12, 21, 29, 55), though the Edinburgh MS. had to be used for the first four books. The 'Bruce' has been frequently printed, as by Hart (1616), Pinkerton (1790), Jamieson (1820); see also a list of editions in Skeat's 'Introduction,' p. lxvi. Selections are found in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 371) and Morris ('Specimens,' II, 203). The poem was completed in 1378, and therefore represents Northern of the last half of the fourteenth century, except for such differences as come from a later copyist, the MS. being a little more than a century younger than the original. As Barbour was Archdeacon of Aberdeen from 1357 to his death in 1395, the Northern dialect here represented is that of the extreme North or Scottish English. Of Barbour little is certainly known. He first appears in 1357 as Archdeacon of Aberdeen, when he was granted a safeguard to study at Oxford. From the responsible position he held at the time it is inferred that he was born about 1320. He again visited England for study in 1364, and passed through it to France in 1365 and 1368. He attained further honor in his own country, held a position in the king of Scotland's household, and was granted several sums of money by the king at different times. According to Wyntoun's 'Chronicle' (about 1420), on the authority of which rests the ascription of the 'Bruce' to Barbour, he also wrote the 'Brut' and a genealogical poem called the 'Original of the Stuarts.' Two other works formerly attributed to Barbour, the 'Siege of Troy' and a collection of 'Lives of Saints,' have been shown not to belong to him.

The 'Bruce' is a national epic, valuable alike for history and literature. It consists of some 13,500 lines, and covers the years 1286 to 1335. The passage chosen is a good example of the poet's power in vivid narration. Just before the selection begins, John of Lorn had sought to track the king with a hound, and five of his men had been slain by the king and his foster-brother. The latter then retreat before Lorn's approaching company to a wood near at hand.

As already noticed the MS. is younger than the work itself by a century, and this no doubt accounts for some differences in language, or at least in orthography. For example, the Northern use of i (y) after a long vowel to indicate length becomes more common. Compare such rimes as gāine, wayn; þair, māre; agāne, vayn; and such forms as soyn, 'soon,' heir, 'here,' deill, 'deal,' in the early lines. Perfect participles ending in t instead of d are also common.

Page 166, l. 7. begōuth. Note this interesting example of analogy, formed on the model of cōuth, preterit of can. This was perhaps assisted by the constant confusion, especially in Nth., of can and gan. 9. His man. Really his foster-brother, as shown by 173, 15, and by references in Book VI of the poem. 10. Abȳde ȝhē heir. 'If you abide here'; the subjunctive in condition.

Page 167, l. 9. Jǭhn of Lōrne. John MacDougal of Lorn in Argyleshire, son of Allaster of Lorn, and descendant of Somerled, Thane of Argyle and Lord of the Isles, who fell at Renfrew in 1164. See Scott's 'Lord of the Isles' and notes thereon.

Page 168, l. 11. lēst on līf. 'Last, or remain, alive.' 27. Schir Āmēr. Sir Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke and leader of the English forces. He was a son of the half-brother of Henry III.

Page 169, l. 1. Schir Thomas Randale. Sir Thomas Randolph, Bruce's nephew, first fought with the latter until made prisoner at the battle of Methven. Then, submitting to the English, he even took part against Bruce as indicated here. Later, captured by Douglas, he was reconciled to his uncle and made Earl of Moray (Murray). He now distinguished himself by many exploits, especially the capture of Edinburgh. See note to 'Lord of the Isles,' VI, 1, and reference to his descendant John Randolph in Minot (158, 26). 9. And hǭw. An adventure narrated in Book VI, 589 f. Five of Lorn's men had overtaken Bruce and his brother, but were all slain by the two, Bruce himself killing four. 17. And hē wār bǭdyn all ēvynlȳ. 'If he were bidden or challenged (to fight) on even terms.' 19. And þē gud kyng. This adventure is told with some alterations by Scott in 'Lord of the Isles,' III, 18 f. 26. Līk tō lichtmen. Skeat explains as light-armed men; cf. light-horse.

Page 170, l. 14. bryng hym þan of daw. 'Bring him then out of day,' that is, 'kill him,' a common ME. idiom.

Page 171, l. 3. slew fyre. Skeat replaces slew of both MSS. by strake, 'struck,' on the ground that slew must have been repeated from the preceding line. On the other hand, slew fire is not uncommon (cf. the 'Bruce,' XIII, 26), and I prefer to keep the MS. reading. 10. At a fȳre. 'At a fire,' with stress on a 'one.' The line might still be improved by an extra syllable, though the cæsural pause may account for its absence. 27. worthit. A weak preterit of wurþe(n), 'be, become'; 'saw that sleep had become necessary to him.'

Page 172, l. 1. And slēpit nocht. Skeat reads And slepit nocht [full] ynkerly. [Bot gʒiffyt up oft] suddanly, supplying the bracketed words from Edin. MS. With the different punctuation I have given the line, no syntactical alteration is necessary. 6. as fōūl on twist. Supposed to be indicative of readiness for any emergency; cf. MnE. 'with one eye open' in similar connexion.

Page 173, l. 6. Nā wār. Pret. subj. 'and had [it] not been [for] the arming (armor),' &c. 18. his trist. Bruce had divided his men into small bands when hard pressed, and had appointed a rendezvous for such as should not be taken. His party alone had been followed by the hound.

Page 174, l. 29. Jāmes of Dōūglas. This Douglas, son of William who supported Wallace, had been the first to take up the cause of Bruce, and one of the most faithful. 31. at. At for þat is especially common in Nth., though no doubt found in all dialects as a reduced form of the spoken language. 32. Edward þē Bruce. The brother of Robert, fiery and headstrong. As Barbour says, thinking Scotland too small for him and his brother he tried to make himself king of Ireland, but lost his life in the attempt; cf. Book XVIII.

THE SOUTHERN DIALECT, INCLUDING KENTISH

Southern English represents several somewhat different varieties. In our selections the first three pieces are of Early Southern, in which, as in Early Midland, certain changes of Old English forms had not yet taken place. The third of these pieces belongs to Southern of the so-called Katherine group (Morsbach, 'ME. Gram.,' § 3, anm. 2), that is, shows a Southern English with Midland peculiarities. This is due to the fact that the works of this group were written in a northern part of the Southern region near to Midland. Selections VI and VII represent Kentish English, the remaining pieces Southern of the normal type.

I. THE POEMA MORALE, OR 'MORAL ODE'

This characteristic bit of mediæval moralizing exists in six MSS., Digby A 4, Egerton 613 (two versions), and Jesus Coll. I Arch. I 29 at Oxford, Lambeth MS. 487 in London, Trinity Coll. MS. B 14, 52 at Cambridge. Not all of the MSS. are complete, and of the two groups into which they fall, the versions in Digby and Trinity Coll. MSS. are Kentish rather than Southern in the more restricted sense. Of the Sth. texts those of the Egerton MSS. are, on the whole, the best, and a selection from Egerton e is here taken. The poem has been edited at various times, as by Furnivall in 'Early English Poems and Lives of Saints,' p. 22; by Morris ('Old English Homilies,' I, 159, 288, II, 220); ('Specimens,' I, 194); ('An Old English Miscellany,' p. 58); by Zupitza ('Anglia,' I, 63); ('Übungsbuch,' p. 58); by Lewin in a critical edition (1881). The poem was written about 1170 in South Hampshire or Dorsetshire, and thus represents Southern of the middle district.

The 'Moral Ode' consists of 396 long lines of seven stresses, riming in couplets. As in the 'Ormulum,' with the metre of which it has close relations, the long line is divided into two parts by a cæsural pause after the fourth stress, so that each couplet might be printed in alternate lines of four and three stresses, riming abcb. Indeed this is the original of such a stanza in MnE. poetry, and this is the second stage in the development from the unrimed lines of Orm. The lines are often irregular in number of syllables, though many irregularities may be easily explained as due to lost inflexional or other elements, or to metrical peculiarities of Middle English. In content the poem begins with a penitential portion of eighteen lines in the first person, after which the moralizing becomes more general in character, and approaches that of a sermon in verse. The selection gives a good idea of the whole.

The language of the 'Ode' shows a mixture of early and late forms to some extent; cf. ō for OE. ā in the rimes of the first couplet, but ā usually.

Besides, æ (e) appear for WS. æ, ea; ǣ, ēa for WS. ǣ, ēa, beside e = ę̄; rarely ēo (eo) are found for WS. ēo (eo), and the former sometimes for WS. ō, as in wēorle, 'word.' These are in addition to the typical Sth. ü, ǖ for WS. y̆, ȳ, though occasionally y, as in ȳlde, yfele. As to inflexion, Southern is more conservative than Midland or Northern, and therefore longer retains Old English forms; there are also typical Southern peculiarities which have been already sufficiently mentioned in the Grammatical Introduction.

Page 176, l. 1. Ich. This is the characteristic Sth. form of the pronoun with ch as in church from OE. c after a palatal vowel. Note that both other forms also occur in the selection, ic (l. 2), I (l. 4). 1–2. lǭre . . . mǭre. A later Sth. rime modifying the earlier lāre . . . māre; cf. māȝe . . . āȝe (177, 5–6) and āre . . . māre (177, 29–30). 3. habbe. The Sth. dialect, with characteristic conservatism, retains such forms in case of verbs with different consonants in infinitive and 1st pers. pres. indic. from those in the remaining forms. Thus inf. habbe(n), libbe(n), segge(n), and 1st pers. pres. indic. habbe, libbe (177, 9), segge. In the Anglian districts, on the other hand, under the influence of analogy, these have adopted the consonant of the other pres. forms, as have(n), live(n), seie(n), 'have, live, say.' Cf. Gram. Introd., § 165. ibēon. Note the characteristic Sth. prefix, a retention of OE. ge in reduced form. In this particular instance no OE. gebēon is known to literature, but it must have existed in speech at some time. 7. chilche. This difficult word, known only here, seems to have been formed from child (OE. childs* for childs f.), as OE. milts, ME. milce (milche?), is formed from mild. At least the meaning, 'childishness, puerility,' seems to fit the connexion fairly well. 21. þe wēl ne dēþ. The OE. relative particle þe was retained in Sth. much longer than in the other dialects.

Page 177, l. 6. ōðres. Note retention in early Sth. of the OE. inflexion of the adjective. 12. Manīes mannes. The line has met somewhat different interpretations, based especially on different conceptions of the words iswinch and unhōlde. Morris ('Specimens,' I, 350) translates: 'Many a man's sore trouble often hath ungracious ones, i.e. a man often receives no return for his hard work.' In 'OE. Homilies' he translates quite freely: 'many kinds of sore trouble have often the infirm.' Lewin, opposing this quite rightly, finally proposes manches Mannes sauer errungenen Gewinn haben oft die Widersacher. The sense is 'Ungracious (or hostile) ones often obtain (have) the sore labor (or gain) of many a man,' and is probably based on Ps. xxxix. 6 and Luke xii. 20. 13. dōn ā fürst. Literally, 'put in time or respite,' and so 'put off, or delay.' The phrase occurs in several forms, dō in firste ('OE. Homilies,' I, 71); dō . . . on frest ('Havelok,' l. 1,337), printed by Skeat and Holthausen onfrest. 21. of wyfe ne of childe. The imperfect rime childe . . . selde is at once suspicious, and it is not strange to find other MSS. with a different reading. The Lambeth reading of ȝefe ne of ȝelde, 'of gift nor of reward,' is probably the older form of the line. 23. wēl oft and wēl ȝelōme. A common phrase with two words for the same idea, in order to give it emphasis. 26. sē irēve. The prevalence of þē for OE. sē throws some suspicion on this expression. Digby MS. reads ne his serreve, 'nor his sheriff,' and Trin. MS. ne ne scirreve. Lewin reads ne þe scirreve.

Page 178, l. 12. And þē ðe māre. 'And the one who may do no more (may do) with his good intention as well as he that has many pieces (manke) of gold.' 14. kan māre þanc. The phrase is OE. cunnan þonc, beside witan þonc, and it has survived in Scotch con thanks. Literally, 'to know thanks,' it is equivalent to 'feel (or express) gratitude, show favor.' 'And often God feels more gratitude to those who give less to him.' 19. biđ. The plural subjects are thought of as one and so take singular verb; cf. dēð . . . ðenchet (178, 22), where the verbs agree with hwet, not with wihte, the real subject.

Page 179, l. 3. scule wē. Based on the OE. form when the verb was immediately followed by wē or gē. In Middle English it was extended to the third personal pronoun also; cf. scule hē (l. 6), but Nabbeð hī (l. 9). 8. vele. Note this first case in our Sth. selections of initial v for older f. 28. cōm tō manne. 'Came to man's estate.'

Page 180, l. 4. ðe bēot and bęat, and bīt. All texts give two verbs with initial b, indicating intentional alliteration, and Lambeth agrees with our text in its three forms biet and bit and bet. Three verbs that are possible in the place are OE. bētan, 'to amend,' bedan, ME. będe(n), 'to pray,' biddan, 'to pray, beseech.' The line then means: 'therefore he is wise who repents and prays and beseeches before the judgement.' Lewin bases his text on the Trin. MS. reading, þe bit and bizet and bet, though I cannot think with a better result in sense. The former are all contracts of the third singular present indicative. 7. Sunne lęt þē. 'Sin leaves thee and thou not it (or them), when thou art not able to do them any more.' Hī may be either sing. or pl., but is of the following clause seems to indicate that it was considered plural. Lewin alters is to hi, in order to agree with the former word. This line and the next, owing to omission and erasure, cannot be easily made out in the MS. 8. þe swā abīt. 'Who so awaits,' that is as implied in the preceding line. 14. Ne bidde nā bet. 'Should (I) not better pray to be loosed from bonds on doomesday?' Several MSS. have ich (ic) after bidde, and it has probably disappeared from our text. 20. Ūvel is. 'Evil is it to suffer seven years for seven nights' bliss.' Ūvel is must be understood with the next line also. 32. For tō ðē mūchele mūrcðe. 'For to come to the great bliss (of heaven) is happiness with certainty.'

II. ARTHUR'S LAST BATTLE—FROM LAYAMON'S 'BRUT'

Layamon's 'Brut' is preserved in two MSS. of the British Museum, Cotton Calig. A IX and Otho C XIII, from the former of which, the older, our selection is taken. Both texts were edited in 1847 by Sir Frederic Madden, and extracts are given in Matzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 21), Morris ('Specimens,' I, 64), Zupitza-Schipper ('Übungsbuch,' p. 92). The poem is the work of a priest Laȝamon (later text Lawemon), but more commonly written Layamon, son of Leovenath, of Arnley in North Worcestershire, and was composed about 1200. The language therefore represents Southern of the Western division during the last of the twelfth and beginning of the thirteenth century.

The 'Brut' consists of some 16,000 long lines (a little less than 15,000 in the later MS.), or double the number of short lines as printed by Madden. These long lines are based on the older alliterative line and show frequent alliteration, though rime and assonance are also common in binding together the two half-lines. The metrical form is thus a combination of the old alliterative line and a rimed couplet of irregular character. Compare the similar lines of the 'Bestiary.' In content the poem is a legendary history of Britain from the destruction of Troy to the year 689 A.D. It is based on the Norman Wace's 'Roman de Brut,' which in turn has its source in Geoffrey of Monmouth's 'Historia Regum Britanniae.' Our selection begins with l. 13,996 (Madden, l. 27.992). Arthur, the world conqueror, resting after the great feast on the overthrow of the emperor of Rome, is summoned home by bad news as told in the passage chosen.

The language of the poem does not greatly differ from that of the 'Moral Ode.' It shows a similar mixture of older and later forms. OE. ā still appears as ā, long and short æ are not infrequent, and eo, ēo are still preserved. The latter, ēo, sometimes appears for Sth. ę̄, OE. ē, as in węǭre, unless indeed this is for Ml. wēre with close ē. Assuming the open quality of the first element, as indicating Sth. ę̄, the e is marked open (ę̄). Some Ml. forms certainly occur, as hālden (183, 7), beside hāelden (l. 1416). Among consonants the Sth. initial v for OE. f is more common than in the 'Moral Ode.' Inflexions show the usual Sth. conservatism. A special peculiarity of Layamon is the more frequent final n of inflexional forms, either retained from an older inflexion or often added where not original; cf. Stratmann, 'Anglia,' III, 552. Examples are tīden, dsg. (181, 1); dēoren, nsg. (182, 13); cumen, pr. subj. sg. (183, 21); warīen, gpl. (184, 26), perhaps from OE. gpl. in ena. In many cases inflexional en is a retention of OE. dpl. um. The vocabulary of Layamon is full of epic phrases from OE. poetry, so full as to imply some considerable acquaintanse with OE. literature. For convenience of reference the line-numbering of Madden is always given in the notes, except of course when referring to our selection.

Page 181, l. 1. þā cōm þęr. Arthur is represented as being inne Burguine, 'in Burgundy,' when the news reaches him. āre. Note retention of inflexional forms in the pronoun, as āre = OE. ānre; þān (l. 2) = þām; hine (l. 20); āne (l. 29) f. asg.; þęre (l. 23) = þāre. 3. Mōdrędde. In setting out from England Arthur had left his kingdom in charge of Modred and Wenhavere (Guenevere), as told at l. 25,465 (Madden). 6. Swā naver. 'Yet never would he,' the young knight. Only in a supernatural manner, through the vision, does Arthur find out the truth. 17. Walwain, B text Waweyn. Better known as Gawain, nephew of Arthur and brother of Modred. 22. Wenhevēr, B text Gwenayfer. The Welsh Gwenhwyvar, Eng. Guenevere. In Layamon she is simply an extremely fair woman, whose mother was of Roman birth and relative of Cador, Earl of Cornwall. 24. tō hāelden. The MnE. form has lost final d and appears as heel, 'to incline.' Layamon's word seems to be Midland hēlden, a form which also appears in his text.

Page 182, l. 6. dēore mīne swēorde. This order of adjective and possessive is especially common in Layamon. Cf. the Elizabethan dear my lord.

Page 183, l. 20. quēn. The MS. que is probably for quē = quēn, though the commoner form in Layamon is quēne. 21. cumen. The form is pres. subj. with excrescent n so common in Layamon. Cf. þat Arður þider comen, 'that Arthur thither should come,' ll. 27,078 and 19,110 (Madden). 27. þā sæt hit. 'Then it remained all still.'

Page 184, l. 13. wæisiŏ, MS. wæisiŏ. Madden suggested the change, required by the context and alliteration. Cf. feiesiðe makeðe (l. 304) and fæiesiðe (l. 26,040), in both cases alliterating with f. Here, of course, we must assume an earlier f-f alliteration, now become f-v or v v by the regular Sth. change of initial f to v. 28. hā, MS. a. The third personal pronoun, both masc. and fem., sometimes appears as ā, hā. 32. Ā marȝen þat hit. So MS., but the correct reading is probably þā, 'when.' The B text has þo, 'when.' and Drihten. 'And the Lord had sent it (the day),' perhaps referring to its favorable character for an expedition.

Page 185, l. 3. Whitsōnd. Wissant, Pas-de-Calais, called Hwitsand in the 'Chronicle' under the year 1095. 17. Childrīche. Childric was in those days an emperor of great authority in Alemaine, as we are told at l. 20,198. Arthur had already vanquished him when he came to Britain to assist Colgrim and Baldulf, as told in the lines following that quoted above.

Page 186, l. 9. Romenel, MS. Romerel. Romney in Kent without doubt. 11. avorn on, MS. avornon. The phrase is an interesting example of the replacing of a worn-out form. Avorn is OE. on foran, the first part of which was no longer recognized in the reduced prefix a, and on was again added at the end. 26. Āngel. A king of Scotland whom Arthur had assisted to regain his kingdom. He had last led the foremost troop in the fight against 'Luces,' emperor of Rome. The name appears as Aguisel in Wace, Augusel (Angusel?) in Geoffrey of Monmouth, and is possibly Scotch Angus.

Page 187, l. 2. ȝurren þā stānes. 'The stones babbled with streams of blood.' 'Roar, resound' are too strong for ȝurren, which applied to the chattering of people, the whirring or singing of ropes when the ship met a storm; cf. garring, from the same root, at 224, 15. Such exaggerated descriptions of battle are common in Layamon, as in all early poetry. Cf. 189, 32.

Page 188, l. 1. þē fēond hine āȝe. 'May the devil take him.' 30. and hū. The B text really reads and ou ȝeo hinne ende, with place for an initial in the last word. I have assumed the lost letter to be w, and have otherwise used the forms of the A text. 31. þā hēo hire seolf. No doubt this is one of the alternatives beginning with whader, and we are to supply 'or whether' at the beginning of this line. The loss of the preceding half-line makes the connexion uncertain.

Page 189, l. 16. swā þē rein falleŏ, MS. rim falled. The change of rim to rein was suggested by Madden. Either this is a scribal error or perhaps the noun was influenced by the verb, which appears as rine—rinde in the 'Brut.' 20. Tambre. The river Tamar between Devon and Cornwall. In Malory's 'Morte D'Arthur' the great fight is by the sea near Salisbury. 21. Camelfōrd. A Camelford, ford of the Camel, still exists in the north of Cornwall, but is naturally not connected with the Tamar river. Geoffrey of Monmouth says the battle took place near the 'river Cambula,' while Wace has Camblan . . . a l'entree de Cornuaille, Tambre . . . en la terre de Cornoaille, Tamble, &c. in different MSS. 'Brut,' l. 13,659'. Confusion was easy because of the likeness between the MS. c and t, as well as by reason of the frequent interchange of l r. Once in the 'Chronicle' Camermuða is found for Tamarmuða. The reference to the sea (191, 1) would imply a situation like that of Camelford in North Cornwall, and probably Cambre for Tambre is the correct reading of the preceding line.

Page 190, l. 11. ī þare lasten. 'In the least (of the wounds),' as mentioned in the line preceding. 26. Avalūn. Geoffrey of Monmouth twice speaks of the 'island of Avalon (Avallon),' and Wace follows with en l'ile d'Avalon ('Brut,' l. 9,516). In the passage corresponding to this Wace does not say an island, and Layamon also makes no specific reference to the situation of the place, except that Arthur reaches it by sea (191, 1). See discussions of the place in 'Romania,' Oct. 1898, and 'Mod. Lang. Notes,' XIV, 47. 27. Argante. Wace and Geoffrey of Monmouth make no mention of this personage. Malory names four, three queens and the Lady of the Lake. 30. And seoððe. Wace makes mention of the tradition that Arthur should come again, and Layamon, whose more dramatic treatment is seen in several places, puts it into the mouth of Arthur himself.

Page 191, l. 7. þat wǣore. 'That immeasurable trouble should come (be) after (of) Arthur's death.'

III. 'THE LIFE OF SAINT JULIANA'

The Middle English prose 'Life of St. Juliana' is preserved in two MSS., Royal 17 A 27 of the British Museum, and Bodleian MS. 34 at Oxford. Of these the first is the purest text, and from it our selection is taken. Both MSS. were edited for the Early English Text Society by Cockayne in 1872 (EETS., 51), and extracts from both are found in Morris ('Specimens,' I, 96). The work was written about 1200, the MSS. themselves being of the first half of the thirteenth century. It belongs to the northern part of the Southern district, and has certain Midland peculiarities. The language is therefore Sth. with Ml. coloring, as explained below.

The story of St. Juliana has already been told by Cynewulf in an Old English poem (cf. Garnett, 'The Latin and Anglo-Saxon Juliana,' Publ. of Mod. Lang. Ass., XIV, 279). It also appears, later than our prose version, in a poem of long rimed couplets (EETS., 51, 81) similar to those of the 'Moral Ode,' as also in an unpublished version; cf. Horstmann, 'Altenglische Legenden,' p. xlvi f. As to the form of the present 'Life,' at once noticeable for its alliterative and rhythmical character, there is difference of opinion among scholars. Ten Brink speaks of the long alliterative line or the rhythmical alliterative prose ('Eng. Lit.,' p. 199). Einenkel undertook to prove that this work, together with the similar 'Lives' of St. Margaret (EETS., 80) and St. Katherine (EETS., 13), are in long alliterative lines. From this view Schipper dissents ('Grundriss der englischen Metrik,' p. 75), and I see no reason to print otherwise than as prose, though the alliterative and rhythmical elements will be clear to any reader. The source of the story is that found in the 'Acta Sanctorum' for Feb. 16.

The language of the 'Juliana,' like that of the prose 'Lives' of St. Katherine and St. Margaret, is a mixture of Sth. and Ml.; cf. Morsbach, 'Mittelenglische Grammatik,' § 3, anm. 2; § 9, 1. The chief Ml. peculiarities are the close instead of open ē = Goth. ē, WT. ā, as in Mercian and the non-Wessex dialects, and the preservation of the u and o mutations in many cases. In other respects the dialect is Southern, as shown especially by e for OE. æ, Ml. a, and ü, ū for OE. y, ȳ. Besides may be noted the preservation of OE. ā, as in the preceding early Sth. selections, and the diphthongs eo, ēo, ēa (ea). The long diphthong ēa, used for OE. ēa or ǣ and certainly a mere graphic representation of ME. ę̄, has been marked ę̄a. No voicing of initial f, þ, and s is indicated by the orthography, but unvoicing of final d is common.

Page 191, l. 16. In ūre. This paragraph is preceded by the rubric: Her cumseð þe vie of seinte iuliane and telleð of liſſade hire, 'Here commenceth the life of Saint Juliana, and (it) telleth of her manner of life.' Feader. The usual form is the Sth. feder = Ml. fader. ant. The usual form in this 'Life,' as in the others of the group, so that the sign for and is regularly expanded ant. 23. Nichomēdes burh. Nichomedia in Asia Minor, founded by Nichomedes I. In the OE. 'Juliana' it appears as Commedia. 25. of þē hę̄þene mę̄st. 'Greatest of the heathen.' Not in the Latin, and Bodl. MS. has a different reading: 'Affrican hehte, þe heande ⁊ heascede mest men þe weren cristene.' Egge ('Mod. Lang. Notes,' I, 138) connects with following clause, but I think not rightly. 26. dērflīche hē drōh, MS. derfliche droh. The hē, subject of drōh, was probably lost by scribal confusion with he of the preceding word.

Page 192, l. 3. Maximian. Really Galerius Valerius Maximinus, made emperor in 308, and one of six to claim the title at that time. He renewed the persecution of the Christians after Galerius had published an edict of toleration, but was soon overthrown by Licinius and died in 314. Here he seems to have been confused with Maximian, contemporary emperor of the West, as in the OE. poem. Perhaps this is due to the frequent confusion of the Eastern and Western Roman empires, as shown also in the next note. 4. Rōme. Of course Constantinople, or New Rome, in this place. mawmets, MS. maumez. The final z is unquestionably equivalent to ts, and I have not hesitated to expand it as if it were an abbreviation; cf. 195, 22 and note on 194, 25. 13. ihōndsald. 'Betrothed wholly against her will.' 24. as me þā luvede. 'As they (me) then loved,' that is, as was the custom of the time. intō cure þet, MS. ⁊. 'Into a chariot that the powerful rode in, or in which,' &c. Cockayne and Morris retain the MS. and, reading 'and ride into the kingdom.' I have assumed a phrase descriptive of the chariot, as riche 'kingdom' seems inappropriate to a rēve. The Bodl. MS. has another descriptive phrase, i cure up of fowr hweoles, 'up into a chariot of four wheels.' 30. bālde hire seolven. As it stands, bālde must be a past participle modifying Juliane. The Bodl. MS. has a sign for and before sende, making bālde and sende correlative, and this may be the correct reading. 32. wraðði sō. 'Be angry as thou wilt.' Cf. a similar construction in the third pers. at 196, 10.

Page 193, l. 20. Ich ülle, MS. ichulle. The MS. form indicates that the two words were spoken in close association, as in the ModE. Sth. dialectal chull, 'I will.' 27. eis weis. 'In any way (ways),' one of the few examples of the inflected adjective in this selection.

Page 194, l. 6. Me hwet. 'But what.' The conjunction me, 'but,' is found especially in Sth. texts, but apparently not in Old English or the Anglian territory. This would argue for the Low German origin suggested for it. 16. wummon. Note the influence of the preceding w upon the original i from ī in this word, causing it to become u as still preserved in the singular. 25. mix mawmets, MS. mawmex. Final x in the latter may be due to scribal influence of the preceding word. 28. Elewsium. Foreign derived names retain their original inflexion as here, remain uninflected, or assume the inflexion of English nouns, depending on the frequency of their usage.

Page 195, l. 8. ow. A dative which seems redundant to-day, but no doubt added force to the expression. It may be translated as a possessive, 'for your evil fortune.' 11. as rēve of þē burhe. Since the 'Life' was too long to use as a whole, the trial before Eleusius has been omitted and the account resumed at the close of the tortures. The intervening part tells how Eleusius is again struck with Juliana's beauty, and how she again reveals his advances. She is then beaten a second time, hanged by the hair, has boiling brass poured over her, and is finally cast into prison. Here a supernatural visitor tempts her, but she seizes him and makes him confess he is the devil. She binds him with chains and drags him to the judgement seat of the prefect. She is torn to pieces on a wheel of spikes, but is made whole by an angel, thus converting the executioners. She is thrust into a great fire, but an angel quenches it. This angers the prefect still more, and at this point the narrative is resumed. 31. ȝēldeð hire ȝarew borh. The speech differs here from that in the 'Acta Sanctorum,' in which the devil speaks to Eleusius. ȝarew borh seems to be used ironically, 'ready payment' as if for a debt, the Bodl. text reading 'ȝeldeð hire ȝarow borh efter þat ha wurðe is.'

Page 196, l. 3. unwiht. Not found in OE. literature, but there is the similar untȳdre, 'monster,' literally 'no child or offspring.' 8. uppon trēowe staðele. Referring to Matt. vii. 24–27. 24. underfēng. Cf. with this imperative onderfang of Layamon ('Brut,' II, 168) and underwong of 'Anc. Riw.,' p. 114. wið meidenes imȩane. No doubt alluding to Rev. xiv. 3–4. Cf. 'Pearl,' l. 1,096 f. 26. þē ēdie engles. See, for an early instance of the same, the account of the death of Chad in Bede, 'Eccl. Hist.,' Bk. IV, ch. iii. 28. Cōm ā sēlī wummon. This incident, given in the Greek and Latin lives, is omitted by Cynewulf. The name of the woman is variously given as Sophonia (Sophronia) and Sophia, the latter by Symeon Metaphrastes the Greek martyrologist. 32. from þē sȩa ā mīle. In the territory of Puteoli, as stated by the first life in the 'Acta Sanctorum.' Later (the late sixth century) her remains were transferred to Cumae for greater safety. Thence, in 1207, they were said to have been taken to Naples, and various cities now claim them, as Brussels for example.

Page 197, l. 1. þē rēve. In the 'Acta Sanctorum' no mention is made of the reeve's pursuing Sophie, and twenty-four, not thirty-four, are destroyed by the storm. 4. þrittuðe. Both MSS. have the form, though surely for þrittī, 'thirty,' it would seem. 5. warp ham adriven. 'Cast them, driven about, on (to) the land.' The change from plural to singular in the verbs is also found in the Bodl. MS. No doubt the general idea of storm was in the writer's mind. 8. þē sixtēnðe dei. This is the day on which the Romish church celebrates her martyrdom, while the Greek church prefers Dec. 21.

IV. 'THE ANCREN RIWLE, OR RULE OF NUNS'

There are five MSS. of the 'Ancren Riwle,' Cotton Nero A XIV, Titus D XVIII, Cleopatra C VI in the British Museum, Corpus Christi Coll. MS. and Caius Coll. MS. 234 at Cambridge. Besides, a fragment of another MS. was recently discovered by Napier ('Jour. of Germ. Philology,' II, 199). The first of these, with collation of the second and third, was edited in 1853 for the Camden Society by Morton, and selections are found in Morris ('Specimens,' I, 110) and Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' II, 5). Our selection follows Morton's edition with such changes as are necessary by reason of Kölbing's collation with the MS. ('Jahrbuch für rom. und engl. Philologie,' XV, 180). The work was written about the beginning of the thirteenth century, in the middle part of the Southern district, since it mentions Tarente (Tarent-Kaimes or Kingston) near the Stour, in southwest Dorset. Morton suggested (Preface, p. xii) that its author may have been Rich. Poor, who was born at Tarente and died there in 1237. He was in turn bishop of Chichester, Salisbury, and Durham, and may have been a benefactor of the house since he was sometimes called its founder.

The 'Rule of Nuns' is a free and not uninteresting treatment of monastic duties, prepared for three sisters of good family who had become nuns. It consists of a brief introduction and eight parts: of religious service; keeping the heart; of monastic life; of temptation; confession; penitence; love; of domestic matters. Of plain and simple style, it contains numerous quotations from the Bible and the Church Fathers, with allusions to saintly lives but practically no legendary or moral tales. The first extract is from Part II (Morton, p. 64), dealing with each of the senses in turn; the second from part VIII (Morton, p. 414).

The language of the 'Rule of Nuns' is a pure Southern, and in most respects represents the normal form of that dialect, as distinct from the Early Southern of the preceding selections. OE. ā has now regularly become ǭ, the new diphthongs have developed, and the voicing of initial f to v is the rule. On the other hand, OE. ēo (eo), ēa (ǣa) still appear as in preceding texts. Occasionally ēo of this text is equivalent to open ǣ, so that it has in such cases been marked ǣo. Consonant peculiarities are not numerous. The most important is t for initial þ after a word ending in t or d, as vort tet (l. 15) for vort þet; and terefter (l. 16) for þerefter. Further see Wülker in Paul and Braune's 'Beiträge,' I, 209.

Page 198, l. 1. þet hē ouh tō siggen. Morton connects with preceding clause, but it belongs, as Mätzner shows, to the following. '(To) that (which) he has to say, hearken to his words.' The peculiarity is in the repetition of 'his words.' 12. Paraīs. Both this and Paradīs occur in OF. and ME. 22. þē cǭve, MS. coue. The word here and in l. 24 has been somewhat variously read, as the MS. u may be u or v. Morton connects with OE. ceo(h), 'chough,' but this should appear with ME. ch initially, to say nothing of the diphthong. Mätzner assumes a Netherland kauwe (kauw), which ought, it would seem, to give caue; cf. MnE. caw. Icl. kofa, 'young pigeon,' is also not easily connected with the word. To account for the form, and preserve the play upon the word, I assume OE. cāf, ME. cȩve, used in the first case as a substantive adj., 'the swift, the deceitful,' perhaps, 'the thief.' Cumes te ȝeape, 'comes the cunning (one),' of Titus MS. shows the understanding of another scribe, and that he had no idea of the chough or any other bird.

Page 199, l. 1. Sed multi veniunt. Matt. vii. 15, the Vulgate for which is Attendite a falsis prophetis, qui veniunt. 7. Gābriēles spȩche. The annunciation, Luke i. 29. 11. ōðer stūnde, MS. stude. Morton's emendation is proved correct by the Latin text (Magd. Coll., Oxford), which conveys the same idea in positive form: si tertius haberi possit. 32. Ancre and hūses lēfdī. 'There ought to be much (difference) between an anchoress and a housewife.'

Page 200, l. 3. swīwike, MS. swīðwike. Mätzner suggested retaining the MS. reading as OE. equivalent for MLat. hebdomeda maior, though no such OE. word is known. On the other hand, we know that OE. swigdæg, 'day of silence,' was used for the three days of Holy Week between Thursday evening and Sunday morning; cf. Ælfric's 'Homilies,' I, 218, 31; II, 268, 16. Besides, Titus MS. reads swihende wike, and Cleopatra MS. swiwike. The emendation therefore seems fully justified. The nuns are advised to make the whole week one of silence, rather than the customary three days. 9. Ase Seont Anselme. I have not found the original. 10. chēofled = chēofleð. Here, as occasionally in most texts, ð is replaced by d by scribal error; cf. 201, 17. 20. Mulieres. 1 Tim. ii. 12 and 1 Cor. xiv. 34. Neither passage is followed verbatim, the former more nearly. 22. þē ōverkūðre. Morton's omission of þe led Mätzner to a wrong understanding of the words. He rightly pointed out Morton's error in connecting this with the following sentence. 27. ase ich ēr seide. See 199, 31. 31. Ad summam volo. Morton has made the strange mistake of including þet is in the quotation as he translates it, and omitting ich ulle, &c. þē ēnde of þē tāle is of course a free rendering of ad summam.

Page 201, l. 5. Censura. I do not find the exact words here or in l. 7, but a discussion of silence with the figure of the water (201, 8) occurs in Gregory's 'Regulae Pastoralis Liber,' ch. 38 (Migne, 77, 53). 22. Maria optimam. Luke x. 42. The translation begins with the preceding verse.

Page 202, l. 15. Bidden hit. 'To ask (or beg) it, in order to give it away, is not the part (rihte) of an anchoress.' 19. on ōu. 'On yourselves,' that is, 'from your own wants.' nenne mon. That is, 'Let no man eat before you,' mākīeð of the preceding clause being understood with this also. 25. Muche nēode. That is, 'only much need.' 32. heiward. The hayward was the keeper of the cattle in the common field or pasture, and it was his duty to prevent trespass on cultivated ground. There was a similar officer of the manor or religious house. As the hayward could assess damages against the owner of cattle, a little flattery was evidently considered a good investment. hwon me pūnt hire. 'When men impound her (the cow).'

Page 203, l. 1. hwon me mākeð mōne. 'When they (me) make complaint in town of anchoresses' cattle.' Probably refers to formal complaint as before the town reeve.

V. ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER'S 'CHRONICLE'—HOW THE NORMANS CAME TO ENGLAND

This metrical 'Chronicle' is found in an earlier and later form. To the earlier belong the following MSS.: Cotton Caligula A XI, Harleian 201, Additional 19,677 and 18,631 of the British Museum, and Hunterian MS. at Glasgow; to the latter, Trinity Coll. MS. R 4, 26 at Cambridge, Digby 205 of the Bodleian, Univ. Library Ee 4, 31 at Cambridge, Lord Mostyn's Library 259, Pepysian Library, Magdalen Coll., Cambridge, 2,014, Sloane 2,027 of the British Museum, and Herald's Coll. MS., London. There are editions by Hearne (1724) based on the Harleian MS., and by Wright in the Rolls Series (1887) based on the Cotton MS. above. Extracts are found in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 155), Morris ('Specimens,' II, 1), Wülker ('Lesebuch,' I, 55). The name of the author is based on l. 11,748, which tells us that 'Robert þat verst þis boc made' saw the battle of Evesham (1265), but otherwise we know nothing of him. Stow first connected him with Gloucester, and this is at least probable. More recently Strohmeyer ('Das Verhältnis der Hds. der Reimchronik Roberts von Gloucester,' 'Archiv für neuere Sprachen,' LXXXVII, 217) shows that the 'Chronicle' is the work of three different authors, the first writing about the end of the thirteenth century lines 1–9, 137, the second (Robert of l. 11,748) lines 9,138–12,049, and a third writing and somewhat extending the later version. As the work mentions the canonization of St. Louis in 1297, it could not have been written before that event, and was probably composed about 1300 in Gloucester. The language is therefore Southern of that district about the last of the thirteenth century. Our selection is from Cotton Caligula A XI, the purest text, and consists of ll. 7,395–7,513 as printed by Wright above.

The 'Gloucester Chronicle' relates the history of England from the legendary Brutus to 1271. It contains about 12,000 long lines (12,600 in the later version), riming in couplets. As to the number of stresses the lines are sufficiently irregular to occasion considerable difference of opinion. They seem to be based on the line of seven stresses with cæsura after the fourth, but many lines occur with only six stresses. The sources of the poem are Geoffrey of Monmouth, Henry of Huntingdon, William of Malmesbury, and other chroniclers.

The language of the 'Chronicle' is some three-quarters of a century later than that of the 'Ancren Riwle.' The OE. diphthongs have entirely disappeared even from the orthography, and the language is therefore typical Southern in most respects. Among vowels there is a largely increased use of o for u. Among consonants the selection often shows loss of initial h, and a frequent voicing of hw to w which is parallel to some extent with that of initial f to v. Besides ss (s) regularly represents sh.

Page 203, l. 14. hap. Note the unusually frequent omission of initial h in this text. 15. hēr and ēr. Other MSS., as Harleian 201, read her and þer, 'here and there,' perhaps a better reading. On the other hand, hēr is constantly used, especially in the Chronicles, for 'now, at this time,' and þēr may be due to a scribal misunderstanding of hēr in this sense. 17. Verst. Strict Sth. would require vürst, but e for ü is found in a few words in this writer. See herne (hērne) 204, 8 for Sth. hürne, but the latter in rime (204, 18), and cf. Morsbach, 'Mittelengl. Gram.,' § 133, anm. 2.

Page 204, l. 1. As þē hēnde. 'As the courteous one,' so 'politely, courteously.' 3. þē grę̄te ō̄þ. See Freeman's 'Norman Conquest,' III, 91. 14. þat was al. The Harleian MS. reads þo after þat, 'that then was,' &c., but it seems no material improvement. 27. Godwine. The crime was attributed to Godwine, though committed by followers of Harold I. William now gives this as a reason for making war on Godwine's son Harold. 28. Alfrē̄d. The brother of Edward the Confessor, son of Æthelred II and Emma of Normandy, the latter sister of William the Conqueror's grandfather. Cosīn is therefore very freely used, as often in earlier English and sometimes to-day. On Alfred's return to England from Normandy in 1036 he was seized, his followers killed or enslaved, and his eyes torn out at Ely. 31. Seint Edward. Edward the Confessor, who had promised the throne to William, so the latter said. That he was 'next of his blōd' (l. 32) was of course true.

Page 205, l. 13. Sein Walrī. This is St. Valéry at the mouth of the Somme, with w for OF. v, as in Wace's Valeri. 14. and abide mō̄. We should expect a sing. pret. to agree with wende, hadde, but the construction certainly changes in the following clauses, and there is no reason to suppose it may not here. Otherwise we must assume an infin., with an omitted tō or for tō expressing purpose. 21. Ō̄n of his knię̄tes. The well-known story of William's stumbling as he set foot on the land is here omitted entirely. The words of the knight therefore lose point.

Page 206, l. 2. As hē of nō̄ mon. 'As if he took account of no man.' 4. þē ōþer bataile. The battle of Stamford Bridge, Yorkshire, September 25, 1066, in which Harold had defeated and killed King Harold of Norway. 10. þat upe þē Pō̄pes. 'That he should rest (dō) it upon the judgement (lōkinge) of the Pope.' 13. him tāke nō̄ lō̄nd. 'Give or deliver him no land.' For this sense of tāke(n) see the use of bitake(n). 12. Wē̆r Seint Edward. Morris suggests 'whether,' and Mätzner 'if' for wer. But the meaning is rather 'notwithstanding, although.' 27. mī fader. Really his ancestor Rollo, first Duke of Normandy, in the early tenth century, or a hundred and fifty years before. 31. Richard. This was Richard the Fearless, who reigned from 943 to 996. The French king who was taken prisoner was Lewis (Louis) IV.

Page 207, l. 7. hē overcōm. There are numerous references to this story in the chroniclers. See also Uhland's poems on the subject. 31. Wiþ strō̄nge targes. OE. poems often refer to making a 'war-hedge,' or close protection of overlapping shields before the men. No doubt this custom is intended here. düde hom noȝt, 'did them no harm.'

Page 208, l. 14. nō̄ wille habbe. 'Have no chance (wille) of striking (dünt).' 17. al vor noȝt. A phrase of varying import, 'all in vain, all for nothing.' Here it seems to imply lack of resistance, and so 'easily.'

Page 209, l. 15. gō̄stes. See Freeman's 'Norman Conquest,' III, 11. 19. Seint Calixtes day. October 14, when Pope Calixtus is supposed to have been martyred in 222. 31. Willam hit sende hire. This is a mistake. Harold's mother offered a large sum for the body, but William would not give it up and had it privately buried by the sea-shore, so that the grave could not be identified; cf. Ramsey, 'Foundations of England,' II, 35 f.

Page 210, l. 20. Vor þē mōre. This line shows that the writer had no strong feeling either for or against the conditions he mentions. The antipathy of the races had long passed away.

VI. OLD KENTISH SERMONS

These 'Sermons' are found in Laud MS. 471 of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and were printed by Morris in 'An Old English Miscellany' (EETS., 49), p. 26. They represent Kentish of about 1250, so that they really precede in time the previous selection, but are placed here to bring together the two specimens of Kentish in the book.

But five of these sermons are preserved, all brief and simple in plan. They are translations from the French of Maurice de Sully (d. 1196), the earliest French sermon writer to give up Latin for the vernacular. They all follow the same general plan of text, narrative, exposition, application, as exemplified in the fourth and fifth, here printed.

An outline of Kentish grammar is given by Morris in the Introduction to the volume quoted above, and more completely in the Introduction to 'Ayenbite of Inwit.' The characteristic mark of Middle Kentish is the retention of Old Kentish e, ē for non-Kentish y, ȳ; cf. prēde (211, 20), ēveles (211, 23). Besides, Kentish agrees with the non-Wessex dialects of Old English in having ē for T. ē, WT. ā, WS. ēa, and ē, īe for i-mutation of OE. ēa, ēo, while it is itself peculiar in having ē for non-Kentish ǣ by i-mutation of ā. It has also the diphthongs ȳa (īa) beside ēa, for WS. ēa or lengthened ea, and au from OE. āw. The special treatise on Kentish of the Middle English period is by Danker, 'Die Laut- und Flexionslehre der mittelkentischen Denkmäler' (1879).

Page 210, l. 24. godspelle of tōdai. This is indicated by the Latin rubric, Dominica quarta post octavam Epiphanie, and the gospel is Matt. viii. 23 f. Apart from slight lack of verbal agreement with the Vulgate, the last clause is from Mark vi. 48, and no doubt suggests a gospel harmony as the basis.

Page 211, l. 15. blēþelīche. This form of the word also appears regularly in 'Ayenbite of Inwit.' As the OE. word is blīpelīce not blȳþelīce, the first e may be short or lengthened from a short e which took the place of shortened i. 16. Salus populi. Hardly a quotation from any one passage of Scripture, certainly not from Christ's words. It may have come from one or more Psalms which were regarded as messianic; cf. Ps. xxxv. 3; and for the last part xviii. 6; l. 15; lxxxvi. 7; cxviii. 5. 24. wcrdle. The prevailing form in Kt., as shown by the next selection. 25. Quod ipse prestare. An expression used as a benediction and closing, qui vivit et regnat Deus per omnia secula seculorum. But it has various forms. 29. godespelle. Lat. rubric, Dominica in sexagesima; gospel, Matt. xiii. 24.

Page 214, l. 13. nōn man wȳt. The preacher quotes very freely as before. Reference seems to be to the interpretation of such passages as Matt. xxiv. 36, 42; Luke xii. 19–20. 14. for man. A common proverb, cf. 'Ancren Riwle,' p. 338; 'Ayenbite of Inwit' (Morris), p. 129. A poem on long life ('Old Eng. Misc.,' p. 156) begins:

'Mon mai longe lives wene,
Ac ofte him lieð þe wrench.'

VII. 'THE AYENBITE OF INWIT, OR REMORSE OF CONSCIENCE'

This work, in the handwriting of the author, is contained in Arundel MS. 57 of the British Museum. It was edited by Stevenson in 1855 and by Morris for the Early English Text Society (No. 23) in 1866. Extracts appear in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' I, 60), Morris ('Specimens,' II, 98), Wülker ('Lesebuch,' I, 112). The author gives his name as Dan Michel (Michael) of Northgate (Kent), tells us that he was an Augustine monk of Canterbury, and that he finished the 'Remorse of Conscience' in 1340. His language therefore represents Kentish of the first half of the fourteenth century, about three-quarters of a century later than the preceding selection, and a quarter of a century later than the 'Gloucester Chronicle.'

The work is a translation of 'La Somme des Vices et des Vertus' by Lorens, a Benedictine monk of the later thirteenth century. It treats of the ten commandments, the twelve articles of faith, the seven deadly sins, &c., with occasional illustrative tales, anecdotes, or lives of saints. It is strongly allegorical throughout, but the style is not as pleasing as that of the 'Ancren Riwle,' or as simple as that of the 'Kentish Sermons.' Our selection, 'How to learn to die,' is based on the text of Morris above (p. 70 f.), where it begins the more constructive teaching of the book. Special monographs on the work are by Varnhagen, 'Beiträge zur Erklärung und Textkritik' ('Eng. Stud.,' I, 379; II, 27); by Evers, dissertation with same title (1888); by Konrath, 'Die lateinische Quelle zu Ayenbite' ('Eng. Stud.,' XII, 459).

In Notes to 'Old Kentish Sermons' reference was made to the principal treatises on the Kentish dialect, and to important peculiarities. In the present selection are to be noticed ēa (ȳa, ȳea) for WS. ēa or lengthened ea, and uo for OE. ME. ō (ō̄) sometimes; cf. guodes = gōdes (215, 22); guo = gō̄ (218, 32). Among consonants z is regularly written for voiced s, clearly indicating the voicing of the latter when initial as well as when medial between vowels.

Page 215, l. 18. raþre þanne ssed. The figure is a common one in Scripture; cf. 2 Chron. xxix. 15; Job viii. 9; xiv. 2; Ps. cii. 11; cix. 23.

Page 216, l. 15. þē wȳse Cātoun. Presumably Dionysius Cato, whose 'Disticha' were so highly regarded in the middle ages. Nothing exactly like this occurs, but for contempt of death see 'Disticha' at I, 22, IV, 22. 21. þrī dȳeaþes. Another interpretation of the three deaths occurs in 'Old Eng. Homilies,' II, 169. 29. damezēle Bēreblisse. Explained in the following clause, 'death that crowns and places (dōþ) in bliss all the saints.' For a name made in the same way cf. 161, 6.

Page 218, l. 7. tō þē reward of. 'In respect of or to.' Reward has the sense of 'regard,' the cognate word. 20. ase zayþ Salomōn. Prov. xxiv. 16, which reads in the Vulgate, Septies enim cadet iustus, et resurget.

Page 219, l. 2. þēr ne may guo in. Referring to Rev. xxi. 27; cf. l. 32. 15. mōre stranger. The double comparative appears thus early.

VIII. TREVISA'S TRANSLATION OF HIGDEN'S 'POLYCHRONICON'

The English 'Polychronicon' of Trevisa is preserved in at least four MSS., St. John's Coll. H I at Cambridge, and Cotton Tiberius D VII, Harleian 1,900, Additional 24,194 of the British Museum. Of these the first was printed by Caxton in 1482, and with a later version (Harl. MS. 2261) was edited by Babington for the Rolls Series. Extracts from Trevisa are found in Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' II, 343), Morris ('Specimens,' II, 235), and Wülker ('Lesebuch,' II, 205). Our selection is from Cotton Tiberius D VII, a contemporary MS. in pure Southern. The translator, John Trevisa, was vicar at Berkeley, then canon at Westbury, Gloucestershire. He finished his translation in April 1387, as he tells us. The language is therefore Southern of Gloucestershire in the last half of the fourteenth century.

The 'Polychronicon' was originally written in Latin by Radulphus or Ranulphus Higden of Chester. As the name implies, the work is a sort of history of the world, brought down to the year 1342. This Trevisa translated freely, adding here and there, and extending to 1387. Besides this he is supposed to have translated other works, though these cannot be proved to be his with certainty.

As to language, Trevisa's Southern shows no voicing of initial f, þ, and s, so far as orthography is concerned, but otherwise well represents the dialect. The selection shows ā for hā (ha), beside hī (hȳ), in the plural of the third personal pronoun; cf. 'Juliana,' p. 191.

Page 220, l. 1. þē ȝēr of Hēlȳ. The mediæval historians were fond of such union of sacred and secular history, and it was natural to their annalistic form of historical writing. 7. Vespāsian hys tȳme. That is 69–79 A.D. Pictes ōut of Scitia. This tradition appears in numerous chroniclers back to Bede. That the Picts entered Britain later than the Britons is probably true enough. Cf. 221, 6. 17. Yn Vespāsian. Based on Geoffrey of Monmouth, as the footnote shows. This accounts for many statements of which authentic history gives no confirmation. 18. Mārius. Geoffrey of Monmouth, 'Hist. Brit.,' IV, ch. xvii. Arviragus, his father, is mentioned in ch. xiii f, but neither is known to be historical, though Geoffrey connects them with the Roman emperors, as here. The same may be said of Rodric in the same line. 21. Cathenēsia. The present Caithness doubtless.

Page 221, l. 4. Servius. The commentator on Virgil, who lived in the last of the fourth and beginning of the fifth century, the time of Jerome and Augustine. 5. Agatirses. Cf. 'Aeneid,' IV, 146, where occurs pieti Agathyrsi, giving rise to the comment of Servius. 12. Maximus. The chronicler has here confused Magnus Clemens Maximus (383–388) with Maximus Tyrannus (408–411), as shown by the references to Gratianus and Valentinianus in l. 14. He has also mistaken the name Tyrannus for a descriptive title. Marius is mentioned, not by Geoffrey but by Gildas. 21. Carausius. Mentioned by Geoffrey, 'Hist. Brit.,' V, ch. iii. Bassiānus. Better known as Caracalla. Geoffrey recounts the death of Geta as in battle between the brothers for supremacy in the empire. 27. þwartōver wal. The wall of Hadrian from Newcastle to Carlisle and the Solway Firth, here called the Scottysch, that is, the Irish sea. So also at 222, 2 and 22. 28. Lodovīa. Trevisa seems to have misread the Latin Lodoneya, which he should have translated by 'Lodonia (Loudonia), Loudon.' 30. Ninian. Bede gives the tradition regarding Ninias or Nynian ('Eccl. Hist.,' III, iv), but his date cannot be definitely fixed. He is said to have died in 432. 31. Brenicia. Berenicia, founded according to Bede in 547 A.D.

Page 222, l. 3. Duk Reuda. In his edition of Bede, Plummer says the northern portion of County Antrim, Ireland, was called Dal Riada, after an ancient leader who is supposed to have died in 165 A.D. Thence the name was transferred to Britain with an Irish colony.

Page 223, l. 2. Flemmyngs. In 1111 Henry I established a colony of this people in Pembrokeshire, Southwest Wales. 11. þē Dānes. Reference is doubtless to the massacre on St. Brice's day, 1002; cf. Freeman, 'Norm. Conquest,' I, 182, 312 f, 634 f.

Page 224, l. 7. drawe somwhat. An early recognition, perhaps, of words borrowed from the Celts. 26. þys manēre. This whole paragraph is an addition to his original by Trevisa himself, and is naturally of greatest interest as a contemporary account. þē fürste moreyn. The great plague of 1348–9. A second occurred in 1361–2, a third in 1369, and some reckon a fourth in 1375–6. 27. Jō̄han Cornwal . . . Richard Pencrych. Both Cornishmen, as it would seem from their names. It is not improbable that they were both at Oxford, as was Trevisa, for the name Master John Cornwall appears in the records of Merton College, and the names Pencrych (Penkrissh) and Pencrych Hall are also found. The latter was about opposite Nunne Hall, where Cornwall taught. See Stevenson's article on the 'Introduction of English in English Schools' in 'An English Miscellany,' p. 421.

Page 225, l. 1. of þē secunde Kyng Richard . . . nȳne. The ninth year of Richard II began June 22, 1385, so that this part must have been written in the last half of that year. 6. disavauntāge. This shows that Trevisa was not in the least prejudiced against French, when properly added to a knowledge of the mother tongue. Cf. Robert of Gloucester at 210, 19, 20. 11. grēt wonder. Trevisa was scarcely more in the dark than many a later historian of our language. Of course the changes in spoken English were due to an unconscious variation in different districts, while þē lōngāge of Normandȳ —that is French in general—was taught and learned, with some idea of a normal or standard form. Had Trevisa been more widely acquainted with the French as was Chaucer, he would have known that there was some variation as spoken in England and on the continent; cf. what Chaucer says of the Prioress, Prologue to 'Cant. Tales,' 124 f. 28. bycause þat̄ þē kynges. Just what influence Trevisa supposed the kings to have had is not clear, but the relation of the capital city and the center of government to the development of a standard language is well known.

THE DIALECT OF LONDON

The importance of the language of the capital city to the development of standard English has led to the placing of four selections from London English in this place. A comparison of these will show how the language gradually changed, in most particulars, from Southern to Midland.

I. THE ENGLISH PROCLAMATION OF HENRY III

This proclamation occurs in two MSS., one in the Public Record Office, London, and the other in the Bodleian Library, Oxford. The first of these was published by Rymer (1816), by Ellis in 'Transactions of the Philological Society' (1868), and by Mätzner ('Sprachproben,' II, 54). The second was printed in 'Memorials of Oxford' by J. Ingram (1837), and by Skeat in 'Transactions of the Philological Society' (1880-1). Our text follows the first. As indicated, the 'Proclamation' was issued Oct. 18, 1258, so that we have here the English of some London scribe in the middle of the thirteenth century.

This 'Proclamation' is the earliest in English, after the disuse of the latter in public documents following the Norman Conquest; cf. the author's 'History of the English Language,' ch. v. It was issued to confirm to the people the 'Provisions of Oxford,' a charter of rights which had been wrested from the king. As indicated at the end, a copy was sent to every shire in England and to Ireland. The copy we print indicates Huntingdonshire as its destination, as that of the Bodleian indicates Oxfordshire. The writ was issued in both French and English; cf. the French version in Ellis's edition. For the 'Provisions' themselves, which accompanied this Proclamation, see Stubbs's 'Select Charters'; Adams and Stevens's 'Select Documents of English Constitutional History,' I, 56.

The language of this selection shows the use of the OE. diphthongs eo, ēo, ēa, and the ligatures æ, ǣ, as in Southern texts of the same period; cf. the 'Ancren Riwle' with the Midland 'Genesis and Exodus.' To these are added the digraph oa, probably an early writing of ME. ǭ from OE. ā. In other respects the language shows a mixture of Southern and Midland, probably characteristic of London English of the time. True Southern forms are those with u, ū = OE. ȳ, those with the prefix i (OE. ge), and such verbal forms as bēoþ, habbeð, mākien; besides these the older inflexional forms, as þān (OE. þām), Gode, loande, and the noun plurals in en, as wōrden. For a fuller consideration of the language of this 'Proclamation' cf. Morsbach, 'Schriftsprache,' p. 161.

Page 226, l. 1. purȝ Godes fultume. For the OF. par le grace Deu, Lat. dei gratia. 3. sēnd = sēndeð. 4. witen ȝē. The subjunctive of mild command. willen and unnen. Note the present plurals in en, Ml. forms, and compare the Sth. bēoþ (l. 5), habbeð (l. 7). 5. ūre rædesmen. Reference is made no doubt to the Committee of Twenty-four, twelve elected by the barons and twelve by the king, who had drawn up the 'Provisions' in the Oxford session. 24. Bonefāce. No special note is necessary on these prominent men of the time. Thirteen sign here, sixteen the corresponding French translation. The same thirteen in the Oxford copy, in the same order, probably indicates, as Skeat emphasized from another circumstance, that all the copies were alike in this respect.

Page 227, l. 8. And al on. This part does not occur in the Oxford copy. It suggests that we may have before us the original, on which this note was made for general reference. 9. þære küneriche. Note the peculiar use of the feminine form of the pronoun with a noun originally neuter.

II. ADAM DAVY'S DREAMS ABOUT EDWARD II

This text is found in Laud MS. 622 at the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and was edited by Furnivall for the Early English Text Society (69) in 1878. The 'Dreams' were written between 1307 and 1327, probably soon after the accession of the king. Of Adam Davy, the author, little is certainly known beyond what he tells us in his verses; cf. the 'Dict. of Nat. Biography.' The 'Dreams' have no special literary value, but are important as exhibiting the language of the capital city. Their purpose was doubtless to obtain favor of the king. Certainly, that Edward II should be 'emperor in Cristendom' (229, 33) could hardly have been expected long after his troublous reign began.

The change of the language of London from a mixture of Southern and Midland toward pure Midland is very evident in this selection. The notable Sth. characteristics are wanting, as ü, ï for OE. y, ȳ, though the Sth. open ē (WS. ā, Merc. ē) still prevails. Similarly the indicative present plural of verbs ends in the Midland en, not Sth. eþ (eth). Forms with the Sth. prefix i (y), OE. ge, are not numerous. Even at the beginning of the fourteenth century, therefore, the language of London was closely approximating the Midland dialect of Chaucer.

Page 227, l. 15. Prince of Wāles. This title, coupled with that of king in the preceding line, shows that the 'Dreams' relate to Edward II, the first to possess the former title and the only one of the Edwards of the fourteenth century to be both prince and king. 20. Seint Edward. Edward the Confessor, commemorated on Jan. 5, though the title might apply to the second Saxon king of that name.

Page 230, l. 5. worþingniȝht. This has not been identified, but would seem, from the chronological order followed, to fall between All Saints and Lent. The only analogous compound in OE. is dægweorþing, 'celebration, festival,' but this does not assist us unless worþingniȝht could be some very important festival as, perhaps, the 'Purification of the Virgin,' Feb. 2.

Page 231, l. 2. in clēne leinte. Already the old word for spring (OE. lengten) has been specialized to the clerical use, as in modern English. 20. þē bēryng of ūur Lēfdȳ. The birth of the Virgin Mary, commemorated on Sept. 8. 29. For mē nc worþe. 'On account of me,' 'nor shall be (shewed) to learned or unlearned.'

III. THE FIRST PETITION TO PARLIAMENT IN ENGLISH

This 'Petition' is preserved in a MS. of the Public Record Office, London. It was printed, quite imperfectly, in 'Rolls of Parliament,' III, 225, and later by Morsbach in 'Neuenglische Schriftsprache,' p. 171. As it bears the date 1386, the language is London English of the last quarter of the fourteenth century. Apart from its linguistic value the 'Petition' is highly interesting as giving us a most vivid conception of municipal politics in early London. The language presents few peculiarities, and these will be readily understood from the previous readings. The sentence structure hardly suggests one accustomed to the pen, and the document may easily have been composed by some clerk of the Mercery.

Page 232, l. 21. as a membre. One of the twelve great Livery Companies of the city, and having an important place in the government. 22. wrōnges subtiles. Note the OF. adjective following the noun and taking the plural form, no doubt a documentary usage rather than one colloquially common at the time. 24. is tō bē tō. 'Is to be by' or 'belongs to,' as we should say. 25. at ō day. The Anglo-French text reads: chescun an le jour de Seint Edward le Roy, that is, Jan. 5; cf. note on 227, 20.

Page 233, l. 1. Nicholus Brembre. A member of the Grocers' Company and chief supporter among the people of Richard II, Brembre became mayor in 1383–4 by forcible means as narrated. In 1386 he secured the election of his accomplice Nicholas Exton (234, 25), and he himself became a councillor of the king. In the next year he was charged with treason and fled to Wales. He was brought back and hanged in London in 1388. 2. Jōhn Northampton. Also called Comberton. He was leader of the faction supporting Wyclif and itself supported by John of Gaunt. Elected mayor in 1381, for two years he was imprisoned in 1384 by Brembre, but was released in 1387 and fully restored to London citizenship in 1390. 13. her mair. While the preceding nō man is sing., it implies the pl. and accounts for the plural pronoun. 14. of his ordynaunce. The Anglo-French text reads: par son assent, 'of his assent or party,' explaining the passage. 15. grēte quantitee of armūre. This passage is a wonderful revelation of the political methods sometimes employed at this time in the freest and most powerful city of England. 17. of withinne. Those of the city, besides the 'straungers of the contrē.' 27. of whōmsō it wēre. 'Of whatsoever it might be.' The whōm is dat.-acc., the older dat. of the neuter what. 28. and it wēre. 'If it were.' Morsbach adds (if) after and, but this seems unnecessary as shown by the punctuation.

ne court. 11. wolden. A subject wē, which may have been omitted by the scribe, is implied in 'thē Mercerȳe or ōthere craftes' above. Or perhaps the writer intended another construction connected with the clause beginning as (l. 8). 17. thē which thyng lȳke tō yōwre. 'Which (thē which thyng) may it please your worthy lordship to be proved or disproved, that truth may show which of the two (thē whether) (is correct).' Here and several times the word lordship is an abstract, used instead of the plural but implying all the lords in council. 24. for thei. 'So that (for) they should not be known or continued,' equivalent to 'lest they should be known and continued.' 25. Nicholus Exton. Made mayor in 1386 by Brembre and his party. As here accused, he is said to have publicly burnt a book of good customs called the 'Jubilee.' This event marks the revival of the party of Northampton in the city. 30. which of us . . . thē Kyng sholde dō hym. Note the anacoluthon. Brembre made a charge of being false to the king, and then offered immunity to any who would admit the charge, hoping thus to gain a good witness for his case. 32. and if anȳ. Note the indicative in the condition, perhaps in emphasis of the reality of the case.

Page 235, l. 3. thē mair that nōw is. That is, Exton, mentioned above. 8. thēre men. 'Where men,' implying also 'because.' 13. bī suggestiōn. This seems to imply that the offer by Brembre (234, 30) had been accepted by some, who had thus shielded themselves from punishment in other particulars. 16. tō bēn used. The sense is: 'your lord's command is too great a thing to be used familiarly among or toward simple men, lest they, because of their ignorance in obeying it (unwȳse tō sāve it),' &c. 24. brēre or Brembre. To understand the play upon the name it must be remembered that our word bramble had, in both Old and Middle English, a form brember. For this period cf. brember-flour (Harl. MS. of Chaucer) for brembel-flour of the received text. 27. thē which. 'Which being granted by your lordship'; that is, what is implied in that clause (l. 29). 30. as amōng us. 'Among ourselves.'

Page 236, l. 2. vittailērs. Brembre's party 'had its strength among the . . . grocers, then dominant, and the fishmongers, whose monopoly it upheld against the claims of the populace.'—'Dict. of Nat. Biog.,' Brembre. 28. in thē sexte yēre. That is, in 1384.

IV. CHAUCER'S 'CANTERBURY TALES'

It is needless to give details regarding the Chaucer MSS., or the numerous editions of his works. The extract is from the Ellesmere MS. as reprinted by the Chaucer Society, except for the few changes indicated in the footnotes. Nor is it necessary to say much of place and language, since every detail of this sort is so easily accessible. It will be generally admitted that the 'Pardoner's Tale' represents London English, in the last decade of the fourteenth century, that is, somewhat later than the time of the last selection.

For the originals of the story, so far as known, see the account in Skeat's 'Chaucer,' III, 439 f. For Chaucer's language it is scarcely necessary to give special references, as to Ten Brink's 'Chaucer's Sprache und Verskunst'

(trans. as the 'Language and Metre of Chaucer'), and the numerous introductory treatises giving two or three Tales with grammar, &c.

Page 237, l. 7. In Flaundres. The place was perhaps so indicated in the original form of the story which Chaucer used. 18. they tōtē̄re. One of the best illustrative passages is from the 'Parson's Tale': 'For Cristes sake ne swereth nat so sinfully, in dismembringe of Crist by soule, herte, bones, and body. For certes it semeth that ye thinke that the cursede Jewes ne dismembred nat ynough the preciouse persone of Crist, but ye dismembre him more.'

Page 238, l. 2. luxurīe is = luxurī 's. The Scriptural passage (Eph. v. 18) reads in the Vulgate Nolite inebriari vino, in quo est luxuria. As the passage is quoted by Innocent III in 'De Contemptu Mundi,' which Chaucer translated, he may have taken it from that source. 6. thē stō̄ries. Reference is to the 'Historia Scholastica' of Petrus Comestor, called 'clerke of the stories' in 'Piers Plowman,' B VII, 73, and 'maister of storyies' by Lydgate. The plural is used because each of several parts of the work is called 'Historia.' The clause then means 'whoso has well perused the stories. 10. Senek seith ꝙꝙ. Tyrwhitt suggested Seneca's Epistles lxxxiii: Extende in plures dies illum ebrii habitum; numquid furore dubitabis? nunc quoque non est minor, sed brevior? 14. fallen in a shrewe. 'Fallen on a shrew or evil person.' 18. Ō original. The line is metrically complete without O, which may have intruded from the preceding lines. 22. Corrupt was. Cf. the 'Parson's Tale,' § 70: 'This sinne (glottony) corrumped al this world, as is wel shewed in the sinne of Adam and Eve.' 30. Ō glotonȳe. The original of this (Ecclus. xxxvii. 32) was quoted by Innocent III in 'De Contemptu Mundi.'

Page 239, l. 2. a belle. The custom of the time as shown by the direction of Myrc, 'Instructions for Parish Priests,' l. 1,964:

'Make þy clerk before þe ȝynge,
To bere lyȝt and belle rynge.'

4. That ꝙn of hem. MnE. 'one of them' rather than 'the one'; that is the old demonstrative with t retained before a vowel. Cf. thē tṗn, thē tōther. 17. this pestilence. This shows that the story is placed in the time of one of the great plagues which swept western Europe, perhaps that of 1348–9, the worst of all. 34. al ō̄nes. The usual expression is at ō̄nes, or al at ō̄nes.

Page 240, l. 19. God yōw see. Cf. 'Cant. Tales' B 156, D 2,169; 'Troilus,' II, 85, God you save and see. While the corresponding OE. word seems not to have the meaning of 'protect,' that is found in the case of the corresponding ON. form. 26. Ynde. Taken as an example of the far distant land. Sometimes Greece is used in the same way. 31. Ne ꝺꝙth. As Prof. Kittredge pointed out, the next seven lines are imitated from the first elegy of Maximian; cf. Skeat's 'Chaucer,' v, 287.

Page 241, l. 5. mȳ cheste. That in which his worldly belongings were kept; usually found in old times at the foot of the bed in the bed-chamber. 13. In hꝙlȳ writ. Lev. xix. 32; in the Vulgate, Coram cano capite consurge. 17. did. 'Should do'; subj. mode.

Page 242, l. 31. thē cut. The shortest, as in a fuller account of a drawing of cuts in the Prologue, 835–845.

Page 244, l. 6. at oūre owene wille. 'According to our own pleasure,' a common idiom. 19. Forwhȳ thē feend. Cf. 'OE. Homilies,' II, 39 (EETS., 53): 'Swa giveð ure Drihten leve þe devle to ben on þe swinisshe men þe ihc er of spec, and on hem to wuniende and hem to drenchende, and of here wit to bringinde and to driven fram unrihtw to oðer, fram eðeliche laste to michele, fram synne to synne, fram ivele to ivele, and et tan ande hem drencheð on shameliche deðe and mid hem to helle ledeð.'

Page 245, l. 5. gǫǫn apaas. The first part of the last word is not the article, as sometimes explained, but a = on. The expression means go on foot, and is thus indicative of the time required for such travel. 29. canōn . . . fen. The work of Avicenna (Ibn-Sina) is called 'Book of the Canon in Medicine,' and one part in the Latin version is named fen, from Arabic fann.

Page 246, l. 11. goode men. The metre requires that these two words should be read as a compound of two syllables.

GLOSSARY

THE Glossary is arranged on a strictly alphabetical basis, except as follows: initially, þ (ð) occurs after t, and ȝ just before y, with which it belongs in its modern development; but medially þ (ð) are placed after tg, and ȝ with g after f, since these positions are most natural to the modern reader. Each word is given in its normal form, rather than in the form in which it happens to occur the first time, as usually done in the so-called glossarial index. But words tending to lose a final element (usually final e), even in normal Middle English, are sometimes given in the shorter form. The great diversity of ME. spelling makes frequent cross-reference necessary, and such references have been freely given. Only in case of Orm's forms with extra doubling of consonants has normalizing occasionally been practised; though in rare cases forms with medial y for i have not been given. Orm's forms, owing to their importance, are designated by (O) after them.

The etymology is given so far as the immediate form and language from which the word is derived. To attempt more would have been to increase unwisely the size of the book. Yet when some considerable change in the form of the word has occurred a hint of this is given. Thus OE. nouns (mainly feminines) which have assumed inorganic e in the nominative-accusative, under the influence of the oblique cases, are indicated by adding the OE. gender, as f., m., neut. So the stem-forms of OE., OF. verbs, when differing from the infinitive, are added to explain ME. forms. In case of all irregular verbs, weak, strong, and minor classes, the OE. present and preterit-singular are given. With strong verbs a number in parentheses indicates the class, according to the numbering of the Grammatical Introduction. An (R) denotes reduplication verbs.

Common abbreviations need no explanation, as sb., substantive, vb., verb, inf., infinitive, &c. The following may be explained: n., g., d., a., nominative, genitive, dative, accusative; ns., ds., etc., nom. sg., dative sg.; wk., weak; wkv., stv., ptprv., anv., weak, strong, preterit-present, anomalous verbs, as in the Grammatical Introduction. For other abbreviations, see list at the beginning of the book. All references to the text are to page and line.

The manner of marking quantity has been explained in the Grammatical Introduction. In addition some few diacritics have been added in the Glossary to assist in differentiating certain sounds. Thus c = ch is marked č; g = j in judge (dʒ), ǧ; g = y initially in stressed syllables, ġ; o = older English u, ȯ; OF. u = ü, short and long, ů. Medial or final e, when certainly silent, is sometimes marked ę.
